Cushing's plant is new—it's 1935 from stem to stern. We thought it about time that today's motor fuels caught up with today's motor cars. We never believed gasoline had to be doped—and we're anti-narcotic now, so rather than sell you an artificially pep'ed-up product we've built a plant that's turning out an undoped high octane gasoline that's a world beater—

CUSHING'S A NEW AND SAFER ANTI-KNOCK MOTOR FUEL! NOT JUST ANOTHER GASOLINE.

There's been plenty of new gasoline, and CUSHING'S not making claims we can't deliver—so we've guaranteed our new high octane anti-knock motor fuel, because we know it's pure undoped power. We could have offered you an artificially pep'ed up product—instead we have spent thousands of dollars on a new plant to bring you a gasoline that's as new as today's cars. It stands on its own merits and needs no dangerous chemicals—hence you can offer it to your customers without doubt or fear.

NEW! WE'LL SAY CUSHING'S GASOLINE IS AS NEW AS TODAY'S CARS.

WHAT DO YOU MEAN ANTI-KNOCK! WITH CUSHING'S NEW GASOLINE WE NOT ONLY MEAN IT—WE GUARANTEE IT!

Cushing's new gasoline needs no BEWARE signs. It's safe.

You don't want to endanger the life of your customers—you DO when you use a poisonously doped gasoline, but you DON'T when you offer them Cushing's.

When we saw the handwriting on the wall we might have gone out of the room and mixed up a doped-up gasoline—but we could have hardly put the name CUSHING on such a product, so we have spent thousands of dollars on a new plant to bring you a high octane and anti-knock motor fuel so good we guarantee it.

But that's the only way we know how to give you a gasoline of real performance—not artificially doped-up.

It stands on its own merits, and needs no dangerous chemicals.

PAR. 6. The statements above set forth, together with others of similar import and effect serve as representations by respondent and have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and have misled and deceived, purchasers and prospective purchasers of gasoline treated with tetraethyl lead or "Ethyl" by leading them to believe:

1. That gasoline other than respondent's is not safe;
2. That gasoline which contains tetraethyl lead or "Ethyl" is not safe;
3. That gasoline to which a chemical has been added for the purpose of eliminating "knock" is dangerous to the life or health of the purchaser or user thereof;
4. That gasoline to which chemicals have been added is poisonous, but that the gasoline of respondent is not;
5. That gasoline to which a chemical has been added to increase its power and to eliminate "knock" is doped, and therefore unsafe for use by the consuming public, whereas the gasoline of the respondent is superior to chemically treated gasoline;

6. That gasoline treated with tetraethyl lead or "Ethyl," which is the only chemical used commercially for admixture with gasoline to eliminate "knock" and to increase its power, is a dangerous dope, a narcotic, and injurious to the life or health of purchasers, users and the general public;

7. That all of respondent's gasoline is made by a new process;

8. That all of respondent's gasoline is made by the "cracking" process;

9. That gasoline made by the "cracking" process is superior to gasoline to which "Ethyl" or tetraethyl lead has been added.

PAR. 7. In truth and in fact, the treatment of "straight run" or "ordinary" gasoline, as manufactured commercially, either by the distillation or skimming method, or by the cracking method, by adding thereto tetraethyl lead or "Ethyl," results in the creation of a high grade anti-knock gasoline, commonly known as "Ethyl" gasoline, which functions in an exceedingly high and efficient manner as fuel for gasoline motors. Said "Ethyl" gasoline is entirely safe to the health of persons operating said motors, and to the public in general, when used as a motor fuel, and is not narcotic in its effect, a poisonous dope, or dangerous to the life or health of a customer, purchaser, user, or the general public.

In truth and in fact only about one-third of the gasoline produced by the respondent is made by the new cracking process, or by its new plant or refinery, or by a new addition to an old refinery, the balance being made by straight distillation, one of the oldest processes known in the petroleum refining industry.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid false, misleading, and unfairly disparaging representations, so made by respondent in its advertising, as above described, have had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to mislead, and have misled and deceived retailers, jobbers, and wholesalers of gasoline and a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public, into the false and erroneous belief that said statements and representations, or any of them as set forth in paragraph 5 are true, and that gasoline treated with tetraethyl lead or other chemicals to increase its power or to eliminate "knock," is undesirable, inefficient, doped, harmful, poisonous, narcotic in its effect, and dangerous to the health or life of customers, when used for the purpose for which gasoline motor fuel is intended; and that all of the gasoline manufactured by respondent is high test, or high octane gasoline obtained by a new "cracking" process which is safe and is superior to "Ethyl" gasoline or gasoline to which tetraethyl lead has been added, or to straight run gasoline.

Further, said false and misleading statements and representations have the tendency and capacity to induce the public to purchase gasoline not so chemically treated, in and because of such erroneous beliefs, brought about as hereinabove set out, and to unfairly divert trade to the sellers of straight or ordinary gasoline and to the sellers of "cracked" gasoline, including the respondent, and its customers, from sellers of gasoline treated with tetraethyl lead or "Ethyl" to increase its efficiency as a motor fuel. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 9. Gasoline of sundry competitors of respondent likewise engaged in commerce as herein set out who use both the "distillation" and "cracking" processes in the manufacture of their products, is and has been sold and distributed to the consuming public in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia in competition with respondent's gasoline but without such false and fictitious representations as to the "newness" of their product and without falsely representing that all of their gasoline is "high test" or "high octane" or superior to all other gasoline, when such is not the case, and without unfairly disparaging the products of manufacturers of gasoline who add tetraethyl lead or "Ethyl" to their product for the purpose of eliminating "knock" and increasing its power.

PAR. 10. The above and foregoing acts, practices and representations of the respondent, have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, as aforesaid, and have been and are unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on May 28, 1936 issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, Cushing Refining & Gasoline Co., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On June 19, 1936, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent's counsel, John B. Dudley, and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved and accepted, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Cushing Refining & Gasoline Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business pursuant to the laws of the State of Oklahoma, having its office and principal place of business in Cushing, Okla., with a branch office at Minneapolis, Minn., and refineries at Cushing and Blackwell, Okla. It is now, and for more than one year last past has been engaged in the business of refining crude petroleum and manufacturing therefrom gasoline, and in the sale of said gasoline in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. It ships said products, when sold, to the purchasers thereof, some located in the State of Oklahoma, and others located in various other States of the United States, or in States other than the State from which shipment is made, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than one year last past, a constant current of trade and commerce by respondent in its aforesaid products.

PAR. 2. Certain other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals have been, and are now, likewise engaged in the manufacture and sale of gasoline in commerce, as described in paragraph 1 hereof. Some of said gasoline is refined by what is known in the trade as the "skimming" or "distillation" process, and is called "straight run" or "ordinary" gasoline. Other types of said gasoline are refined by the "cracking" method, a new process of refining gasoline which, when applied to the proper grade of crude petroleum may be made to extract a higher grade of gasoline than is usually obtained by the "skimming" or "distillation" method. Most refineries use both the "cracking" and "distillation" process as the "cracking" process will extract additional gasoline from crude petroleum previously treated by other processes. Others are engaged in manufacturing a certain type of gasoline known as "ETHYL" gasoline, which consists of gasoline made by any of the above methods, to which a chemical known as tetraethyl lead or "ETHYL" has been added for the purpose of eliminating knock or detonation which is encountered in high compression motors when driven by the usual straight run gasoline. Some of the gasoline manufactured by the "cracking" method is sufficiently high in grade without the addition of tetraethyl lead to accomplish a result similar to that produced by "ETHYL" gasoline. The quality or grade of gasoline in this respect is susceptible of measurement and determination. This standard of measurement is expressed in terms of octane value, and the gasoline having the highest octane rating is considered by the trade, and the purchasing public, to be the best and commands a higher price or premium accordingly. Tetraethyl lead, or "ETHYL" fluid, unadulterated, is poisonous, but when used in the very limited quantity necessary or permitted in gasoline, as sold to the public for motor fuel, is entirely safe and no more poisonous or dangerous than any other motor gasoline. Tetraethyl lead or "ETHYL" has been added, to some extent, to most of the gasoline now sold in the United States.

Respondent, prior to the filing of the complaint in this proceeding, never manufactured or sold gasoline to which tetraethyl lead or "ETHYL" had been added, but during the summer of 1936, and after the filing of the complaint herein, commenced to manufacture gasoline so treated with tetraethyl lead, which it now sells to dealers and consumers.

PAR. 3. In the course of its business, respondent is now, and has been, in substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, with other corporations, and with partnerships and individuals engaged in manufacturing, distributing, and selling gasoline produced by any of the methods hereinbefore named. All of the manufacturers and sellers of the several types of gasoline above described are and have been in competition in commerce as hereinabove set out, between and among themselves, as to each and all of the said types of gasoline.

PAR. 4. In such competition between the sellers of ETHYL gasoline and the sellers of gasoline to which no tetraethyl lead or ETHYL has been added, one of the controlling influences on the purchasing public, is the proper opinion as to the comparative value, desirability, effectiveness and safety of ETHYL gasoline, as compared with either “ordinary,” “straight run” gasoline or “cracked” gasoline to none of which ETHYL has been added.

Findings

24 F. T. C.

So-called ETHYL gasoline has been widely used in the United States for the last ten years, and its desirability and effectiveness in increasing power and eliminating “knock” is well known and understood by the purchasing public, and it has been found to be entirely safe when used as a motor fuel, the use for which it is intended. It is no more poisonous or dangerous than any other form of gasoline used for that purpose. Notices are placed on all gasoline pumps from which ETHYL gasoline is sold, in order that purchasers may be warned not to use it for cleaning or other purposes.

The respondent, as a manufacturer and seller of gasoline which, prior to the filing of the complaint in this proceeding, did not contain tetraethyl lead or ETHYL, was interested and engaged in presenting to the purchasing public all available reasons or arguments against or tending to lessen the desirability, effectiveness and safety of gasoline treated with Tetraethyl lead or ETHYL.

The use of the said ETHYL gasoline destroys to the extent of the use thereof, the demand for or sale of “straight run” and “cracked” gasoline, such as is manufactured and sold by the respondent, and the respondent prior to filing the complaint in this proceeding, was therefore, interested in an attempt to create public sentiment adverse to the use of gasoline containing tetraethyl lead or ETHYL in order that a greater demand might exist for gasoline not so treated.

PAR. 5. Respondent distributes its said product to the ultimate purchasers or consumers thereof, largely through wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail merchants. In aid of its sales to such dealers, or ultimate dealers, for ultimate use by the consuming public, and for the purpose of creating a demand for its own products, in preference to gasoline containing chemicals such as tetraethyl or ETHYL, which, prior to filing the complaint in this proceeding, it did not manufacture or sell, respondent caused advertisements to be issued and published in newspapers, magazines, and other publications of wide circulation among the general public of the United States. These advertisements contain statements, among others, such as the following:

WHAT'S CUSHING GOT THAT'S SO NEW

Cushing's plant is new—it's 1935 from stem to stern. We thought it about time that today's motor fuels caught up with today's motor cars. We never believed gasoline had to be doped—and we're anti-narcotic now, so rather than sell you an artificially pep'ed-up product we've built a plant that's turning out an un-doped high octane gasoline that's a world beater—

CUSHING'S A NEW AND SAFER ANTI-KNOCK MOTOR FUEL! NOT JUST ANOTHER GASOLINE

There's been plenty of new gasoline, and CUSHING'S not making claims we can't deliver—so we've guaranteed our new high octane anti-knock motor fuel, because we know it's pure undoped power. We could have offered you an artificially pep'ed-up product—instead we have spent thousands of dollars on a new plant to bring you a gasoline that's as new as today's cars. It stands on its own merits and needs no dangerous chemicals—hence you can offer it to your customers without doubt or fear.

NEW! WE'LL SAY CUSHING'S GASOLINE IS AS NEW AS TODAY'S CARS.

WHAT DO YOU MEAN ANTI-KNOCK! WITH CUSHING'S NEW GASOLINE WE NOT ONLY MEAN IT—WE GUARANTEE IT!

Cushing's new gasoline needs no BEWARE signs. It's safe.

You don't want to endanger the life of your customers—you DO when you use a poisonously doped gasoline, but you DON'T when you offer them Cushing's.

When we saw the handwriting on the wall we might have gone out of the room and mixed up a doped-up gasoline—but we could have hardly put the name CUSHING on such a product, so we have spent thousands of dollars on a new plant to bring you a high octane and anti-knock motor fuel so good we guarantee it.

But that's the only way we know how to give you a gasoline of real performance—not artificially doped-up.

It stands on its own merits, and needs no dangerous chemicals.

By said means, respondent has made exaggerated statements to the general public, for the purpose of promoting the sale of its own products by lessening the consumption by the purchasing public of gasoline containing tetraethyl lead or ETHYL, which it did not manufacture, or sell prior to the summer of 1936.

PAR. 6. The statements above set forth, together with others of similar import and effect, serve to unfairly discourage the purchase of gasoline treated with tetraethyl lead or ETHYL fluid, by leading the public to believe:

1. That gasoline other than respondent's is not safe;
2. That gasoline which contains tetraethyl lead or ETHYL is not safe;
3. That gasoline to which a chemical has been added for the purpose of eliminating "knock" is dangerous to the life or health of the purchaser or user thereof;
4. That gasoline to which chemicals have been added is poisonous, but that the gasoline of respondent is not;
5. That gasoline to which a chemical has been added to increase its power and to eliminate "knock" is doped, and therefore unsafe for use by the consuming public, whereas the gasoline of the respondent is superior to chemically treated gasoline;
6. That gasoline treated with tetraethyl lead or ETHYL, which is the only or usual chemical used commercially for admixture with gasoline to eliminate "knock" and to increase its power, is a dangerous dope, a narcotic, and injurious to the life or health of purchasers, users and the general public;

7. That gasoline made by the "cracking" process is superior to gasoline to which ETHYL or tetraethyl lead has been added.

PAR. 7. The treatment of "straight run" or "ordinary" gasoline, as manufactured commercially either by the distillation or skimming method, or by the cracking method, by adding thereto tetraethyl lead or ETHYL, results in the creation of a high grade anti-knock gasoline, commonly known as ETHYL gasoline, which functions in an exceedingly high and efficient manner as fuel for gasoline motors. Said ETHYL gasoline is entirely safe to the health of persons operating said motors, and to the public in general, when used as a motor fuel, and is not narcotic in its effect, or a poisonous dope, or dangerous to the life or health of a customer, purchaser, user, or the general public.

Respondent's refineries at Blackwell and Cushing, Okla., have a daily capacity of approximately 6,200 barrels of crude oil per day by the "distillation" process. In addition to this, its plant at Cushing has a daily capacity of 2,000 barrels per day, produced by the "cracking" process. Respondent's production capacity for "cracked" gasoline is, therefore, approximately one-third of its capacity for producing "straight run" gasoline by the distillation process.

Only a portion, therefore, of the gasoline produced by the respondent is made by the cracking process, or by its new plant or refinery, or by a new addition to an old refinery, the balance and greater part, being made by straight distillation process, one of the oldest processes known in the petroleum refining industry.

PAR. 8. The aforesaid representation, made by respondent in its advertising, as above described, have the tendency to mislead, and have misled retailers, and other dealers in gasoline and a substantial portion of the purchasing public, into the erroneous beliefs that said statements and representations, or any of them, as set forth in paragraph 5 above, are true and that gasoline treated with tetraethyl lead or other chemicals to increase its power or to eliminate "knock" is undesirable, inefficient, doped, harmful, poisonous, narcotic in its effect, and dangerous to the health or life of customers when used for the purpose for which gasoline motor fuel is intended; and that all of the gasoline manufactured by respondent is high test, or high octane gasoline obtained by a new "cracking" process which is safe and is superior to ETHYL gasoline or gasoline to which tetraethyl lead has been added, or to straight run gasoline.

Further, said representations have the tendency to induce the public to purchase gasoline not so chemically treated, because of such erroneous beliefs, brought about as hereinabove set out, and to unfairly divert trade to the sellers of straight or ordinary gasoline and to the sellers of "cracked" gasoline, including the respondent, and its customers, from sellers of gasoline treated with tetraethyl lead or ETHYL. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 9. Gasoline of sundry competitors of respondents likewise engaged in commerce as herein set out who use both the "distillation" and "cracking" processes in the manufacture of their products, has been sold and distributed to the consuming public in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia in competition with respondent's gasoline but without such false and fictitious representations as to the "newness" of their product and without representing that all of their gasoline is "high test" or "high octane" or superior to all other gasoline, when such is not the case, and without unfairly disparaging the products of manufacturers of gasoline who add tetraethyl lead or ETHYL to their product for the purpose of eliminating "knock" and increasing its power.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Cushing Refining & Gasoline Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, and the agreed stipulation of facts entered into between the respondent herein, Cushing Refining & Gasoline Co., by its attorney of record, and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Cushing Refining & Gasoline Co., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of its gasoline in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That gasoline to which tetraethyl lead, or ETHYL fluid has been added for the purpose of processing said gasoline, is a narcotic or has narcotic effects, is "doped up" or is poisonous, unsafe or dangerous to the life or health of persons using the same for motor fuel;

2. Using any language calculated to intimate or suggest that gasoline treated with tetraethyl lead or ETHYL fluid is unsafe for sale to or use by the public as a motor fuel, in the manner prescribed by law;

3. That all of the gasoline produced by it is manufactured by the "cracking" process;

4. That all of the gasoline produced by it is made by a new process and consists of what is commonly known as "high test," "high octane" or "anti knock" gasoline and that all of its gasoline is superior as motor fuel to that type of gasoline commonly known as "ETHYL" gasoline;

5. That gasoline made by the "cracking" process is superior as a motor fuel to gasoline of equal octane value to which tetraethyl lead or "ETHYL" has been added.

It is hereby further ordered, That the respondent Cushing Refining & Gasoline Co., a corporation, shall within 60 days from the date of the serving upon it of this order, file with the Commission, its report in writing stating the manner and form in which it shall have complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2924. Complaint, Sept. 17, 1936—Decision, Feb. 17, 1937

Where an individual, engaged in preparation of cleaning fluid, and offer and sale thereof—

Caused his trade name, including words "Leev-No-Ring" to appear on labels affixed to containers of his product, and featured same in circulars, folders, and other forms of printed matter published and circulated by him among the general public, and represented that his said fluids could be used safely and without injury to the most delicate fabrics or materials, and would remove all grease spots instantly and without injury to such fabrics, and would not in any instance leave a ring, facts being his said product, used on fabrics dyed with non-fast or fugitive dyes, did affect colors thereof by causing same to bleed or run, and in case of certain fabrics did leave appearance of a mark or ring thereon;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers thereof into belief that said fluids could be used safely and without injury and with results claimed therefor, as above set forth, and to induce purchase of his said products in such erroneous beliefs, and with effect of thereby diverting trade to him from competitors, including those who, as manufacturers, compounders, sellers, and distributors of like and similar products, truthfully advertise and represent the nature, merit, and value of their respective products, or do not advertise and represent that the same have merit or value which they do not possess; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Joseph Lewin, hereinafter referred to as respondent, is an individual trading as Leev-No-Ring Chemical Company, having his office and principal place of business located at 207 West 17th Street, in the city of New York, in the State of New York. Respondent for more than one year last past has been, and still is, engaged in the preparation of Cleaning Fluids and offering said products for sale and selling the same, in commerce between the State of New York and the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. When said products are sold, respondent transports or causes the same to be transported from his place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. There has been for more than one year last past, and still is, a constant current of trade and commerce in said products so compounded by respondent, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been in substantial competition with other individuals, and with partnerships, corporations, and firms engaged in the manufacture and compounding of like and similar products and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling his cleaning fluids and for the purpose of creating a demand upon the part of the consuming public for said products, adopted as and for a trade name under which to carry on business the words, "Leev-No-Ring Chemical Company." Respondent causes and for more than one year last past has caused said trade name containing the hyphenated words "Leev-No-Ring" to appear on labels affixed to the containers of his products. Said trade name is also featured in circulars, folders, and other forms of printed matter relating to such products which respondent issues, publishes, and circulates and has issued, published, and circulated to and among the general public of the United States. The respondent makes and has made to the general public many other unfair, false, and misleading statements with reference to the value and merits of his said products, a portion of which are as follows:

LEE-NO-RING The Perfect Cleaning Fluid NON-INJURIOUS To The Most Delicate Materials.

LEE-NO-RING is safe on silks and artificial silks as well as on all delicate fabrics. Dries thoroughly leaving NO-RING.

Complaint

Removes all grease spots instantly without injury to the most delicate fabric.
Will not injure the most delicate fabrics.

PAR. 3. The statements and representations set forth in paragraph 2 hereof have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of respondent's products into the belief:

(a) That the respondent's cleaning fluids can be used safely and without injury to the most delicate fabrics or materials;

(b) That respondent's cleaning fluids when used will remove all grease spots instantly without injury to the most delicate fabrics;

(c) That the respondent's cleaning fluids when used will not in any instance leave a ring;

whereas, in truth and in fact, respondent's said products when used on fabrics dyed with certain kinds of dye, such as non-fast or fugitive dyes, does affect the colors of such fabrics by causing the same to bleed or run. Nor is it true, as represented, that the use of respondent's said products on certain fabrics does not result in the appearance of a mark or ring on such fabrics. In truth and in fact, in either or in both of these ways such fabrics are in fact injured by the use of respondent's said products thereon.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of the respondent in interstate commerce manufacturers, compounders, and distributors of like and similar products who truthfully advertise and represent the nature, merit, and value of their respective products. There are also among such competitors of the respondent manufacturers compounders and distributors of like and similar products who do not advertise and otherwise represent that such products have merit or value which they do not have.

PAR. 5. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous beliefs described in paragraph 3 hereof and into the purchase of respondent's products in such beliefs. Thereby trade is diverted by respondent from respondent's competitors in interstate commerce referred to in paragraph 4 and as a consequence thereof substantial injury is done by respondent to competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 6. Said acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on September 17, 1936, issued, and on September 21, 1936, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Joseph Lewin, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Joseph Lewin, hereinafter referred to as respondent, is an individual trading as Leev-No-Ring Chemical Company. His office and principal place of business is located at 207 West 17th Street, in the city of New York, in the State of New York. For more than one year last past he has been, and still is, doing business under the name and style of Leev-No-Ring Chemical Company. In the operation of this business he has been and is engaged in the preparation of cleaning fluids and offers and has offered said products for sale and sells same in commerce between the State of New York and the several States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

When said products are sold, respondent transports or causes the same to be transported from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. There has been for more than one year last past, and there still is, a constant current of trade and commerce in said products so compounded by respondent, between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, in substantial competition with other individuals, and with partnerships, corporations, and firms engaged in the manufacture and compounding of like and similar products and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling his cleaning fluids and for the purpose of creating a demand upon the part of the consuming public for said products, adopted as and for a trade name under which to carry on business the words, "Leev-No-Ring Chemical Company." Respondent causes and for more than one year last past has caused said trade name containing the hyphenated words "Leev-No-Ring" to appear on labels affixed to the containers of his product. Said trade name is also featured in circulars, folders, and other forms of printed matter relating to such products which respondent issues, publishes and circulates and has issued, published, and circulated to and among the general public of the United States. The respondent makes and has made to the general public many other deceptive and misleading statements with reference to the value and merits of his said products. Among the claims thus advertised by respondent for the purpose of inducing members of the public to purchase his products, are the following:

LEE-V-NO-RING The Perfect Cleaning Fluid NON-INJURIOUS To The Most Delicate Materials.

LEE-V-NO-RING is safe on silks and artificial silks as well as on all delicate fabrics. Dries thoroughly leaving NO-RING.

Removes all grease spots instantly without injury to the most delicate fabric.

Will not injure the most delicate fabrics.

PAR. 3. The statements and representations set forth in paragraph 2 hereof have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of respondent's products into the belief:

(a) That the respondent's cleaning fluids can be used safely and without injury to the most delicate fabrics or materials;

(b) That respondent's cleaning fluids when used will remove all grease spots instantly without injury to the most delicate fabrics;

(c) That the respondent's cleaning fluids when used will not in any instance leave a ring;

In truth and in fact, respondent's said products when used on fabrics dyed with certain kinds of dye, such as non-fast or fugitive dyes, does affect the colors of such fabrics by causing the same to bleed or run. Nor is it true, as represented, that the use of respondent's said products on certain fabrics does not result in the appearance of a mark or ring on such fabrics. In truth and in fact, in either or in both of these ways such fabrics are in fact injured by the use of respondent's said products thereon.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of the respondent in commerce as herein set out, manufacturers, compounders, sellers and distributors of like and similar products who truthfully advertise and represent the nature, merit, and value of their respective products. There are also among such competitors of the respondent, manufacturers, compounders, sellers and distributors of like and similar products who do not advertise and otherwise represent that such products have merit or value which they do not have.

PAR. 5. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous beliefs described in paragraph 3 hereof and into the purchase of respondent's products in such beliefs. Thereby trade is diverted by respondent from respondent's competitors in interstate commerce referred to in paragraph 4 and as a consequence thereof substantial injury is done by respondent to competition in interstate commerce.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Joseph Lewin, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer filed herein, dated January 26, 1937, by respondent, admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Joseph Lewin, trading as Leev-No-Ring Chemical Company, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of his cleaning fluids in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing through the use of the phrase "Leev-No-Ring" in its trade name, on its stationery, advertising matter or on the labels attached to the containers in which it sells and ships its said cleaning fluid, or in any other manner by words or phrases of like import that:

(a) The respondent's cleaning fluids can be used safely and without injury to the most delicate fabrics or materials;

(b) Respondent's cleaning fluids when used will remove all grease spots instantly without injury to the most delicate fabrics;

(c) The respondent's cleaning fluids when used will not in any instance leave a ring;

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
GULF COAST OIL COMPANY OF MISSISSIPPI, INC., AND
ANTHONY PACIERA

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2860. Complaint, June 30, 1936—Decision, Mar. 3, 1937

Where a corporation, long engaged in sale and distribution of gasoline and motor oils in bulk to retail dealers for resale and to consumers for use in States of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama, had built up, as Gulf Refining Company, a wide reputation and extensive good-will among users of its products, and said products were well and favorably known to public generally, and sign, in form of metal disk colored orange and bearing the one word "Gulf" in large black or dark blue shaded letters, and usually suspended in front of stations selling its products and on its equipment generally, constituted special feature of its advertising, used to great advantage for many years, and prospective customers had long been urged, through various mediums, to buy "At the Sign of The Orange Disk", and printed reproduction thereof was used to identify all its products and was painted upon its tanks, trucks and other equipment in letters of same character and color as those on the disk itself, and where its said products included brands designated by it as "Gulf Supreme Motor Oil" and "Gulf-pride Oil", and said names had long been featured by it in all forms of its advertising, at great expense, and were definitely associated with and formed an important part of general public's conception of it and its products, as similarly had been featured and was associated, etc., name of its "Gulf No-Nox Ethyl," under and by which name it designated "ethyl" gas composed of mixture of gasoline and tetraethyl lead, in common with other competitors who used word "ethyl" as part of their brand names under which they offered their respective "ethyl," 75 octane, or better, premium, and well and favorably known gasolines to consuming public; and thereafter a corporate competitor engaged in sale and distribution of gasoline and motor oils to dealers purchasing in bulk for resale and to consumers for use, and in supplying filling stations which it operated in Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama in substantial competition with said first-named corporation and with others similarly engaged, and the president of said corporate competitor, in active charge of its affairs and controller and director of all its policies and business operations, and originator of the various forms of advertising and business methods adopted by such competitor—

- (a) Featured in all of said competitor's display advertising and on signs at various of its stations and on gasoline pumps, trucks, and other equipment, word "Gulf," either alone or in printed letters substantially larger than those of other words in connection with which used, and invariably in shaded letters of same type and color, substantially, as those used by said first-named corporation in its printing and use of word "Gulf," and extensively advertised as "Gulf Supreme Gasoline" one brand, and in its advertising thereof on signs posted in and about the various filling stations, illuminated at night, frequently, featured word "Gulf," with letters thereof twice as large as other two words, and word "Supreme" in "quotations," and, at times, with its own corporate name of "Gulf Coast Oil Company of Mississippi" in letters about one-third size of words "Supreme" and "Gasoline," and word "Gulf" in same type and coloring as those used by said first-named corporation, and advertised said "Gulf Supreme Gasoline" through radio broadcast programs capable, in case of some, of being heard over entire United States, without mention, as a rule, of its own corporate name in course thereof, in which listeners were advised of location of stations at which its said products might be obtained, and designated and advertised extensively in newspapers of interstate circulation and in other ways its so-called "Gulf Ether Gasoline," name of which was featured on gasoline pumps located at its various stations in aforesaid States, and made use of terms "Pride of the People" and "Gulf 'Pride' Motor Oil" in designation and advertisement of certain oils sold by it, notwithstanding fact neither Gulf Refining Company nor Ethyl Gasoline Corporation had given their permission to said competitor and its aforesaid president to use terms "Gulf," "Gulf Supreme Motor Oil," "Gulfpride Oil," "Gulf No-Nox Ethyl Gasoline" or "Ether" in designating the various gasoline and motor oil products of said corporate competitor and its said president, manager and controller;

With capacity and tendency, by reason of said acts and practices of said corporate competitor and its said president in imitating and simulating products of said first-named corporation and of other distributors selling various types of "Ethyl" gasoline, through such colorable imitations and simulations of aforesaid trade names and brand names for various gasolines and motor oils sold by said first-named corporation over a period of many years, and, in aforesaid use of term "Ether," of registered trade name "Ethyl" of said Ethyl Gasoline Corporation and its various licensees, to confuse and mislead trade and public generally with respect to nature, quality, and origin of various products sold by such corporate competitor, and with result that, under ordinary conditions prevailing in usual course of business in sale of gasolines and motor oils, members of public might be induced, by reason of such simulation and imitation of trade names and trade marks, to buy said corporate competitor's gasoline, motor oil and other products as and for such products distributed and sold by said first-named corporation, its agents and dealers, or as and for gasoline distributed by competitors of it and licensees of said Ethyl Gasoline Corporation; and

(b) Represented, in all of their advertising, radio broadcasts, newspaper advertising, and otherwise, that said corporate competitor's "Gulf Ether Gasoline" tested 70 octanes and was equivalent to high test premium gasoline and to "Ethyl" gasoline for which premium is charged, facts being its said product, principal type of gasoline eventually sold by it, was produced by adding small quantities of commercial ether to ordinary gasoline, and that the small and insignificant amount of ether added did not affect gasoline involved to any noticeable extent and was not beneficial thereto and did not increase value, potency or power thereof, make same any more beneficial to automobile motors, or decrease tendency thereof to knock or detonate, and was not comparable in efficiency to gasoline to which tetraethyl lead has been added in such quantities as to raise octane rating thereof to 75, but, on contrary, disclosed ratings ranging, at different times and tests, from 66 to 68 or 69;

Complaint

24 F. T. C.

With tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous beliefs that said representations were true and that said "Gulf Ether Gasoline" was comparable in value to and gave equal performance with various types of high test premium gasoline and ethyl gasoline, and with result, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by such acts and representations, that a number of the consuming public purchased a substantial volume of said "Gulf Ether Gasoline" and trade was unfairly diverted to said corporate competitor and its aforesaid president and manager from competitors engaged in business of distributing and selling various types of high test premium and ethyl gasolines, and who truthfully advertise their products, and from competitors engaged in distribution and sale of ordinary grades of gasoline who truthfully advertise, as to both quality and efficiency of performance, their respective products:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiner.

Mr. J. T. Welch for the Commission.

Titche & Titche, of New Orleans, La., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Gulf Coast Oil Company of Mississippi, Inc., a corporation, and Anthony Paciera, an individual, hereinafter designated as respondents, are now, and have been, using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating the charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Gulf Coast Oil Company of Mississippi, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Mississippi, with its principal office and place of business at 3331 St. Charles Avenue, in the city of New Orleans, State of Louisiana. Respondent, Anthony Paciera, residing in the city of New Orleans, State of Louisiana, is the president of the respondent corporation and is actively in charge of said corporation and directs and controls all of its policies and operations. He is the originator of the various forms of advertising and business methods which have been adopted and followed by the respondent corporation. Respondents are now, and have been since on or about January 1, 1933, engaged in the business of selling and distributing gasoline, kerosene, motor oil, and similar products, in bulk to dealers purchasing for resale and to consumers for use.

PAR. 2. Said respondents, being engaged in business as aforesaid, cause said gasoline, kerosene, and motor oil, when sold, to be transported from their office and principal place of business, or from their storage tanks located in the State of Louisiana, to purchasers thereof located at various points in other States of the United States. There is now, and has been at all times since the organization of respondent corporation, a constant current of trade and commerce in said gasoline, kerosene and motor oil, so distributed and sold by the respondents, between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are now, and have been, in substantial competition with other corporations, firms, and individuals, likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling gasoline, kerosene and motor oil, in bulk to retail dealers for resale and to consumers for use, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. During all the time since the organization and incorporation of respondent corporation, and for many years prior thereto, the Gulf Refining Company, a corporation, maintaining its headquarters in Pittsburgh, State of Pennsylvania, and one of the competitors referred to in paragraph 3 hereof, has been engaged in the distribution and sale of gasoline, kerosene and motor oil, in bulk to retail dealers for resale and to consumers for use, particularly in the States of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama. Since its organization, and for a period of more than thirty years, said Gulf Refining Company has built up a wide reputation and extensive good-will among the users of the products it sells and said products are well known to the public generally.

Early in its business career, the Gulf Refining Company adopted the colors yellow or orange as the colors of its plants and equipment generally, including its filling stations, some of which are owned by it, some of which are merely operated by it, and some of which merely sell its products. The uniform color of its stations and equipment became identified with the company and grew to be an important part of its plan of advertising. A special feature of its advertising that has been used to great advantage is a sign, in the form of a metal disk, colored orange and bearing the one word "GULF" in black or dark blue shaded letters. The sign is usually suspended in front of the stations selling the products of the company and prospective customers have been urged through various mediums, over a period of many years, to buy—"At the Sign of the Orange Disk." The printed reproduction of the disk is the trade-mark used to identify all the products of the company and is painted upon its tanks, trucks and other equipment. For a period of at least ten years, all of the storage tanks, gasoline pumps, tank trucks, and the woodwork of the filling stations owned by the company, have been painted a uniform shade of orange, the same as that of the disk above referred to and described. The petroleum products distributed and sold by the Gulf Refining Company are certain brands of gasoline and motor oil designated by it as "Gulf Supreme Motor Oil," "Gulfpride Oil," "Gulf Ethyl Gasoline," and "No-Nox Ethyl Gasoline." These products, and the names by which they are designated, have for a long time past, and are now, featured by the company in all forms of its advertising and are definitely associated with and form an important part of the general public's conception of the Gulf Refining Company and its products.

24 F. T. C.

The gasoline sold by the Gulf Refining Company under the names "Gulf Ethyl Gasoline" and "No-Nox Ethyl Gasoline" are composed of a mixture of ordinary gasoline and tetraethyl lead. Tetraethyl lead is added to the ordinary gasoline for the purpose of increasing the efficiency of such ordinary gasoline as a fuel for modern type motors.

Gasoline to which tetraethyl lead has been added is also extensively advertised and sold by other competitors of the respondents and the use of the word "Ethyl" in advertising and designating said gasoline products, to which tetraethyl lead has been added, forms a distinctive and valuable advertising asset. The superior quality of, and the superior performance given by, various types of "Ethyl" gasoline, are well known to, and appreciated by, the consuming public generally.

PAR. 5. Since about January 1, 1933, the respondents have caused the corporate respondent's stations, gasoline pumps, tank trucks, and other equipment, to be painted the same shade of orange color as that used by the Gulf Refining Company over a period of many years, as herein set out in paragraph 4. Respondents have also featured, and continue to feature, in all of the corporate respondent's display advertising, the word "GULF," either alone or in print substantially larger than that of the other words in connection with which it is used. The word is written always in shaded letters of the same type and is printed in black or deep blue colors substantially the same as the letters and colors used, as herein set out, by said Gulf Refining Company. Respondents have also made use of an orange colored disk similar to that described as having been used by the Gulf Refining Company for many years, as part of corporate respondent's equipment, in their stations and have their trade-mark or insignia painted on their pumps, tank trucks, and other equipment. This disk bears printed thereon in prominent letters the one word "GULF," written in letters similar to those described with reference to the respondents' use of the same word on all of their other equipment. Respondents have also made use of a disk, the upper half of which disk is colored the same shade of orange as that used by the Gulf Refining Company and the lower half colored black.

Respondents have also extensively advertised one brand of the corporate respondent's gasoline products as "Gulf Supreme Gasoline." The name of this brand of gasoline is featured on signs posted in and about the various filling stations and is painted on the gasoline pumps and other equipment. The word "Supreme" on these signs is emphasized generally by enclosing the said word in quotation marks. The advertising of this brand of gasoline has been, and now is, conducted further by means of radio broadcasts from stations of sufficient power to carry the programs emanating therefrom to, into and through States of the United States other than the State of Louisiana, so as to be received and heard by radio listeners residing in said other States. In all or in some of said broadcasts, the corporate respondent's name is not mentioned. The broadcast is devoted entirely to advertising the brand "Gulf Supreme Gasoline" and calling attention to the location of gasoline stations at which it may be obtained. On signs prominently displayed at all of its stations, the corporate respondent has made use of the word "GULF" in letters much larger than all other letters on the sign and has used the words "Supreme Gasoline" in letters also larger than the remaining words on the sign. The respondents' corporate name, Gulf Coast Oil Company of Mississippi, Inc., is displayed on said sign in letters considerably smaller and less prominently displayed than the other words herein referred to.

One of the principal types of gasoline sold by the corporate respondent is designated and advertised extensively as "Gulf Ether Gasoline." The gasoline pumps at the corporate respondent's various stations are painted the uniform orange color similar to that used by the Gulf Refining Company with the following words printed thereon—"Gulf Ether Gasoline." The "Gulf Ether Gasoline" is produced by adding a small quantity of ether to a tank car of approximately 8,000 gallons of ordinary gasoline. The amount of ether added to said gasoline forms a small and insignificant part of the total volume of said gasoline when mixed and is not added in sufficient quantities to materially or substantially affect said gasoline in any beneficial manner.

Respondents sell the gasoline designated by them as "Gulf Ether Gasoline" as and for "Ethyl Gasoline," though said gasoline does not perform with the same efficiency as gasoline to which tetraethyl lead has been added, as herein set out in paragraph 4, and is inferior in quality and in performance to "Gulf Ethyl Gasoline" and "Gulf No-Nox Ethyl Gasoline." The word "ether" when used in conjunction with the words "Gulf" and "Gasoline" is a colorable imitation and simulation of the term "Ethyl Gasoline" as rightfully used by many of the competitors of the respondents.

The respondents have also made use of the terms "Pride of the People" and "Gulf 'Pride' motor oil" to designate types of motor oil sold by the corporate respondent. Signs and equipment, including oil containers, oil pumps, tank wagons, and other equipment, display the term "Gulf Coast Oil Company—Pride of the People." Certain of the corporate respondent's tank wagons also display, printed in large letters thereon, the words "Gulf Pride Oil Company." Respondents have also advertised certain of their motor oil products as "Gulf 'Pride' motor oil" in newspapers of general circulation throughout the various States of the United States.

PAR. 6. The Gulf Refining Company has spent large sums of money in painting all of its stations, pumps, tank trucks, and other equipment, a uniform shade of orange and in extensively advertising, through newspapers, advertising booklets, radio broadcasts, and through other advertising media, its products such as "Gulf Supreme Motor Oil," "Gulfpride Oil," "Gulf Ethyl Gasoline," and "No-Nox Ethyl Gasoline." All of said terms and brand names, and said orange color scheme, are well and favorably known to the purchasing public and are associated with the equipment and products of said Gulf Refining Company by said purchasing public and form assets of great value to it. It has neither given its permission to the respondents for the use of said color scheme in painting stations, pumps, tank trucks, or other equipment, nor has it given its consent to the use of the terms "Gulf Supreme Motor Oil," "Gulfpride Oil," "Gulf Ethyl Gasoline," and "No-Nox Ethyl Gasoline" in designating the respondent's various gasoline and motor oil products.

The use by the respondents of said orange color scheme in painting their stations, pumps, tank trucks, and other equipment, and the use of the terms or brand names "Gulf," "Gulf Supreme Gasoline," "Gulf Ether Gasoline," "Pride of the People," "Gulf Coast Motor Oil," "Gulf Pride Oil Company," and "Gulf 'Pride' Motor Oil," are such as to be colorable imitation and simulations of the color scheme adopted and used over a period of many years by the Gulf Refining

Complaint

Company and of the products advertised and sold by the Gulf Refining Company over a like period.

PAR. 7. The acts and practices of the respondents, as hereinabove detailed, are such as to cause the corporate respondent's stations, pumps, tank trucks, and other equipment, to be imitations and simulations, in many particulars, of the stations, pumps, tank trucks, and other equipment, of the Gulf Refining Company and are of such a character as to cause the corporate respondent's products to imitate and simulate the products of the Gulf Refining Company and other competitors of the respondents selling various types of ethyl gasoline. The acts and practices of the respondents, and their imitation of the equipment and products of their competitors, have the capacity and tendency to confuse, deceive and mislead the trade and the public generally, under the ordinary conditions prevailing in the usual course of business, in the sale of gasoline, motor oil and similar products, and as a result thereof members of the trade and of the public may be and they are induced, by reason of such imitation and simulation, to buy the corporate respondent's gasoline, motor oil, and other products, in the belief that they are purchasing gasoline, motor oil, and other products, distributed and sold by the Gulf Refining Company, its agents and vendees, and by other competitors of the respondents. As a result thereof, trade has been unfairly diverted from respondents' competitors and from dealers in the products of respondents' competitors, to the respondents and to the dealers in their products, all to the injury of the public and to the injury of competition, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 8. Various types of gasoline perform with varying degrees of efficiency. The quality or grade of gasoline, with respect to eliminating knocking or "detonation," is susceptible of measurement and determination. This standard of measurement is expressed in terms of octane value. The gasoline having the highest octane rating is considered by the trade, and the purchasing public, to be the best and commands a higher price or premium accordingly.

Gasolines to which tetraethyl lead is added, and which are sold to the trade and public as ethyl gasoline, have an octane rating of not less than 75.

The respondents, in all of their advertising, radio broadcasts, newspapers, and otherwise, represent that "Gulf Ether Gasoline" tests 70 octane and is equivalent to high-test premium gasoline and to ethyl gasoline for which a premium is charged. In truth and in fact, respondents' "Gulf Ether Gasoline" does not test 70 octane and is not comparable to either ethyl gasoline or other high-test premium gasolines in performance and in eliminating or reducing knocking and detonation. The amount of ether contained in respondent corporation's "Gulf Ether Gasoline" is so small as to not materially improve either the starting ability or to appreciably affect the detonating tendency of the base gasoline to which the ether is added. The ether added to the respondents' gasoline does not materially contribute in any way so as to increase the efficiency of the performance of such gasoline when used.

PAR. 9. The false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondents, with reference to the quality of the corporate respondent's "Gulf Ether Gasoline" and its effectiveness in use, as hereinabove set out, in offering for sale and selling said "Gulf Ether Gasoline," were, and are, calculated to, and had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true, and that said "Gulf Ether Gasoline" is comparable in value to and gives equal performance with, various types of high-test gasolines and ethyl gasoline. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the acts and representations of the respondents, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of corporate respondent's "Gulf Ether Gasoline" with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondents from competitors engaged in the business of distributing and selling various types of high-test gasolines and ethyl gasolines, and who truthfully advertise their products, and also from competitors engaged in the distribution and sale of ordinary grades of gasoline, who truthfully advertise their respective products, both as to quality and efficiency of performance. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been, and is now being, done by respondents in competition, in commerce among and between the various states.

PAR. 10. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondents have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

mission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on June 30, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Gulf Coast Oil Company of Mississippi, Inc., and Anthony Paciera, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by J. T. Welch, attorney for the Commission, before John J. Keenan, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Bernard Titche, Jr., attorney for the respondents; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, on February 17, 1937, the respondents filed a motion for permission to withdraw the answer theretofore filed and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all of the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure. The Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion, and said substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, testimony and other evidence and said substitute answer and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Gulf Coast Oil Company of Mississippi, is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of Mississippi. Its principal office and place of business is located at 3331 St. Charles Avenue, in the city of New Orleans, La. Anthony Paciera is a resident of the city of New Orleans, La., and is president of the corporate respondent. He is actively in charge of its affairs and directs and controls all of its policies and business operations. He is the originator of the various forms of advertising and business methods which have been adopted and followed by the corporate respondent. Since about January 1, 1933, the respondents have been continuously engaged in the business of selling and distributing gasoline and motor oils both to dealers purchasing in bulk for resale and to consumers for use. The present customers of the corporate respondent who purchase these products for resale to the consuming public are: Hospital Grocery, Gulfport, Miss.; Smith Brothers, Landon, Miss.; and Weider Service Station, Ocean Springs, Miss. The corporate respondent also operates a number of automobile service stations, commonly known as filling stations, in the city of New Orleans, La., and in ten or fifteen other cities or towns in that State. It also operates stations in the cities of Biloxi, St. Louis, Picayune, Poplarville, and Hattiesburg in the State of Mississippi, and in the cities of Mobile and Birmingham in the State of Alabama.

PAR. 2. The corporate respondent causes said gasoline and motor oils, when sold, to be transported from its office and principal place of business, or from its storage tanks located in the State of Louisiana, or from the refinery or other seller from whom it purchases said products, to the purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of Louisiana or other than the State of origin of said shipment. When dealers, purchasing for resale, order gasoline or motor oils from the corporate respondent, said products are delivered to said purchasers from the corporate respondent's storage tanks located in the State of Louisiana by trucks owned and operated by the corporate respondent. The total business done by the corporate respondent with dealers purchasing for resale amounts to approximately $1,000 per month. The corporate respondent supplies the filling stations which it operates in the States of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama with gasoline and motor oils, either through tank trucks operated by it which withdraw gasoline from its storage tanks in the State of Louisiana and deliver said products to the respective stations, or through shipments of railroad tank car lots of said products to the respective stations. Whenever a railroad tank car shipment is made to one of said stations, the shipment originates at the refinery in the State of Louisiana and is shipped direct from such seller's place of business to the respective stations, some of which are located in Mississippi and others of which are located in the State of Alabama.

PAR. 3. The respondents are engaged in substantial competition with other corporations, firms, and individuals likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling gasoline and motor oils in bulk to retail dealers for resale and to consumers for use, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States. The respondents' monthly sale of gasoline amounts to approximately 300,000 gallons.

PAR. 4. Among the respondents' competitors is the Gulf Refining Company, a corporation, which is also engaged in the sale and distribution of gasoline and motor oils in bulk to retail dealers for resale and to consumers for use in the States of Louisiana, Mississippi, and

Findings

Alabama. Since 1905 the Gulf Refining Company has built up a wide reputation and extensive good-will among the users of the products which it sells and said products are well and favorably known to the public generally.

A special feature of its advertising that has been used to a great advantage for a period of many years is a sign in the form of a metal disk, colored orange and bearing the one word "Gulf" in large black or dark blue shaded letters. The sign is usually suspended in front of the stations selling the products of the company and on its equipment generally. Prospective customers have been urged through various mediums, over a period of many years, to buy—"At the Sign of The Orange Disk." The printed reproduction of the disk is the trade mark used to identify all the products of the company and is painted upon its tanks, trucks, and other equipment. For a period of at least ten years all of the storage tanks, gasoline pumps, tank trucks, and equipment of the filling stations owned by the company have had the word "Gulf" printed thereon in letters of the same character and color as those on the disk above referred to and described.

The petroleum products distributed and sold by the Gulf Refining Company include certain brands of gasoline and motor oils designated by it as "Gulf Supreme Motor Oil," "Gulfpride Oil," and "Gulf No-Nox Ethyl Gasoline." The names by which these products are designated have been for a long time featured by the Gulf Refining Company in all forms of its advertising at great expense and are definitely associated with and form an important part of the general public's conception of the Gulf Refining Company and its products. The gasoline designated as "Gulf No-Nox Ethyl" sold by it is composed of a mixture of ordinary gasoline and tetraethyl lead which is added to the gasoline for the purpose of increasing the efficiency of such gasoline as a fuel for modern type automobile motors. Gasoline to which tetraethyl lead has been added is also extensively advertised and sold by other competitors of the respondents who make use of the word "Ethyl," either alone or in conjunction with their own respective trade or corporate names, in advertising and designating their respective gasoline products. The use of the word "Ethyl" to describe a certain type of gasoline, to wit: ordinary gasoline to which tetraethyl lead has been added in sufficient quantities to raise the rating of said gasoline to a minimum of seventy-five (75) octanes, forms a distinctive and valuable advertising asset as the superior quality of and superior performance given by various types of "Ethyl" gasoline are well known to, and appreciated by, the consuming public generally who pay a premium to obtain gasoline of that character.

Many of respondents' competitors who sell gasoline to which tetraethyl lead has been added as described herein, make use of the word "Ethyl" as part of the brand name under which their respective gasolines are sold and they display the word "Ethyl," either alone or in conjunction with their respective trade names on the various pumps from which said gasolines are dispensed. The pumps used by the Gulf Refining Company, its agents and dealers generally in dispensing gasoline of this type bear the words "Gulf No-Nox Ethyl Gasoline."

PAR. 5. Since about January 1, 1933, the corporate respondent has featured in all of its display advertising, on signs at various of its stations, on gasoline pumps, trucks and other equipment, the word "GULF," either alone or in printed letters substantially larger than those of the other words in connection with which it is used. The word "GULF" is always printed in shaded letters of the same type and black or deep blue color substantially the same as the letters and colors used by the said Gulf Refining Company in its printing and use of the word "GULF."

Respondents have also extensively advertised one brand of the corporate respondents gasoline products as "Gulf Supreme Gasoline." The name of this brand of gasoline is featured on signs posted in and about the various filling stations. These signs are about two and one-half feet high and eight to ten feet long, and are placed on a standard so that the sign is high enough up to give clearance to cars passing thereunder, and is, at many stations, illuminated by electric lights at night. On these signs the word "GULF" appears in letters twice as large as the words "Supreme" and "Gasoline." The word "Supreme" on these signs is emphasized generally by enclosing said word in quotation marks. The respondents' corporate name, Gulf Coast Oil Company of Mississippi, Inc., sometimes appears on said signs in letters approximately one-third the size of the lettering in the words "Supreme" and "Gasoline." The word Gulf is printed in letters of the same type and with the same coloring as used by the Gulf Refining Company in its printing and use of the word "GULF." The advertising of respondents' "Gulf Supreme Gasoline" has been conducted further by means of radio broadcasts over radio stations WSMB and WWL. Both of these stations are of sufficient power to carry the programs emanating therefrom to, into and through States of the United States other than the State of Louisiana. Station WWL is a powerful station and its program can be heard all over the United States. Respondents' various broadcasts are devoted entirely to advertising the gasoline designated as "Gulf Supreme Gasoline" and call attention to the location of stations at which it may be obtained. The respondent's corporate name is not generally mentioned in these broadcasts.

The principal type of gasoline now sold by the corporate respondent is designated and advertised extensively in newspapers having an interstate circulation and in other ways as "Gulf Ether Gasoline." Gasoline pumps at the respondents' various filling stations located in the States of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama have printed thereon in large letters the words "Gulf Ether Gasoline." This particular type of gasoline is produced by adding small quantities, approximately eight (8) gallons, of commercial ether to a tank car of approximately 8,000 gallons of ordinary gasoline. The amount of ether added to said gasoline forms a small and insignificant part of the total volume of said gasoline when mixed. The addition of such a small amount of commercial ether fluid, a highly volatile gas, to ordinary gasoline does not affect said gasoline to any noticeable extent and is not beneficial to said gasoline. The addition of ether in such quantities does not increase the value, potency or power of said gasoline. The use of such quantity of commercial ether added to ordinary gasoline does not make said gasoline any more beneficial to automobile motors and does not decrease the tendency of the motor to knock or detonate. Gasoline to which such quantity of ether fluid has been added does not perform with comparable efficiency to gasoline to which tetraethyl lead has been added in such quantities as to raise the octane rating to 75.

The word "Ether" when used in connection with the word "Gulf" and "Gasoline" is a colorable imitation and simulation of the term "Gulf No-Nox Ethyl Gasoline" and of the term "Ethyl Gasoline" as rightfully used by the Gulf Refining Company and many of the competitors of the respondents.

The respondents have also made use of the terms "Pride of the People" and "Gulf 'Pride' Motor Oil" to designate certain types of motor oil sold by the corporate respondent. Certain of the corporate respondent's signs and equipment, including oil containers and oil pumps display the term "Pride of the People."

The respondents have widely advertised the corporate respondent's "Gulf Ether Gasoline" and its "Pride of the People" and "Gulf 'Pride'" lubricating oils in newspapers of general circulation throughout the States of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama.

PAR. 6. Neither the Gulf Refining Company nor the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation have given their permission to the respondents to use, in the manner herein set out, or in any other manner, the terms

"GULF," "Gulf Supreme Motor Oil," "Gulfpride Oil," "Gulf No-Nox Ethyl Gasoline," or "ETHYL" in designating the respondents' various gasoline and motor oil products.

The use by the respondents in the manner described herein of the brand name "GULF" and of the terms "Gulf Supreme Gasoline," "Gulf Ether Gasoline," and "Pride of the People," and "Gulf 'Pride' Motor Oil" is such as to be colorable imitations and simulations of the aforesaid trade name of the Gulf Refining Company and its brand names for various gasolines and motor oils sold by it over a period of many years and the use of the term "Ether" in describing corporate respondent's gasoline is such as to be a colorable imitation and simulation of the registered trade name "ETHYL" as used by the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation and its various licensees.

PAR. 7. The acts and practices of the respondents, as detailed hereinabove, in imitating and simulating the products of the Gulf Refining Company and of other distributors selling various types of "ETHYL" gasoline has the capacity and tendency to confuse and mislead the trade and the public generally with respect to the nature, quality, and origin of the various products sold by the corporate respondent. Under the ordinary conditions prevailing in the usual course of business in the sale of gasolines and motor oils the acts and practices of the respondents are such that members of the public may be induced, by reason of such simulation and imitation of trade-marks and trade names as herein set out, to buy the corporate respondent's gasoline, motor oil, and other products in the belief that they are purchasing gasoline, motor oil, and other products distributed and sold by the Gulf Refining Company, its agents and dealers or gasoline distributed by other competitors of the respondents who are licensees of the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation.

PAR. 8. Various types of gasoline perform with varying degrees of efficiency. The quality or grade of gasoline, with respect to eliminating motor knock or decreasing the tendency of the motor to detonate, is susceptible of measurement and determination. This standard of measurement is expressed in terms of octane value. The gasoline having the highest octane rating is considered by the trade, and the purchasing public, to be the best and commands a higher price or premium accordingly. Gasolines to which tetraethyl lead is added, and which are sold to the trade and public as "ETHYL" gasoline have an octane rating of not less than 75 octanes.

The respondents, in all of their advertising, radio broadcasts, newspaper advertising, and otherwise, represent that the corporate respondent's "Gulf Ether Gasoline" tests 70 octanes and is equivalent to high test premium gasoline and to "ETHYL" gasoline for which a premium is charged. The gasoline sold by the corporate respondent at the time the hearings were conducted in August, 1936, and prior thereto, did not always have the same octane rating. Different lots of gasoline purchased by the corporate respondents for resale varied in octane value from 66 octanes up to 68 or 69 octanes. The greater percentage of the purchases made were of 66 to 68 octane gasoline. Gasoline having an octane rating of 70 or less is not comparable to either "ETHYL" or to other high test premium gasoline in performance or in elimination or reduction of motor knocks and detonation. The amount of ether added to respondents' 66 to 68 octane gasoline is sufficient to raise the octane rating as much as one point.

PAR. 9. The statements and representations made by the respondents with respect to the quality of the corporate respondent's "Gulf Ether Gasoline" and its effectiveness in use, in offering for sale and selling said "Gulf Ether Gasoline" were calculated to, and had and now have, the tendency and capacity to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous beliefs that said representations are true and that said "Gulf Ether Gasoline" is comparable in value to, and gives equal performance with, various types of high test premium gasoline and "Ethyl" gasoline.

As a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the aforesaid acts and representations of the respondents, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of corporate respondent's "Gulf Ether Gasoline" with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondents from competitors engaged in the business of distributing and selling various types of high test premium gasolines and "ETHYL" gasolines and who truthfully advertise their products and also from competitors engaged in the distribution and sale of ordinary grades of gasoline, who truthfully advertise their respective products, both as to quality and efficiency of performance.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Gulf Coast Oil Company of Mississippi, Inc., and Anthony Paciera, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Order

24 F. T. C.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents, Gulf Coast Oil Company of Mississippi, a corporation, its officers, and Anthony Paciera, an individual, and their respective representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of gasoline, motor oils, and other petroleum products in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or indirectly, in their advertising or in any other manner, by use of the trade name "ETHYL," or by use of the word "Ether," or any other word or words closely simulating the trade name "ETHYL," either alone or in conjunction with any other word or words, or by use of any other means or device, that the gasoline sold by respondents contains tetraethyl lead or "ETHYL" fluid or that the respondents are licensees of the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation;
2. Representing, through use of the words or brand names "GULF," "Gulfpride," "Gulf 'Pride'," "Gulf Supreme" and "Pride of the People," or any other words closely simulating the aforesaid trade or brand names, either alone or in conjunction with any other word or words, or through the use of any symbol, term, or device, that respondents gasoline and motor oil products are those of the Gulf Refining Company;
3. Representing, directly or indirectly, through any means or device that respondents' gasoline products have an octane rating higher than they actually possess;
4. Representing, directly or by implication, through any means or device, that respondents' gasoline products are the equal in elimination or reduction of motor knocks, detonation, or performance to

"premium" gasolines having octane ratings of 75 or more, or to gasoline products which in fact have a higher octane rating than respondents' gasoline and from comparing respondents' gasoline to "premium" gasolines having a higher octane rating than respondents' gasoline without specifically stating the respective ratings of each gasoline;

5. Using the word "Gulf" alone or in conjunction with any other word or words as a brand or trade name for their gasoline or motor oil products, or in advertising, or in any other manner, unless the word "Gulf" shall have the word "Coast" placed in close proximity thereto in letters of the same type and size and of equal prominence.

Provided, however, That the respondents are not hereby prohibited from using their entire corporate name or from using any trade or brand name which includes the words "Gulf Coast," in any manner so long as the use thereof does not conflict with section 5 hereof, or from using a yellow or orange color scheme on their stations, gasoline pumps, and other equipment.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days of the service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

PLANTATION CHOCOLATE COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 28, 1914

Docket 2777. Complaint, Apr. 21, 1936—Decision, Mar. 4, 1937

Where a corporation, engaged in manufacture and sale of "straight" goods candy and of so-called "break-and-take" assortments, principal trade demand for which comes from the small retailers, with stores in many instances near schools and patronized by school children, and sale and distribution of which candy, affording with sale thereof to public opportunity of obtaining a prize or becoming a winner by lot or chance, teaches and encourages gambling among children, principal consumers or purchasers of such type of candy and largest class by far thereof, who buy same in preference to so-called "straight" candy when displayed side by side by reason of lottery or gambling feature connected with former, and selling of which in the market of the other, i. e., the "straight" goods has been followed by marked decrease in sales of such "straight" candy due principally to gambling or lottery feature connected with so-called "break-and-take" merchandise—

Sold to wholesale and retail dealers its so-called "Here-Tiz" assortments, composed of a number of small penny pieces of chocolate-covered candy of uniform size and shape, the color of the concealed centers of a small number of which differed from that of the majority thereof, together with a number of larger pieces of candy to be given as prizes to those procuring one of said pieces, colored center of which differed, as aforesaid, from majority thereof, and also together with a still larger piece, to which purchaser of last piece of aforesaid chocolate-covered candies was entitled without charge; so assembled and packed that such assortments might be, and were, displayed and sold to consuming public by numerous retail dealers purchasers thereof in accordance with above-described plan, and with knowledge and intent that such assortments could and would thus be resold to public by retail dealers by lot or chance without alteration, addition, or rearrangement, as above set forth, in violation of public policy, and in competition with many who regard such methods of sale and distribution as morally bad and as encouraging gambling, especially among children, as injurious to the industry through resulting in the merchandising of a chance or lottery instead of candy, and as providing retailers with the means of violating the laws of the several States, and some of whom, for such reasons, refuse to sell candy so packed and assembled that it can be resold to public by lot or chance;

With result that some competitors began sale and distribution of candy for resale to public as above set forth, to meet competition of those manufacturers who thus sold and distributed their candy, for which product as thus sold there is demand; sales of "straight" candy of aforesaid refusing competitors who can compete on even terms only by giving same or similar devices to retailers, showed a continued decrease; public and competitors were prejudiced and injured, and trade was diverted from latter to it, and

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Plantation Chocolate Co., Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania with its principal office and place of business located at 3150 Janney Street, in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania. It is now and for several years last past has been engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers, located at points in the various States of the United States and causes and has caused its products, when so sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Philadelphia, Pa., to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business; and there is now and has been for several years last past a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold since on or about December 1935, to wholesale and retail dealers packages or assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof;

One of said assortments consists of a number of pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a number of larger pieces of candy, which larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in the following manner: The majority of the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape have centers of the same color, but a small number of said pieces of candy have centers of a different color. The said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment, retail at the price of 1¢ each, but the purchaser who procures one of said candies having a center colored differently from the majority is entitled to receive and is to be given free of charge one of the said larger pieces of candy heretofore referred to. The purchaser of the last piece of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment, is entitled to receive and is to be given free of charge a still larger piece of candy also contained in said assortment. The color of the centers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape is effectively concealed from the purchaser and prospective purchaser until a selection has been made and the piece of candy broken up. The aforesaid purchasers of said candies who procure a candy having a center colored differently from the majority of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment, thus procure one of the said larger pieces of candy wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondent sells its assortment, resell said assortment to retail dealers, and said retail dealers, and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct, expose said assortment for sale and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its product in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth, as a means of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said product in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure larger pieces of candy.

The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent, in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. Many of said competitors of respondent are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 7. The aforementioned method, acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said method, acts and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on April 21, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent, Plantation Chocolate Co., Inc., a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Respondent filed no answer thereto, but testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Henry C. Lank and P. C. Kolinski, attorneys for the Commission, before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Respondent was not represented by counsel and offered no testimony or other evidence.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony and other evidence, and brief of counsel for the Commission in support of the complaint; and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Plantation Chocolate Co., Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business located at 3150 Janney Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been engaged in the manufacture of candy in Philadelphia, Pa., and in the sale and distribution of said candy to retail and wholesale dealers located in the State of Pennsylvania and in the majority of the other States of the United States. It causes said candy when sold to be shipped or transported from its principal place of business in Philadelphia, Pa., to purchasers thereof in Pennsylvania and in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. In so carrying on said business, respondent is and has been engaged in interstate commerce and is and has been in active competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. Among the candy manufactured and sold by respondent was an assortment designated as "Here Tiz," composed of a number of small chocolate covered pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a number of larger pieces of candy and one still larger piece of candy. The larger pieces of candy and the largest piece of candy were given as prizes to the purchasers or consumers of said chocolate covered candies, in the following manner:

The majority of the said chocolate covered candies in said assortment had white centers, but a small number of said chocolate covered candies had pink centers. The color of the centers of the said chocolate covered candies was effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection had been made and the particular piece of candy broken open. The said chocolate covered candies retailed at the piece of 1¢ each, but the purchaser or consumer who procured one of the said candies having a pink center was entitled to receive, and was given free of charge, one of the larger pieces of candy. The purchaser of the last piece of said chocolate covered candy was entitled to receive, and was given free of charge, the largest piece of candy in said assortment. The larger pieces of candy in said assortment were thus distributed to purchasers of the small chocolate covered candies wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. Candy assortments, involving the lot or chance feature, as described in paragraph 2 above, are generally referred to in the candy trade or industry as "break and take" assortments. Assortments of candy without the lot or chance feature in connection with their resale to the public are generally referred to in the candy trade or industry as "straight" goods. These terms will be used hereafter in these findings to designate these types of assortments.

PAR. 4. Numerous retail dealers have purchased assortments as described in paragraph 2 above, direct from respondent or from wholesale dealers and jobbers who in turn have purchased said assortments from respondent. Such retail dealers displayed said assortments for sale to the public as packed and assembled by the respondent, and the candy contained in said assortments was sold and distributed to the consuming public in accordance with the above described sales plan.

PAR. 5. All sales made by respondent were absolute sales, and respondent retained no control over the goods after they were delivered to the retail dealers or the wholesale dealers and jobbers. The assortments were packed in such manner that they could be displayed and offered for sale, and were designed to be displayed and offered for sale, without alteration, addition or rearrangement, to the consuming public by means of a lottery, gaming device or gift enterprise.

The sale and distribution of candy by retail dealers by the method described herein is the sale and distribution of candy by lot or chance and constitutes a lottery, gaming device or gift enterprise. In the sale and distribution to retail dealers and to wholesale dealers and jobbers for resale to retail dealers of assortments of candy assembled and packed, as described in paragraph 2, respondent had knowledge that the said candy would be resold to the purchasing public by retail dealers by lot or chance, and it packed and assembled such candy in the way and manner described so that it might, without alteration, addition, or rearrangement, be resold to the public by lot or chance by said retail dealers.

PAR. 6. Many competitors of respondent regard such methods of sale and distribution as morally bad and as encouraging gambling especially among children; as injurious to the candy industry because it results in the merchandising of a chance or lottery instead of candy; and as providing retail merchants with the means of violating the laws of the several States. Because of these reasons some competitors of respondent refuse and have refused to sell candy so packed and assembled that it can be resold to the public by lot or chance. These competitors are thereby put to a disadvantage in competing. Said competitors can compete on even terms only by giving the same or similar devices to retailers. This they are unwilling to do, and their sales of "straight" candy show a continued decrease.

There is a demand for candy which is sold by lot or chance, and in order to meet the competition of manufacturers who sell and distribute candy which is resold by such methods some competitors of respondent have begun the sale and distribution of candy for resale to the public by lot or chance. The use of such methods by respondent in the sale and distribution of its candy is prejudicial and injurious to the public and respondent's competitors, and has resulted in the diversion of trade to respondent from its said competitors, and is a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in the candy industry.

PAR. 7. The principal demand in the trade for the "break and take" candy assortments comes from the small retailers. The stores of these small retailers are in many instances located near schools and attract the trade of school children. The consumers or purchasers of the lottery or prize candy assortments are principally children, and because of the lottery or gambling feature connected with the "break and take" assortments and the possibility of becoming a winner it has been observed that the children purchase them in preference to the "straight" candy when the two types of assortments are displayed side by side.

The children prefer to purchase the lottery or prize assortments of candy because of the gambling feature connected with its sale. The sale and distribution of "break and take" assortments of candy, or of candy which has connected with its sale to the public the means or opportunity of obtaining a prize or becoming a winner by lot or chance, teaches and encourages gambling among children who comprise by far the largest class of purchasers and consumers of this type of candy.

PAR. 8. There are in the United States many manufacturers of candy who do not manufacture and sell lottery or prize assortments of candy and who sell their "straight" candy in interstate commerce in competition with the "break and take" candy, and manufacturers of the "straight" type of candy have noted a marked decrease in the sales of their product whenever and wherever the lottery or prize candy has appeared in their markets. This decrease in the sales of "straight" candy is principally due to the gambling or lottery feature connected with the "break and take" candy.

PAR. 9. An officer of the respondent corporation was called as a witness and testified, and the Commission finds, that the total volume of respondent's business has been approximately $175,000 annually, and that while the major part of respondent's business was the sale of "straight" merchandise, yet the exact proportions were not shown.

PAR. 10. The Commission further finds that the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to enable retail dealers, without alteration, addition or rearrangement, to resell the same to the consuming public by lot or chance is contrary to the public policy.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, Plantation Chocolate Co., Inc., were to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, testimony and other evidence taken before Miles J. Furnas, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint, and brief of counsel for the Commission; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Plantation Chocolate Co., Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in the offering for sale, sale and distribution in interstate commerce of candy and candy products, do cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing to jobbers and wholesale dealers for resale to retail dealers, or to retail dealers direct, candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers, or retail dealers, packages or assortments of candy which are used or may be used, without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such packages or assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy or candy products contained in said assortment to the public.

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment, for sale to the public at retail, pieces of candy of uniform size and shape having centers of a different color, together with a number of larger pieces of candy, which said larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring a piece of candy with a center of a particular color.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 30 days after the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

Docket 2882. Complaint, July 28, 1936—Decision, Mar. 4, 1937

Where a corporation, engaged in manufacture and sale of candy, including certain assortments which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof, and some of which consisted of a number of penny pieces of uniform size and shape, the concealed color of the centers of a small number of which differed from that of the majority thereof, together with a number of large bars to be given as prizes to purchasers of those pieces colored centers of which differed, as aforesaid, from the majority—

Sold to wholesalers and to retailers, for display and resale to purchasing public in accordance with aforesaid sales plan, said assortments, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its said products in accordance with such plan, contrary to public policy long recognized by the common law and criminal statutes and to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who, unwilling to offer or sell candy so packed and assembled or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to purchasing public as to involve a game of chance, or to adopt and use any method involving such a game of chance or sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With result that many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy were attracted by said method and manner of packing said product, and by element of chance involved in sale thereof, as aforesaid, and thereby induced to purchase such candy thus packed and sold by it in preference to that offered and sold by said competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods; and with tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to it trade from its competitors, as aforesaid, exclude from such trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such or an equivalent method because unlawful, lessen competition therein, and tend to create a monopoly thereof in it and such other distributors as use same or an equivalent method, deprive purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in trade involved, and eliminate from said trade all actual, and exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use such or an equivalent method:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Euclid Candy Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Euclid Candy Company, is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of California, with its principal office and place of business located at 715 Battery Street, San Francisco, Calif. Respondent is now, and for one year last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes and has caused its said products, when so sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of San Francisco, Calif., to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business; and there is now, and has been for one year last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

One of said assortments of candy is composed of a number of pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a number of large bars of candy, which large bars of candy are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, in the following manner: The majority of the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment have centers of the same color, but a small number of said pieces of candy have different colored centers; the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape retail at the price of 1¢ each, but the purchasers who procure one of the said candies with the center colored differently from the majority of said candies are entitled to receive, and are to be given free of charge, one of the said large bars of candy heretofore referred to. The purchaser of the last piece of candy of said uniform size also receives a large bar of candy. The color of the centers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the particular piece of candy is broken. The aforesaid purchasers of said candies, who procure a candy colored differently from the majority of said pieces of candy in said assortment, thus procure one of the said large bars of candy wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments resell the same to retail dealers, and said retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct expose said assortments for sale and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth, and said sales plan has the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said product in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public, in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a large bar of candy.

The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has a dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Findings

24 F. T. C.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. Many of said competitors of respondent are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 7. The aforementioned method, acts, and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said method, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce with the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

dated August 31, 1936, in which answer it stated that it was the respondent designated in the complaint as Euclid Candy Company and admitted all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and stated that it waived hearing on the charges set forth in said complaint and consented that, without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission might issue and serve upon it findings as to the facts and conclusion and an order to cease and desist from the violations of law charged in the complaint.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto; and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, The Euclid Candy Co. of California, Inc., named in the complaint as Euclid Candy Company, is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of California, with its principal office and place of business located at 715 Battery Street, San Francisco, Calif. Respondent is now, and for one year last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes and has caused its said products, when so sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of San Francisco, Calif., to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business; and there is now, and has been for one year last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale and retail dealers certain assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

One of said assortments of candy is composed of a number of pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, together with a number of large bars of candy, which large bars of candy are to be given as prizes to purchasers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape, in the following manner: The majority of the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape in said assortment have centers of the same color, but a small number of said pieces of candy have different colored centers; the said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape retail at the price of 1¢ each, but the purchasers who procure one of the said candies with the center colored differently from the majority of said candies are entitled to receive, and are to be given free of charge, one of the said large bars of candy heretofore referred to. The purchaser of the last piece of candy of said uniform size also receives a large bar of candy. The color of the centers of said pieces of candy of uniform size and shape is effectively concealed from purchasers and prospective purchasers until a selection has been made and the particular piece of candy is broken. The aforesaid purchasers of said candies, who procure a candy colored differently from the majority of said pieces of candy in said assortment, thus procure one of the said large bars of candy wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers to whom respondent sells its assortments resell the same to retail dealers, and said retail dealers and the retail dealers to whom respondent sells direct expose said assortments for sale and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its products in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth, and said sales plan has the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said product in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public, in the manner above alleged, involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a large bar of candy.

The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has a tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public in such a manner as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. Many of said competitors of respondent are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 7. The Commission further finds that the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of assortments or packages of candy so packed and assembled as to enable retail dealers, without alteration, addition, or rearrangement, to resell the same to the consuming public by lot or chance is contrary to public policy.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, The Euclid Candy Co. of California, Inc., named in the complaint as Euclid Candy Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of

24 F. T. C.

Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, The Euclid Candy Co. of California, Inc., named in the complaint as Euclid Candy Company, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce of candy, do cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing to jobbers and wholesale dealers for resale to retail dealers and to retail dealers direct candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers and retail dealers packages or assortments of candy which are used, or may be used, without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such packages or assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in said assortments to the public.

3. Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment for sale to the public at retail pieces of candy of uniform size and shape having centers of a different color, together with a number of larger pieces of candy, which said larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to the purchasers procuring pieces of candy with a center of a particular color.

It is further ordered, That the respondent herein shall, within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2901. Complaint, Aug. 19, 1936—Decision, Mar. 4, 1937

Where a corporation, engaged in jobbing foodstuffs—

Sold a large variety of flavoring extracts, upon the bottle labels of which there were set forth an apparent depiction of an Italian coat-of-arms and various Italian words, indicating and implying to members of purchasing public that said extracts were prepared, compounded, and packaged by the National Chemical Laboratory, at Milan, Italy, and were imported into the United States, and that they had been awarded first prize at certain exhibitions in Milan and Florence, Italy, in competition with other flavoring extracts there exhibited; facts being said extracts were compounded and packaged in the State of New York by an American manufacturer, and said various representations were false;

With effect of misleading large number of Italian Americans who prefer, as superior to such products produced in this country, those produced abroad, into the belief that they were buying such imported and preferred extracts of Italian origin; and with capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasing public into belief that said extracts, thus labeled, were compounded and packaged abroad and imported into this country, and to induce such public, acting in such erroneous beliefs, to buy its said products, and thereby unfairly divert trade to it from its competitors who rightfully and truthfully represent their merchandise, and do not in anywise falsely represent the same; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAFII 1. Said respondent, National Kream Company, Inc., is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business at 360 Furman Street, Borough of Brooklyn, in the city and State of New York. Respondent is now and, for more than one year last past, has been, engaged in the business of a jobber of foodstuffs, including a variety of flavoring extracts. Respondent sells and distributes said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia; causing said products, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in a State or States of the United States other than the State of New York.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business aforesaid, respondent is now, and for more than one year last past, has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the business of selling and distributing foodstuffs and flavoring extracts in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, as aforesaid, the respondent sells a large variety of flavoring extracts. To the bottles which contain said flavoring extract are affixed labels, containing a reproduction of what appears to be an Italian coat of arms and the following wording:

Said representations made upon the labels, as aforesaid, indicate and imply to the members of the purchasing public that the said flavoring extracts are prepared, compounded and packaged by the National Chemical laboratory at Milan, in Italy, and are imported into the United States. Said language further implies that the said product was awarded first prize at certain expositions in the cities of Milan and Florence, Italy, in competition with other flavoring extracts there exhibited. In truth and in fact, said flavoring extracts are not prepared, compounded and packaged by a National Chemical Laboratory in Milan, Italy, and are not imported into the United States; they were not exhibited at any Italian exposition, and were awarded no medals or other prizes; but, on the contrary, said flavoring extracts are prepared, compounded and packaged in the State of New York by an American manufacturer.

There is a large number of Italian-Americans among the purchasing public who show a preference for goods produced abroad, under the belief that they are superior to those produced in this country, said belief prevailing particularly in extracts and the like. These purchasers are led to believe, because of the statements contained on the label and the fact that said label is printed in the Italian language, that they are buying an imported extract of superior merit to the domestic product. There are among respondent's competitors many who sell both the domestic and imported products, and who, in the course and conduct of their business, honestly and truthfully represent their merchandise.

PAR. 5. The above acts and things done or caused to be done by the respondent, were and are each and all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on the 19th day of August 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, National Kream Company, Inc., a corporation, charging it with use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Astor Hogg, attorney for the Commission, before W. W. Sheppard, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Henry M. Duke, attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint (respondent's counsel having waived the filing of brief) and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, National Kream Company, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York. Its office and principal place of business is located at 360 Furman Street, Borough of Brooklyn, in the city of New York in said State. For more than one year last past, respondent has been engaged in the business of jobbing food stuffs, including a variety of flavoring extracts. It sells and distributes said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, causing said products when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of New York. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the business of selling and distributing food stuffs and flavoring extracts in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent sells and has sold a large variety of flavoring extracts. To the bottles which contain said flavoring extracts are affixed labels containing a reproduction of what appears to be an Italian coat-of-arms and the following words:

PAR. 3. The representations made upon the labels as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof indicate and imply to the members of the purchasing public that the said flavoring extracts are prepared, compounded and packaged by the National Chemical Laboratory, at Milan, Italy, and are imported into the United States. Said language further indicates and implies that the said extracts were awarded first prize at certain expositions held in the cities of Milan and Florence, Italy, in competition with other flavoring extracts there exhibited. The representations made by respondent are false and misleading in that said flavoring extracts are not and were not prepared, compounded or packaged by National Chemical Laboratory of Milan, Italy, and are not and were not imported into the United States from any foreign country. They were not exhibited at any Italian exposition and were awarded no medals or other prizes. As a matter of fact, said flavoring extracts are and were prepared, compounded, and packaged in the State of New York by an American manufacturer.

PAR. 4. There are a large number of Italian Americans among the purchasing public who have and show a preference for flavoring extracts produced abroad under the belief that they are superior to those produced in this country. These purchasers are led to believe because of the statements contained on the labels and the fact that the said labels are printed in the Italian language, that they are buying imported extracts of Italian origin for which they have a preference.

PAR. 5. The above and foregoing representations, as shown by the labels used by respondent as described in paragraph 2 hereof, have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the belief that the said flavoring extracts so labeled are and were prepared, compounded and packaged abroad, and imported into the United States; and have the capacity and tendency to induce the said purchasing public acting under such erroneous beliefs to purchase respondent's products, thereby unfairly diverting trade to the respondent from its competitors who rightfully and truthfully represent their merchandise and who do not in any wise falsely represent their products; and in this manner, respondent does substantial injury to competition in interstate commerce.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, National Kream Company, Inc., a corporation are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, National Kream Company, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of flavoring extracts or compounds in interstate commerce and in the District of Columbia, do cease and desist

1. From directly or indirectly advertising, designating or representing, through the use of words of any foreign language, or symbols, or picturizations, or through any other means or in any manner, that flavoring extracts or compounds manufactured or compounded in the United States are manufactured or produced in Italy or in any other foreign country and imported into the United States;

2. From directly or indirectly advertising, designating or representing, through the use of words, symbols or picturizations falsely indicating its flavoring extracts or compounds were exhibited at any exposition or awarded a prize at any such exposition, that such products are of superior merit.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 30 days after the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 2745. Complaint, Mar. 14, 1936—Decision, Mar. 10, 1937*

Where a corporation engaged in the sale and distribution of legume seed inoculants consisting of nitrogen-fixing bacteria in a humus base, under trade name "Humogerm," to wholesalers, retailers, and jobbers of seed, and through them, ultimately, to growers of leguminous crops who mix such inoculants with legume seed to promote growth of said crops and enrich soil in which same were grown; in advertising its said "Humogerm" in national and State farm magazines and in circulars, pamphlets, price lists, and other advertising matter distributed and circulated among its customers and prospective customers and furnished to its wholesale and retail customers to be passed on to the purchasing public, and through its labels, as the case might be—

- (a) Represented to its said wholesale and retail customers, and supplied them with the means of representing to the ultimate purchaser, that its said containers were packed with a definite, ascertainable, minimum number of nitrogen-fixing bacteria, facts being that at time in question company from which it made its purchases and which mixed bacteria with humus base before shipping same in bulk to it, did not definitely ascertain definite number of such bacteria put in any given quantity of humus, and such numbers as were put in were subject to constant change during course of shipment, repackaging, and sale to ultimate purchaser;
- (b) Represented through words "Guaranteed packed with" that each and every can of its said product contained a specified, definite, minimum number of living legume bacteria throughout the entire course of the distribution of said product and up to expiration date appearing on label of can, facts being there is no way known to science by which exact number of legume organisms can be determined in a can of inoculant as of the time the same reaches the farmer and no concern can truthfully guarantee that its product will, at that time, contain a definitely specified minimum number of such bacteria, and it did not know that there were present in its containers number and type of nitrogen-fixing bacteria stated and represented on its labels, and such number had not been and could not accurately be ascertained;
- (c) Represented that its said product contained fifty percent more nitrogen-fixing bacteria than that of any other inoculant, and that its said product cost three and one-third cents per billion bacteria, facts being that number of bacteria in each can constantly varied, depending upon conditions to which can had been exposed, lack of uniformity in mixing, shipping in bulk and repackaging, and that, while use of a sufficient quantity of bacteria to produce adequate nodulation is essential, measurement of the relative values of competing commercial inoculants cannot truthfully be based on the respective number of bacteria contained therein in relation to the price charged and paid therefor; and

- (d) Represented that, through use of the patent lid on its container, its product reached the ultimate purchasers in such condition that the nitrogen-fixing bacteria therein contained were more virile or efficacious than those sold by competitors, and that, through use of aforesaid patent lid on its containers, molds or other contamination were effectively prevented, facts being that many of its competitors provide and maintain equal virility and efficacy in their legume inoculants through other and similar means, and that humus, in which the bacteria are mixed and packed, is nonsterile and may and does have many other kinds and strains of bacteria, including molds;

With effect of misleading and deceiving dealers and purchasing public, who were induced by reliance upon the truth of such representations to buy said "Humogerm" in preference to other legume inoculants which were competitive both as to price and quality, and of thereby diverting trade to it from its competitors, including those who do not, in their advertising or labels, misrepresent the quantity of bacteria contained therein or that such numbers can be ascertained accurately, or otherwise, by false and misleading statements, induce and promote the sale of said products, or in any manner misrepresent the kind, condition, character, cost or efficacy of such competitive products:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John W. Norwood, trial examiner.

Mr. PGad B. Morehouse for the Commission.

Mr. Joseph K. Moyer and Mr. Craig L. Reddish, of Washington, D. C., and Mr. J. LeRoy Adair, of Quincy, Ill., for respondent.

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Kalo Inoculant Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation, organized in September 1934, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business in the city of Quincy, in said State. It now is, and since its organization has been engaged in the sale and distribution of nitrogen-fixing bacteria with a humus base, packed in tin cans, under the trade name "Humogerm," to wholesalers, retailers, and jobbers of seed, and through them, ultimately, to growers of leguminous crops who mix the contents of said cans with the legume seed for the purposes of promoting the growth of said crops and enriching the soil in which said crops are grown. The aforesaid bacteria are micro-organisms known as "bacilli," "radicicola" and "rhizobia," which when mixed and planted with the seed, form nodules on the roots of the growing legume, resulting in the extraction of nitrogen from the air instead of from the soil, and the fixation of such nitrogen in the plant and surrounding soil, thereby substantially stimulating the growth of the legume crop. Respondent purchases in bulk the humus containing such bacteria from the Earp-Thomas Laboratories Corporation of Bloomfield, N. J., repackages it in small tin containers and sells the same in constant course of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of its business it causes the said product, when sold to be shipped from its place of business in the city of Quincy, State of Illinois, into and through various States of the United States to the purchasers thereof. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent now is and since the date of its organization has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of products used for similar purposes and of other commercial legume inoculators.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling its said product "Humogerm" in interstate commerce, caused and causes the same to be advertised in national and state farm magazines and in circulars, pamphlets, price lists, and other advertising matter which it distributes and circulates among its customers and prospective customers. It also furnishes such advertising matter to its wholesale and retail customers to be passed on to the purchasing public to induce and promote the sales of its said product. In such advertising matter respondent makes the following representations and furnishes its wholesale and retail vendees with the means of making the same representations of fact as follows:²

²The extended quotation of respondent's advertising which follows at this point is set forth in Par. 3 of the findings, infra, at page 814, and is omitted from the complaint as published in the interest of brevity.

Complaint

24 F. T. C.

Respondent's aforesaid product is packed in small round cans in six varieties, one variety for each type of legume seed with each variety in three sizes varying from four ounces to 2½ pounds. The size of each can is stated thereon in terms of the amount of seed which that particular can will inoculate. Each can is sealed with a small pinhole in the top to admit air. All cans are labelled in the same manner with the exception of the culture number, the amount of seed to be inoculated and the number of bacteria placed in the can as follows:

HUMOGERM Nitrogen Fixing Bacteria Prepared by Earp-Thomas Laboratories Exclusively for KALO INOCULANT CO., QUINCY, ILL.

On the reverse side of each can appears the following wording:

GUARANTEE

HUMOGERM is guaranteed packed with the number and type of high-bred nitrogen-fixing bacteria shown on the label, more than sufficient to inoculate the number of seeds specified. Because of conditions beyond our control field results can naturally not be guaranteed.

The top of each can contains the number of legume germs, the bushel size can being labelled as follows:

This Can Packed With Over 15 BILLION LEGUME GERMS

Each size can contains a similar statement as to the number of germs in proportion to the one bushel size. The culture numbers, size of the can, germ count and retail price appear in the following table:

Culture No.	Size		Price
	Bushel	Billion
1 and 2.....	½	7½	$0.35
1 and 2.....	1	15	.50
1 and 2.....	2½	37½	1.00
3, 5, 7, and 9.....	1	7½	.35
3, 5, 7, and 9.....	2	15	.50
3, 5, 7, and 9.....	5	37½	1.00

PAR. 3. By means of the statements above set out in paragraph 2 hereof, respondent misrepresents to its wholesale and retail customers and furnishes them with the means of misrepresenting to the ultimate purchaser as follows:

(a) That its said containers are packed with a definite ascertainable minimum number of nitrogen-fixing bacteria when such is not the case, but in truth and in fact the Earp-Thomas Laboratories Corporation which mixed the bacteria with the humus base before shipping it in bulk to respondent, does not definitely ascertain the definite minimum number of such bacteria put in any given quantity of humus, and such numbers as are put in said humus are subject to constant change during the course of shipment and repackaging and sale to the ultimate purchaser.

(b) That each and every can of its said product contains a specified definite minimum number of living legume bacteria throughout the entire course of the distribution period of said product and up to the expiration date thereof appearing on the label of said can, when such is not the fact, and respondent does not know that its containers contain the number and type of nitrogen-fixing bacteria as stated and represented on its labels, the number of which bacteria has not been and can not be accurately ascertained.

(d) That its said product costs $3\frac{1}{3}\phi$ per billion bacteria when such is not the fact, but the number of bacteria in each can constantly varies depending upon the conditions to which the can has been exposed, lack of uniformity in mixing, shipping in bulk and in repackaging, and when the measurement of the relative values of competing commercial inoculators can not truthfully be based on the respective number of bacteria contained therein in relation to the price charged and paid therefor.

(e) That by the use of the patent lid on its containers its product reaches the ultimate purchasers in such condition that the nitrogen-fixing bacteria therein contained are more virile or efficacious than those sold by competitors, when in truth and in fact many of its competitors by other and similar means provide for and maintain equal virility and efficacy in their legume inoculators.

(f) That by the use of the aforesaid patent lid on its containers, molds or other contamination is effectively prevented when in truth and in fact the humus in which the said bacteria are mixed and packed is non-sterile and may and does have many other kinds and strains of bacteria, including molds.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent engaged in the sale and distribution of legume inoculators, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, firms, partnerships and individuals who, in soliciting the sale of and selling their said products in interstate commerce, do not, in their advertising, or labels, misrepresent the quantity of bacteria contained therein, or that such numbers can be accurately ascertained; or otherwise, by false and misleading statements, induce and promote the sale of their said products.

PAR. 5. The representations by respondent as set forth in paragraphs 2 and 3 hereof and each of them have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive dealers and the purchasing public who, relying upon the truth of the said representations, are thereby induced to purchase "Humogerm" in preference to other legume inoculants which are competitive both as to price and quality, thus diverting trade to respondent from its competitors who do not in the aforesaid or in any other manner misrepresent the kind, condition, character, cost or efficacy of such competitive products.

PAR. 6. The acts and things above alleged to have been done and the false representations alleged to have been made by respondent, are to the prejudice of the public and the competitors of respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on March 14, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Kalo Inoculant Company, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by PGad B. Morehouse, attorney for the Commission, before John W. Norwood, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and no testimony or other evidence was introduced on behalf of respondent in opposition thereto. Whereupon respondent, by its attorney J. LeRoy Adair submitted a motion for leave to withdraw its said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all of the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which said motion, by order entered herein, the Commission granted, and the said substitute answer and testimony and other evidence were duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, testimony, other evidence and the substituted answer, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent corporation, Kalo Inoculant Company, was organized in September 1934, under the laws of the State of Illinois, and has its principal office and place of business at 1007 Main Street, in the city of Quincy in said State. It is now, and since its organization, has been engaged in the sale and distribution of legume seed inoculants consisting of nitrogen-fixing bacteria in a humus base, under the trade name "Humogerm," to wholesalers, retailers, and jobbers of seed, and through them, ultimately, to growers of leguminous crops who mix such inoculants with legume seed for the purposes of promoting the growth of said crops and enriching the soil in which said crops are grown. The aforesaid bacteria are micro-organisms known to science as "bacilli radiculicola" and "rhizobia," which, when of proper virility and mixed with the seed in sufficient quantities to inoculate the same, form nodules on the roots of the growing legume, resulting in the extraction of nitrogen from the air, instead of from the soil, and the fixation of such nitrogen in the plant and surrounding soil, thereby substantially stimulating the growth of the legume crop.

From September 1934 until approximately July 1, 1935, the Kalo Company, an Illinois corporation of which this respondent is a wholly controlled subsidiary selling agent, purchased the aforesaid product in bulk from the Earp-Thomas Laboratories Corporation of Bloomfield, N. J., where it was produced in the following manner:

Mother cultures of each type of legume organism were grown in small bottles of agar jelly, these having been developed some twenty years ago by Doctor Earp-Thomas. From these small amounts of culture were introduced into a series of thirty-two ounce bottles, some containing liquid media, some solid media; the solid media being the standard agar jelly. These bottles and their contents were sterilized by being placed in an autoclave at high temperature, which kills all organisms. After the cultures were introduced the large bottles were permitted to incubate for a period of eight days to three months, depending on the amount of Humogerm to be produced. At this time the bacteria would have grown and multiplied to the highest number, and the contents of six of the bottles containing the agar media, and three of those containing the liquid media were introduced into each one hundred pounds of humus. From the examination of the laboratory and processes used it definitely appeared that the cultures were sterile and pure at the time they were mixed with the humus. The humus was then permitted to dry for several days, and when in moist condition was placed, prior to about April 1935 in "Bemis" or burlap bags, and for a time thereafter into waterproof airtight paper-lined bags and shipped to the Kalo Company. Tests were made by the Earp-Thomas Laboratories from time to time of sample thirty-two ounce bottles, and in that way an estimate was by Earp-Thomas Laboratories made of the number packed into each one hundred pounds of humus. The estimate therefrom being made as a definite amount of the humus was placed in each can by the Kalo Company. In addition to the tests on the thirty-two ounce bottles, the Kalo Inoculant Company returned one can from each batch of humus, consisting of from eight to twenty bags, to the Earp-Thomas Corporation for testing purposes. Then tests of those samples were made by the plate count method for the number of organisms, and by the Wilson test, to determine sufficient nodulation.

The Wilson test consists of an actual demonstration of the inoculating efficiency (or lack of it) on growing legume plants under controlled conditions, the alleged inoculant being mixed with the seeds, which are then planted, and the ensuing growth of the plants and the number of root nodules checked and recorded.

It took four days for the samples to reach the Earp-Thomas Laboratories, four to eight days to make the plate count, and two or more days to notify the distributor of the results. A period of over two weeks thus sometimes elapsed between the time the humus was received by the Kalo Inoculant Company and the time when the condition was made known by the tests. By that time most of the product might have been packed and sold by the Kalo Company. The Wilson test took from three to six weeks, so that the results of such test were not effective to prevent the sale of any humus found thereby to be unsatisfactory. During the season from the fall of 1934 to April 1935, a total of approximately thirty-eight thousand five hundred pounds of the product was shipped to the Kalo Company, and of this amount eleven hundred pounds were returned, as unsatisfactory as the result of the test made. This occurred during the time Bemis bags were in use.

In July 1935, the Earp-Thomas Laboratories Corporation employed an additional bacteriologist at Bloomfield, N. J., whose duties consisted chiefly of growing, checking, rechecking, and counting the bacteria which was shipped to the Kalo Company in sealed laboratory jars in which the bacteria continued to grow after leaving the laboratory. On September 1, 1936, respondent changed its entire method of obtaining and preparing its product for distribution and sale and employed a competent bacteriologist at its plant in Quincy, Ill., who is in complete charge of the production of bacteria for respondent's inoculant, and since that time respondent has not obtained such bacteria in any form from the aforesaid Earp-Thomas Laboratories Corporation in New Jersey.

Since September 1936, respondent's product has been prepared for distribution and sale at Quincy, Ill., under the complete supervision of such bacteriologist who first determines the type of the bacteria through original strains used for inoculating the agar cultures. An aqueous suspension is prepared from the agar cultures contained in thousands of thirty-two ounce bottles, and after the bacteria are washed off the agar into the said liquid suspension contained in five gallon cans, their number is by him ascertained by what is known as the Petroff-Hauser method. This method consists of a direct count and is a scientifically approved method of making a count of pure cultures of any type of bacteria, having been in use for several years. The liquid or aqueous suspension is thoroughly stirred, a sample removed, a proper dilution made, and the organisms, which are contained in a small chamber on a plate, directly counted under a microscope. Whereas the bacteriological plate count counts the colonies that develop from the organisms in solution after a necessary period of incubation, it is not necessary to wait for colonies to form to make the count by the Petroff-Hauser method. By such method, respondent, since its adoption, can and does ascertain with a reasonable degree of certainty the number of bacteria in each 5 gallon can of liquid suspension, two of which are thoroughly mixed with each 200 lbs. of humus, and respondent can therefrom compute with reasonable accuracy the minimum number of organisms with which the small 4 ounce to 2½ lb. cans are packed for sale and distribution. However, after packing, respondent cannot know with any certainty whatever, for the reasons below set out, the minimum number of such organisms at any other time than when packed.

PAR. 2. Legumes or Leguminosae are one of the plant families having separate visible structural characteristics. Consisting of thousands of plants, the ones of particular economic and agricultural importance are the alfalfa and sweet clover group, the common clover group, such as red mammoth, alsike, and white, the pea group, the field bean group, and the soy bean group. Legume crops are of value to the farmer by virtue of an ability to utilize free nitrogen resources of the air, and, if inoculated, will have a higher nitrogen content than otherwise, and thus both stimulate themselves and increase the fertility of the soil. Also such crops are valuable by reason of their ability to survive drouth and to grow under extremely unfavorable conditions.

It has been ascertained that about four-fifths of the air by volume is nitrogen and that this nitrogen may be transferred successfully from the air to the soil by what is known as nitrogen fixation.

There are thousands of micro-organisms in various soils. Some of such micro-organisms are radicle bacillus, actinomycetes, azotobacter, fungi, molds, etc. One of these soil organisms was discovered in 1897 in Germany and a Mr. Reiche, in 1908, brought the knowledge of it to America. This bacterium is known to scientists as "bacillus radicle", and "rhizobium".

These bacteria, when mixed with legume seed before sowing, have the peculiar property of being able to infect the root of the plant. When the root is so infected a rapid increase of cell structure takes place becoming visible in time and this is called a nodule. The physiological relationship then taking place between the plant and the nodule results in the stimulation of the plant and an increase in the nitrogen content of the plant and thus the farmer, who has an inoculated legume crop, is obtaining a very valuable chemical element for the soil instead of depleting the nitrogen resources of the soil. This is what is known as nitrogen fixation or symbiosis. Symbiosis means merely a mutual exchange of the plant's carbohydrates and sugar produced by rain, sunlight and air, for the nitrogen fixation produced by bacterial infection and sometimes this is called symbiotic nitrogen fixation.

For the different groups of legumes above enumerated, different species of bacillus radicle have been isolated by the bacteriologists through experimentation, finally selecting the particular species best suited to growth upon the host plant of each particular group.

Owing to the non-sterile character of the media into which the radicle or rhizobium are packed for commercial purposes, the inoculant when packed contains many other bacteria and micro-organisms foreign thereto, such as actinomycetes, azotobacter, fungi or molds which begin to absorb the food contained in the media, increasing in numbers very greatly during the first few weeks and thereafter, by reason of many factors such as depletion of food supplies, excreta, contaminating conflicts, etc., the radicle or rhizobium begin rapidly to die so that after a period of approximately 23 weeks, even under proper conditions, the aforesaid increase is totally obliterated and the curve of viability or longevity of the proper germ content of the can is still decreasing. Therefore, according to the expert bacteriological testimony, one would not expect after a period of 105 to 160 days to find over ten per cent of the original number alive in an unsealed container.

The containers used by all concerns distributing commercial inoculants admit air either through a small pin hole or through the porous material of the container itself, and respondent's container has a patented air vent in the lid thereof for the purpose of preventing any outside contamination or molds entering the can after packing. There is no way known to science by which the exact number of legume organisms can be determined in a can of inoculants as of the time the same reaches the farmer, and no concern can truthfully guarantee that its product will at that time contain a definitely specified minimum number of such bacteria. Furthermore, while it is essential that there be a sufficient quantity of bacteria when used to produce adequate nodulation, the measurement of the relative values of competing commercial inoculants cannot truthfully be based solely upon the respective number of bacteria contained therein in relation to the price charged and paid therefor.

PAR. 3. Respondent causes its said product when sold to be shipped from its place of business in the city of Quincy, State of Illinois, into and through various States of the United States to the purchasers thereof. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent now is and since the date of its organization has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of products used for similar purposes and of other commercial legume inoculators.

In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling its said product "Humogerm" in interstate commerce, caused and causes the same to be advertised in national and state farm magazines and in circulars, pamphlets, price lists, and other advertising matter which it distributes and circulates among its customers and prospective customers. It also furnishes such advertising matter to its wholesale and retail customers to be passed on to the purchasing public to induce and promote the sales of its said product. In such advertising matter respondent makes the following representations and furnishes its wholesale and retail vendees with the means of making the same representations of fact as follows:

(a) MAKE MORE PROFIT with HUMOGERM 50% MORE NITROGEN FIXING BACTERIA

The Bacteria count on each can of HUMOGERM is 50% higher than that of any other inoculant, FIFTEEN BILLION PER SMALL SEED BUSHEL.

AT A NEW LOW PRICE

The same high quality of culture which formerly sold for over $1.00 per bushel is now sold at a popular low price to furnish to the farmer

HIGH-BRED SELECTED BACTERIA AT 3½ CENTS PER BILLION thus making HUMOGERM by far the greatest value on the market today, and the lowest priced inoculant to use.

In addition, HUMOGERM now comes in a new modern package, with a beautiful three color varnished label, retaining the exclusive Earp-Thomas patent lid which provides air, which nitrogen fixing bacteria must have to live and grow, also protects against molds and other outside contamination, and retains the necessary moisture.

PROTECT YOUR SEEDS, YOUR CUSTOMERS, YOUR PROFIT

PAR. 4. Prior to September 1, 1936, by means of the statements above set out and other similar advertising matter and labelling which have not been discontinued, respondent misrepresented to its wholesale and retail customers and furnished them with the means of misrepresenting to the ultimate purchaser as follows:

(a) That its said containers were packed with a definite ascertainable minimum number of nitrogen-fixing bacteria when such, until July 15, 1935, was not the case, but in truth and in fact the Earp-Thomas Laboratories Corporation which mixed the bacteria with the humus base before shipping it in bulk to respondent, did not definitely ascertain the definite minimum number of such bacteria put in any given quantity of humus, and such numbers as were put in said humus were subject to constant change during the course of shipment, repackaging, and sale to the ultimate purchaser.

And by means of the foregoing statements and similar statements in its advertising on its cans, respondent has misrepresented and now misrepresents to its wholesale and retail customers and furnishes them with the means of misrepresenting to the ultimate purchaser as follows:

(b) That each and every can of its said product contains a specified definite minimum number of living legume bacteria throughout the entire course of the distribution period of said product and up to the expiration date hereof appearing on the label of said can, when such is not the fact, and respondent does not know that its containers contain the number and type of nitrogen-fixing bacteria as stated and represented on its labels, the number of which bacteria has not been and can not be accurately ascertained.

(d) That its said product costs $3\frac{1}{3}\text{¢}$ per billion bacteria when such is not the fact, but the number of bacteria in each can constantly varies depending upon the conditions to which the can has been exposed, lack of uniformity in mixing, shipping in bulk and in repackaging, and when the measurement of the relative values of competing commercial inoculators cannot truthfully be based on the respective number of bacteria contained therein in relation to the price charged and paid therefor.

(e) That by the use of the patent lid on its containers its product reaches the ultimate purchasers in such condition that the nitrogen-fixing bacteria therein contained are more virile or efficacious than those sold by competitors, when in truth and in fact many of its competitors by other and similar means provide for and maintain equal virility and efficacy in their legume inoculators.

(f) That by the use of the aforesaid patent lid on its containers, molds or other contamination are effectively prevented when in truth and in fact the humus in which the said bacteria are mixed and packed is non-sterile and may and does have many other kinds and strains of bacteria, including molds.

PAR. 5. There are among the competitors of respondent engaged in the sale and distribution of legume inoculators, as above mentioned, corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals who, in soliciting the sale of and selling their said products in interstate commerce, do not, in their advertising, or labels, misrepresent the quantity of bacteria contained therein, or that such numbers can be accurately ascertained; or otherwise, by false and misleading statements, induce and promote the sale of their said products.

PAR. 6. The representations by respondent as set forth above, and each of them have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive dealers and the purchasing public, who, relying upon the truth of the said representations, are thereby induced to purchase "Humogerm" in preference to other legume inoculants which are competitive both as to price and quality, thus diverting trade to respondent from its competitors who do not in the aforesaid or in any other manner misrepresent the kind, condition, character, cost or efficacy of such competitive products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Kalo Inoculant Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Kalo Inoculant Company, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of Humogerm, a nitrogen-fixing bacteria used as a legume inoculant in interstate commerce, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

(a) That the containers in which said product is sold are packed with fifteen billion (15,000,000,000) legume germs, or any other definitely specified quantity or number and type of such germs, unless and until such definitely specified quantity or number has been scientifically ascertained by a controlled bacteriological count made by a competent bacteriologist, using scientifically approved method or methods;

(b) By the words, "Guaranteed packed with," a definitely specified number and type of nitrogen-fixing bacteria, or words or phrases of like import, that such definitely specified number of such type of nitrogen-fixing bacteria is in the container at any time other than the time when said container was packed;

(c) That merely by reason of the germ count so specified being a higher count than that specified on any other legume inoculant, such other legume inoculant is inferior to respondent's product;

(d) That its product costs $3\frac{1}{3}$ cents per billion bacteria or any other definite statement of the cost thereof per billion, or any other similar unit, not based upon the ascertainment of the number of such bacteria in each container as of the time when packed; or advertising the cost per unit of germ count in such manner as to import or imply that the relative values of commercial legume inoculants are dependent entirely upon the said cost per unit.

(e) That competitive products not using the Earp-Thomas patented lid are thereby subject to molds or contamination, or that the use of such patented lid by respondent effectually prevents other than outside contamination or molds from entering the can after packing;

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF PIKE-HANSEN, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2938. Complaint, Oct. 2, 1936—Decision, Mar. 10, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in the offer and sale of men's clothing through some five hundred traveling salesmen whom it equipped with order blanks containing spaces for the individual measurements of each purchaser and with samples of materials for purchaser's selections as to color, weave, and quality of material from which the suit or other garment was to be made, and price of which varied according to quality of material selected, and who solicited and accepted orders for such clothing, taking purchaser's measurements and recording such and other information regarding his weight, height, etc., on the order blank, and forwarding same and collecting substantial part of agreed purchase price at time of acceptance of order, with balance payable upon delivery; and such agents or representatives, as case might be—

- (a) Represented and implied to prospective purchasers of its said clothing that it would make for and deliver to them made-to-measure or tailor-made garments made from material of the color, weave and quality selected from the samples exhibited, notwithstanding fact that garments delivered, in many instances, were not made-to-measure or tailor-made, as understood by purchasing public, did not fit in same manner as do such garments, due to lack of experience or skill on the part of its salesmen and its employees in making up the same, and, in some instances, did not fit at all or with any reasonable relation to individual to whom delivered, and, in many instances, were so cut and constructed that it was not possible for expert tailors to alter same so as to make them fit, and its failure and refusal to return purchase money received from such purchasers or to deliver to them garments that would fit;
- (b) Represented to purchasers of its said clothing that it would make for and deliver to them garments from materials of the color, weave, and quality selected by such purchasers from samples furnished to its salesmen or exhibited to such purchasers, notwithstanding fact, in many instances, it did not deliver to purchaser garment thus made, but delivered one made from material which it had substituted for that selected by purchaser and which was different in color and weave from and inferior in quality to material selected, and failure and refusal in such instances to return purchase money received or deliver garment made from material selected; and
- (c) Represented, in soliciting sale of its said clothing, to many prospective purchasers, that delivery would be made to them by salesmen or agent in person, so as to afford them opportunity to inspect the garment ordered as to material from which made and as to fit, prior to payment of balance of purchase money due it, notwithstanding fact garment was shipped to purchaser by parcel post, cash on delivery for balance of purchase money, no inspection was permitted, and its failure and refusal to return purchase price received or permit inspection before delivery;

Complaint

With effect of misleading and deceiving many purchasers and causing them erroneously to believe that garments sold by it were made-to-measure or tailor-made, as understood by purchasing public, that garments would be made from materials selected by purchasers and be delivered by person taking order, and that inspection would be permitted prior to payment of balance as aforesaid, and of causing many prospective purchasers, because of such erroneous beliefs, to buy clothing from it, and of thereby unfairly diverting trade in commerce to it from its competitors who do not use acts, practices and methods employed by it; to their substantial injury and that of the public:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Edw. W. Thomerson for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Pike-Hansen, Inc., is a corporation existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business at 1113 North Franklin Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

Respondent is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling men's clothing through salesmen or agents who travel throughout the United States soliciting and accepting orders for such clothing.

Respondent causes said clothing, when sold, to be transported from its said place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, into and across the several States of the United States to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the said several States of the United States other than the State of Illinois.

Respondent, in the course and conduct of its business in said commerce as aforesaid, is in substantial competition with other corporations and with associations, partnerships, and persons engaged in commerce between and among the several States of the United States in the business of selling and distributing men's clothing. Among the competitors of the respondent are many who sell their clothing in said commerce through salesmen or agents and who do not use the acts, practices, and methods in the sale thereof used by the respondent in the sale of its clothing as hereinafter alleged.

PAR. 2. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, employs approximately 500 salesmen or agents located throughout the several States of the United States to solicit and accept orders for its said clothing. These salesmen or agents are equipped by the respondent with order blanks, containing spaces for the taking of the individual measurements of each purchaser, and with samples of materials from which the purchasers make selections as to color, weave, and quality of the material from which the suit or other garment ordered is to be made. The prices at which said clothing is sold vary according to the quality of the material selected and said salesmen or agents collect from the purchasers of said clothing a substantial part of the agreed purchase price at the time the order is accepted and the balance of the purchase price is to be paid when the purchase is delivered. When a salesman or agent sells a garment, such salesman or agent takes the measurements of the purchaser and places this and other information regarding the weight, height, general build and appearance, etc. of the purchaser, together with a number identifying the material selected by the purchaser on the said order blank, and forwards the same to the respondent at its said place of business in Chicago, Ill., where the garment ordered is purportedly made from the material selected to the individual measurements of the purchaser of the garment.

PAR. 3. Made-to-measure or tailor-made clothing is understood by the trade and purchasing public generally to be and mean garments which are cut and made to the individual measurements of the person for whom intended. In order to make a made-to-measure or tailor-made garment as understood by the trade and purchasing public, it is necessary and essential that a person, experienced and skilled in taking and making measurements for such garments, measure the person for whom the garment is to be made, so as to convey to the tailor actually making the garment accurate and exact measurements and the information regarding the weight, height, general build and appearance, etc. of the person measured. To secure this information with any degree of accuracy and exactness requires experience and skill on the part of the person taking or making the measurements. There exists among the purchasing public the belief that made-to-measure or tailor-made garments fit with more accuracy than do garments which are not so made and there exists a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for made-to-measure or tailor-made garments.

PAR. 4. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its business and by the means and in the manner aforesaid, represents and implies to prospective purchasers of its said clothing that it will make for, and deliver to, purchasers of its clothing made-to-measure or tailor-made garments made from materials of the color, weave, and quality selected by purchasers from the samples exhibited by its salesmen or agents. In truth and in fact, in many instances, the garments delivered by the respondent to purchasers are not made-to-measure or tailor-made garments, as that term is understood by the purchasing public as above alleged. Because of the lack of experience and skill on the part of its salesmen or agents in making and taking measurements and securing accurate information regarding the weight, height, general build and appearance, etc. of purchasers or because of the lack of skill on the part of its workmen in making the garments, the garments delivered do not fit in the same manner as do made-to-measure or tailor-made garments and in some instances do not fit at all or with any reasonable relation to the individual to whom they are delivered. In many instances, the garments delivered to purchasers are so cut and constructed that it is not possible for expert tailors by alteration to make them fit and the respondent fails and refuses to return the purchase money received from the purchasers of said garments or to deliver to them garments that will fit.

PAR. 5. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, represents to purchasers of its said clothing that it will make for, and deliver to, them garments made from materials of the color, weave, and quality selected by such purchasers from the samples furnished to its salesmen or agents by the respondent and by said salesmen or agents exhibited to said purchasers.

In truth and fact, in many instances, the respondent does not deliver to a purchaser a garment made from the material selected by such purchaser, but delivers a garment made from a material which it has substituted for the material selected by the purchaser and which is different in color and weave from, and inferior in quality to, the material selected by the customer. The respondent in such instances fails and refuses to return the purchase money received or to deliver a garment made from the material selected.

PAR. 6. Respondent's salesmen or agents, in soliciting the sale of its said clothing and for the purpose of inducing prospective purchasers to purchase said clothing, represent to many such prospective purchasers that delivery will be made to them by the salesman or agent in person so as to afford purchasers an opportunity to inspect the garment ordered as to the material from which made and as to its fit prior to the time payment is made of the balance of the purchase money due the respondent. In truth and fact, in many such instances, the garment is shipped to the purchaser by parcel post, cash on delivery for the balance of the purchase money, and no inspection is permitted; and the respondent fails and refuses to return the purchase money received or to permit inspection of the garment before delivery is made.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts, practices, and methods of the respondent have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive many purchasers and cause them erroneously to believe that the garments sold by the respondent are made-to-measure or tailor-made garments, as those terms are understood by the purchasing public; that the garments ordered will be made from the materials selected by the purchasers and will be delivered by the person taking the order, and that inspection will be permitted prior to the payment of the balance of the purchase money to the respondent. Said acts, practices, and methods have the capacity and tendency to and do cause many prospective purchasers, because of said erroneous beliefs, to purchase clothing from the respondent, thereby unfairly diverting trade in said commerce to the respondent from its competitors who do not use the acts, practices, and methods used by the respondent, to the substantial injury of said competitors and to the injury of the public.

PAR. 8. The above alleged acts, practices, and methods of the respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of the competitors of respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of the Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer, briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Pike-Hansen, Inc., is a corporation existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its office and principal place of business at 1113 North Franklin Street, in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois, and it is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged in the business of offering for sale and selling men's clothing through salesmen or agents who travel throughout the United States soliciting and accepting orders for such clothing. Respondent causes said clothing, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the States of the United States other than the State of Illinois.

Respondent is in substantial competition with other corporations and with associations, partnerships, and persons engaged in commerce between and among the several States of the United States in the business of selling and distributing men's clothing. Among the competitors of the respondent are many who sell their clothing in said commerce through salesmen or agents and who do not use the acts, practices, and methods in the sale thereof used by the respondent in the sale of its clothing as hereinafter set out.

PAR. 2. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, employs approximately 500 salesmen or agents located at various points throughout the United States to solicit and accept orders for its said clothing. These salesmen or agents are equipped by the respondent with order blanks, containing spaces for the taking of the individual measurements of each purchaser, and with samples of materials from which the purchasers make selections as to color, weave, and quality of the material from which the suit or other garment ordered is to be made. The prices at which said clothing is sold vary according to the quality of the material selected and said salesmen or agents collect from the purchasers of said clothing a substantial part of the agreed purchase price at the time the order is accepted and the balance of the purchase price is to be paid when the purchase is delivered. When a salesman or agent sells a garment such salesman or agent takes the measurements of the purchaser and places this and other information regarding the weight, height, general build and appearance, etc., of the purchaser, together with a number identifying the material selected by the purchaser on the said order blank, and forwards the same to the respondent at its said place of business in Chicago, Ill., where the garment ordered is purportedly made from the material selected to the individual measurements of the purchaser of the garment.

PAR. 3. Made-to-measure or tailor-made clothing is understood by the trade and purchasing public generally to be and mean garments which are cut and made to the individual measurements of the person for whom intended. In order to make a made-to-measure or tailor-made garment as understood by the trade and purchasing public, it is necessary and essential that a person experienced and skilled in taking and making measurements for such garments, measure the person for whom the garment is to be made, so as to convey to the tailor actually making the garment accurate and exact measurements and information regarding the weight, height, general build and appearance, of the person for whom the garment is to be made. To secure this information with any degree of accuracy and exactness requires experience and skill on the part of the person taking the measurements. There exists among the purchasing public the belief that made-to-measure or tailor-made garments fit with more accuracy than do garments which are not so made and there exists a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public for made-to-measure or tailor-made garments.

PAR. 4. Respondent represents and implies to prospective purchasers of its said clothing that it will make for, and deliver to, purchasers of its clothing made-to-measure or tailor-made garments made from material of the color, weave, and quality selected by purchasers from the samples exhibited by its salesmen or agents. In truth and in fact, in many instances, the garments delivered by the respondent to purchasers are not made-to-measure or tailor-made garments, as that term is understood by the purchasing public. Because of the lack of experience and skill on the part of its salesmen or agents in making and taking measurements and securing accurate information regarding the weight, height, general build and appearance of purchasers or because of the lack of skill on the part of its workmen in making the garments, the garments delivered do not fit in the same manner as do made-to-measure or tailor-made garments and in some instances do not fit at all or with any reasonable relation to the individual to whom they are delivered. In many instances, the garments delivered to purchasers are so cut and constructed that it is not possible for expert tailors by alteration to make them fit and the respondent fails and refuses to return the purchase money received from the purchasers of said garments or to deliver to them garments that will fit.

PAR. 5. Respondent represents to purchasers of its said clothing that it will make for, and deliver to, them garments from materials of the color, weave, and quality selected by such purchasers from the samples furnished to its salesmen or agents exhibited to said purchasers.

In truth and fact, in many instances, the respondent does not deliver to a purchaser a garment made from the material selected by such purchaser, but delivers a garment made from a material which it has substituted for the material selected by the purchaser, and which is different in color and weave from, and inferior in quality to, the material selected by the customer. The respondent in such instances fails and refuses to return the purchase money received or to deliver a garment made from the material selected.

PAR. 6. Respondent's salesmen, or agents, in soliciting the sale of its said clothing and for the purpose of inducing prospective purchasers to purchase said clothing, represent to many such prospective purchasers that delivery will be made to them by the salesmen or agent in person so as to afford purchasers an opportunity to inspect the garment ordered as to the material from which made and as to its fit prior to the time payment is made of the balance of the purchase money due the respondent. In truth and fact, in many such instances, the garment is shipped to the purchaser by parcel post, cash on delivery for the balance of the purchase money, and no inspection is permitted; and the respondent fails and refuses to return the purchase money received or to permit inspection of the garment before delivery is made.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid acts, practices, and methods of the respondent have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive many purchasers and cause them erroneously to believe that the garments sold by the respondent are made-to-measure or tailor-made garments as those terms are understood by the purchasing public; that the garments ordered will be made from the materials selected by the purchasers and will be delivered by the person taking the order, and that inspection will be permitted prior to the payment of the balance of the purchase money to the respondent. Said acts, practices, and methods have the capacity and tendency to and do cause many prospective purchasers, because of said erroneous beliefs, to purchase clothing from the respondent, thereby unfairly diverting trade in said commerce to the respondent from its competitors who do not use the acts, practices, and methods used by the respondent, to the substantial injury of said competitors and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent Pike-Hansen, Inc., a corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer filed herein on February 24, 1937, by respondent admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Pike-Hansen, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of clothing for men in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That clothing sold by it is made-to-measure or tailor-made, unless and until such clothing is actually and accurately made by competent tailors to fit the customer in accordance with his correct measurements taken by a person who is competent to take such measurements;

2. That it will make clothing from materials of the color, weave and quality selected by customers from samples exhibited, unless and until the clothing is made from material of the color, weave and quality selected;

Order

3. That customers will be afforded an opportunity to inspect clothing purchased prior to the time full payment for the clothing is made, unless and until such inspection is permitted.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF MUTUAL STORES, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2550. Complaint, Sept. 12, 1935—Decision, Mar. 25, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in the general business of merchandising in the District of Columbia, and in operating two stores therein, perfected a number of years theretofore chiefly to engage in purchase and resale at retail of surplus, reject and refuse goods procured from the Army and Navy, which (1) were sold in substantial quantities thereby during the early 1920's, but sale of which (2) began to be curtailed sharply about 1927 and during the two or three years immediately preceding, because of exhaustion of the supplies thereof, and which (3) since 1932 were not available in any substantial quantity through retail stores of type operated by it, and since 1935 and 1936, virtually not at all—

Placed its corporate name, with words "Men's Wear," "Shoes," etc., and "Army and Navy Goods," in large and conspicuous signs about its mercantile establishment and in other advertising literature, notwithstanding facts aforesaid, and that at no time since its organization had it ever procured or possessed any quantity of such surplus, reject and refuse goods in excess of five percent of its total inventory;

With the result that various members of the purchasing public formed the conclusion or received the impression and belief from words "Army and Navy" that goods to be purchased in its stores were substantially all, if not all, procured from the Army and Navy, and were of the quality and nature used thereby, and that by reason of such fact a better quality merchandise at substantial savings in price was obtained from its said stores, and substantial number of such members were induced, by virtue of such beliefs or impressions, to make purchases of and from it, and with tendency and capacity thus to mislead and deceive such members, and with effect of unfairly diverting trade to it from its competitors who sell and offer to sell merchandise identical with bulk of its inventory and procured, like it, from same source and ordinary marts of trade, but who do not make use of such misleading and deceptive practice; to be substantial injury of substantial competition in said District:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiner.

Mr. Alden S. Bradley for the Commission.

Mr. Alfred M. Schwartz, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Mutual Stores, Inc., hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The said respondent, Mutual Stores, Inc., is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the District of Columbia, and having and maintaining its principal office and place of business in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, and said respondent is now and has been for at least one year previous hereto, engaged in the general business of merchandising.

During the course of merchandising on the part of the respondent, the said respondent has maintained a constant and current course of commerce within the District of Columbia and has sold and has caused to be sold various and different articles of merchandise in which the respondent deals to various dealers and members of the purchasing public within the District of Columbia, in connection with and in the course of which sales respondent has caused and still causes merchandise in which it deals to be transported from its place of business into and through the various parts of the District of Columbia to purchasers located therein.

In the course and conduct of its aforesaid business, respondent is and has been in substantial competition with other individuals, co-partnerships, and corporations engaged in the selling and transportation of like merchandise within the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. For the period last above related, said respondent has operated under the corporate name of Mutual Stores, Inc., and during the course and conduct of its business has advertised and caused to be advertised by it through the medium of certain legends, signs and symbols falsely indicating and suggesting by inference that the said respondent does, in fact, deal exclusively in goods supplied by the Army and Navy Departments of the United States Government, when, in fact, it does not.

Complaint

24 F. T. C.

The following statement was contained in the advertisements of the respondent:

MUTUAL STORES, INC.Army and Navy Goods*Men's Wear—Shoes. Sport Goods—Luggage

The said respondent further caused to be listed under the classified heading of the telephone directory of the city of Washington, District of Columbia, the name of its business, the telephone number of the same and the further descriptive words "Army and Navy Goods Business."

The practices of respondent as stated have had and have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that the goods to be purchased of the respondent are derived from the Army and Navy Departments of the United States Government when in fact they are not. In truth and in fact none of the stock of merchandise of said respondent is purchased from the Army and Navy or at any Army and Navy surplus or refuse goods sales. The small amount of such Army and Navy goods carried by said respondent, if any, is bought from jobbers, wholesalers, and others who buy at such Army and Navy refuse goods sales. The remainder of the said respondent's stock of merchandise consists of the usual stock found in general merchandise establishments and is purchased in the marts of commerce in which the general merchant buys his stock of goods. The said respondent is in no way connected with the Army and Navy, and the major portion of the stocks of goods, wares, and merchandise as offered for sale by respondent consists of ordinary goods, wares, and merchandise as derived from the common marts of trade and not from the Army and Navy Departments of the United States, except solely goods not readily marketable and which have been purchased by the respondent some years previously hereto and which said goods are in minute quantities.

PAR. 3. There are among the competitors of said respondent individuals, partnerships, copartnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of like and similar materials and merchandise within the District of Columbia, which said individuals, partnerships, copartnerships and corporations do not misrepresent their merchandise by the use of a false and misleading advertisement or advertisements as to the source of origin or the quality of material so advertised.

PAR. 4. The acts alleged to have been done by the respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of a substantial number of the competitors of the respondent in interstate commerce, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on September 12, 1935, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Mutual Stores, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Alden S. Bradley, attorney for the Commission, before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in defense of the allegations of the complaint by Alfred M. Schwartz, attorney for the respondent, 643 Munsey Building, Washington, D. C.; and said testimony and evidence was duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in defense thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Mutual Stores, Inc., is a corporation existing under and by virtue of the laws of the District of Columbia and having and maintaining its principal office and place of business in the city of Washington in the District of Columbia. It is now, and has been for more than two years, engaged in the general business of merchandising. Respondent operates two stores in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, one located at 9th and E Streets, N. W. and the other located at 9th and D Streets, NW.

PAR. 2. The present corporation was perfected in 1928, by one Nathan Shapiro and Herbert Silverstone, chiefly for the purpose of engaging in the purchase and resale at retail of surplus, reject, and refuse goods procured from the Army and Naval Departments of the United States Government. Since the date of its organization the respondent has been unable to secure from said Army and Navy Departments of the United States Government or from other sources a substantial quantity of surplus, reject, or refuse goods and has never and does not now procure or possess any quantity of such goods in excess of 15 percent of its total inventory.

PAR. 3. During the years 1922, 1923, and 1924, the Army and Navy Departments of the United States Government sold, or were responsible for the sale of, a substantial quantity of surplus, reject, and refuse goods; but about the year 1927 and the two or three years immediately prior thereto began sharply to curtail, because of the exhaustion of the supply of such goods, the sale of surplus, reject, and refuse goods; and since the year 1932 there has not been available for sale and offered for sale for resale through retail stores of the type operated by the respondent any substantial quantity of surplus, reject, and refuse goods from the Army and Navy Departments of the United States Government. During the years 1935 and 1936 virtually no goods fit for resale in retail stores, such as those operated by the respondent, have been offered for sale by these Departments.

The goods formerly offered for sale by the Army and Navy Departments of the United States Government were ultimately purchased for the conduct of retail stores and for sale to the retail trade by the respondent and various persons, partnerships, and other corporations engaged in the conduct of retail mercantile establishments approximately identical with the mercantile establishments of the respondents.

The inventory of the respondent reflects the decrease in the surplus, refuse, and reject goods of the Army and Navy Departments of the United States Government offered for sale in that its inventory has never revealed more than 10 to 15 percent of its goods as being surplus, refuse, or reject goods from the Army and Navy Departments of the United States.

PAR. 4. There are no goods now being offered, nor, since the year 1932, have there been any substantial amount of goods offered for sale by the Army or Navy Department of the United States Government suitable for resale in retail establishments similar to those operated by the respondent.

PAR. 5. The respondent caused its merchandise to be advertised by placing its corporate name "Mutual Stores, Inc." "Men's Wear," "Shoes," "Sport Goods," "Luggage," and "Army and Navy Goods" in large and conspicuous signs about its mercantile establishment located at 9th & D Streets, NW., Washington, D. C. and in other advertising literature.

PAR. 6. Various members of the purchasing public upon observing the words "Army and Navy" in connection with the advertising of the respondent have formed the conclusion, or received the impression and belief, that the goods to be purchased in respondent's stores were substantially all, if not all, procured from the Army and Navy Departments of the United States Government; that the goods were of the quality and nature used by said Departments; that, by reason of the fact that such goods were procured from the Army and Navy Departments of the United States Government, a better quality merchandise at a substantial savings in price was obtainable from the respondent's stores. A substantial number of such members of the purchasing public have been induced, by virtue of such beliefs or impressions, to make purchases of and from the respondent.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the words "Army" and "Navy" in connection with its corporate name, in its advertisements as above described, has the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the false impressions and beliefs as set forth in paragraph 6 hereof.

PAR. 8. The use of the words "Army" and "Navy" by the respondents in its advertising as above set out unfairly diverts trade to it from its competitors who sell and offer to sell merchandise identical with the bulk of the inventory of the respondent, and procured from the same source, i. e., the ordinary marts of trade, but who do not make use of such misleading and deceptive practice, and has caused and now causes substantial injury to substantial competition within the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Mutual Stores, Inc., are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by Alden S. Bradley, counsel for the Commission, and by Alfred M. Schwartz, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that the respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Mutual Stores, Inc., in connection with the conduct of its mercantile establishment within the District of Columbia, cease and desist from:

Using the words "Army and Navy," or either of them as descriptive of or with reference to any merchandise advertised and offered for sale or sold to the public, unless in fact the words "Army and Navy," or either of them, be used specifically in connection and conjunction with particular merchandise actually procured directly or indirectly, from the Army and Navy Departments of the United States Government.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

M. F. FOLEY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2752. Complaint, Mar. 30, 1936—Decision, Mar. 25, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in sale and distribution at wholesale of fish and other sea food—

Advertised a certain species of fish offered and sold by it, in price lists or bulletins distributed among customers and prospective customers, as "Deep Sea Whitefish Fillets," or as "Fresh Cusk Fillets (Deep Sea Whitefish)," or as "Deep Sea Whitefish Fillets (Cusk)," or as "D. S. Whitefish Fillets," notwithstanding fact said species, or cusk, as known to trade, was not that fresh water, Great Lakes species referred to by trade and consuming public as "Lake Erie whitefish," "Lake Superior whitefish," and "Selkirk whitefish," and also "whitefish," and so advertised and sold and known to such trade and public, and preferred to said salt water species, on the part of a substantial portion of such and purchasing public;

With effect of misleading and deceiving customer and prospective customer members thereof into erroneous belief that said representations were true, and that its said product, thus represented, was the fresh water whitefish, and with result that a substantial number of such customers and prospective customers and purchasing public bought its said product in such belief, and trade was unfairly diverted to it from its competitors, who do not misrepresent the nature and kind of their respective products; all to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiner.

Mr. Daniel J. Murphy for the Commission.

Mr. Thomas H. Walsh, of Boston, Mass., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that M. F. Foley Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as "respondent," has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

24 F. T. C.

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Massachusetts, with its principal place of business located at corner, Friend and Union Streets in the city of Boston, in the State of Massachusetts. It is now, and for some time past has been, engaged as a wholesaler in the sale and distribution of fish and other sea foods in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. It causes and has caused the said products, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of Massachusetts to purchasers thereof located in a State or States other than the State of Massachusetts. In the course and conduct of its business respondent was at all times herein referred to in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of similar products.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling its products in interstate commerce, caused the same to be advertised by means of price lists or bulletins distributed in interstate commerce among customers and prospective customers, and in which advertising matter certain species of the fish offered for sale and sold by the said respondent were variously designated, represented and referred to as "Deep Sea Whitefish Fillets," or as "Fresh Cusk Fillets (Deep Sea Whitefish), or as "Deep Sea Whitefish Fillets (Cusk)." Invoices distributed by the said respondent in interstate commerce alluded to said species as "D. S. Whitefish Fillet," when in truth and in fact said species were not that species of food fish known as "whitefish," but were species of food fish other than whitefish.

PAR. 3. There is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public for that species of food fish genuinely known as "whitefish" which is confined chiefly to the Great Lakes, rather than for that species of food fish found in the Atlantic Ocean and erroneously termed "whitefish."

PAR. 4. The representations by said respondent, as set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, are calculated to, and do, have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive customers and prospective customers of respondent and the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that the said representations made are true, and that the product so represented is of the species of food fish genuinely known as "whitefish," and to cause a substantial number of such customers, prospective customers and the purchasing public, acting on such belief, to buy said respondent's product, thereby diverting trade to said respondent from its competitors who do not misrepresent the nature and kind of their products, and thereby doing substantial injury to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 5. The acts and things above alleged to have been done and the false representations alleged to have been made by respondent are to the prejudice of the public and the competitors of respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on March 30, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent M. F. Foley Company, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Daniel J. Murphy, attorney for the Commission, before John J. Keenan, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Thomas H. Walsh, attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, M. F. Foley Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Massachusetts, with its principal place of business located in the city of Boston in the said Commonwealth. It is now, and for some time past has been, engaged as a wholesaler in the sale and distribution of fish and other sea food in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. It causes, and has caused, the said products, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in the State of Massachusetts to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Massachusetts.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business the respondent was at all times herein referred to in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondent, in soliciting the sale of, and selling, its products in commerce, as herein described, causes the same to be advertised by means of price lists or bulletins distributed in said commerce among customers and prospective customers, in which advertising matter certain species of the fish offered for sale, and sold, by the said respondent were variously designated, represented, and referred to as "Deep Sea Whitefish Fillets," or as "Fresh Cusk Fillets (Deep Sea Whitefish)," or as "Deep Sea Whitefish Fillets (Cusk)," or as "D. S. Whitefish Fillets." For a number of years fish of a species of fresh water fish found chiefly in the Great Lakes region of the United States have been advertised, sold, and known as "whitefish." They are referred to by the trade and the consuming public as "Lake Erie whitefish," "Lake Superior whitefish," and "Selkirk whitefish," and also "whitefish." The fish designated, represented, and described by the respondent in the manner above set forth were not fish of the species of fresh water fish found chiefly in the Great Lakes region of the United States and advertised, sold, and known to the trade and consuming public as "Lake Erie whitefish," "Lake Superior whitefish," "Selkirk whitefish," and "whitefish," but were fish of a species of salt water fish known to the trade as "cusk." There is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public for that species of fresh water fish known as "whitefish," rather than for that species of salt water fish known as "cusk."

PAR. 4. The representations made by said respondent, as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, are concluded to, and do, have the capacity and tendency to, and do, mislead and deceive customers and prospective customers of respondent, the same being members of the purchasing public, into the erroneous belief that the said representations are true, and that the product so represented is of the species of fresh water fish known as "whitefish." A substantial number of such customers, prospective customers, and the purchasing public, acting on such belief, have bought said respondent's product. As a result thereof, trade has been unfairly diverted to said respondent from its competitors who do not misrepresent the nature and kind of their respective products, all to the injury of competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, M. F. Foley Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, M. F. Foley Company, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of fish and other sea foods in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or indirectly, through the use of the word "whitefish," alone or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words, that fish of the species of salt water fish known and described as "cusk" are whitefish;

2. Representing, directly or indirectly, through the use of the word "whitefish," alone or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words, that fish of any species other than the species of fresh water fish found chiefly in the Great Lakes region of the United States and known to the trade and consuming public as "Lake Erie whitefish," "Lake Superior whitefish," "Selkirk whitefish," and "whitefish" are whitefish.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
THE CLARK GRAVE VAULT COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914, AND OF SEC. 3 OF TITLE I OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 16, 1933¹

Docket 2323. Complaint, Mar. 12, 1935—Decision, Mar. 19, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of air-seal type, ferrous metal burial vaults and in the sale thereof to jobbers and funeral directors and undertakers, in competition with those engaged in sale and transportation of metal, stone, concrete, cement and other burial vaults in commerce between and among the various States—

- (a) Represented through warranties issued by it and through advertisements in periodicals of wide interstate circulation, and through booklets, circulars, pamphlets, letters, photographs, testimonials, and other advertising matter, and through its customers, authorized by it so to state in the sale and promotion of sale of its said vaults, that same would remain waterproof and airtight under ground for fifty years, and were so warranted, and that they were made of rust and corrosion resisting metal, proof against moisture and crumbling, and were waterproof and airtight and verminproof, and, buried, had an impenetrable seal and would afford positive and permanent protection to the coffin and body encased therein; and
- (b) Made use of "warranties" or "guarantees" in connection with sale and offer of its said vaults, which were issued by it through the jobber or funeral director and were intended to be, and in many cases were, delivered to ultimate purchasers of said product, and which guaranteed same for fifty years against entrance of water due to defective construction, rust or corrosion, and undertook therein to replace any vault, without cost to purchaser, found defective within the terms of such warranty within such fifty-year period, etc.;

The facts being that, while its said vaults were manufactured by it of highly refined grades of metal of high quality, made as carefully, accurately and thoroughly as possible by exact control of furnacing operations to make the best ferrous metal, that would resist, but not prevent, corrosion and tend to increase durability of such metals for a longer period of time than if impurities had not been removed therefrom, and said metals, by their very nature and texture, would not permit passage of water or air unless punctured, broken or partially destroyed by corrosion, said vaults, by virtue of the circumstances involved, would not, nevertheless, be entirely without moisture after burial, all soils are more or less corrosive and will eventually cause all ferrous metals to pit or corrode, and water, frequently present in graves due to many conditions, will, when present, touch said vaults and in time produce rust, beginning of corrosion, which, once started, will usually continue until puncture of metal, and said vaults were not rust or corrosion proof or rust or corrosion resistant to the extent that they would never rust or corrode after burial, nor wholly proof against moisture, or against crumbling after burial, conjunction of conditions, as respects airseal principle employed in vaults in question, which does not always exist, must obtain in order for same to provide protection from entering water, and said vaults were not waterproof in the sense that no water whatsoever could enter same, nor impenetrable, except for period prior to the puncture of the metal by rust and corrosion or other causes, depending, in variable conditions, on character of soil and climatic and other conditions prevailing in territory involved, and were not airtight or verminproof, and would not give lasting protection to contents thereof for any known period of time;

With capacity and tendency to induce public to purchase and use its said vaults in the belief that such statements and representations were true, and unfairly to divert trade to it from its aforesaid competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. E. J. Hornibrook for the Commission.

Sharp, Schooler, Toland & Herbert, of Columbus, Ohio, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Acting in the public interest and pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission charges that the Clark Grave Vault Company, a corporation hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is now using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and in violation of an Act of Congress approved June 16, 1933, known and designated as the "National Industrial Recovery Act," and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, states its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent is the Clark Grave Vault Company, a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its factory and principal place of business located in the city of Columbus in said State. It is now and has been for several years last past engaged in the business of manufacturing, and selling metal grave vaults used to encase coffins for the burial of the dead to purchasers thereof, many of whom reside outside of the State of Ohio, and when orders are received therefor they are filled by respondent by shipping the same from the said city of Columbus in the State of Ohio, into and through other States of the United States to the respective places of business or the residences of such purchasers.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is in competition with other individuals, copartnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and transportation of metal, stone, concrete, cement, and other grave vaults between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondent sells and ships said vaults, as aforesaid, to jobbers, funeral directors, and undertakers, the last two of which sell the same to ultimate purchasers thereof for use in the burial of their dead.

PAR. 4. (A) In magazines having a wide interstate circulation, and in booklets, circulars, pamphlets, letters, and in and through the use of photographs, testimonials, and in other advertising media, all of which is circulated among its customers and prospective customers residing in the States of the United States, and which respondent's said customers use and are authorized by respondent to use in the sale and in the promotion of the sale of its said vaults, the following false and misleading claims, statements and representations as to respondent's said vaults are made:

That the said grave vaults will remain waterproof and airtight when placed under ground for a period of fifty (50) years; that they afford positive and permanent protection to the coffin and body encased therein; that Clark created the waterproof, all-metal vault with its impenetrable air-seal; that the Clark vault is an accepted part of the modern burial service; that it is complete and lasting protection; that it assures comfort and peace of mind to those who must "carry on"; that Clark's vaults are made of specially processed, rust and corrosion resisting metal which is proof against moisture and against crumbling; that each Clark vault is critically tested under 5,000 pounds of water for air- and water-tightness, and is warranted for fifty (50) years or more.

(B) Respondent issues with each vault, for delivery to ultimate purchasers thereof, and they are so delivered, a written, purported warranty which provides in substance that every Clark vault is submitted to a rigid test by being completely submerged under two and one-half (2½) tons of water to prove that it is absolutely water- and air-tight, and that: entering such vault from the grave due to defective construction, rust or corrosion.

Any such vault found to be defective within the terms of this warranty will be replaced within said fifty-year period without cost to the purchaser. It is understood that cinders and other highly corrosive material must not be used in filling grave and that vault must be buried level.

PAR. 5. The statements and representations described in subdivision (A) of the preceding paragraph are false and misleading in that respondent's said grave vaults will not always remain watertight or airtight for a period of fifty (50) years or any definite period when buried under ground; that respondent's said vaults when buried under ground do not always afford positive or permanent protection to the body or coffin encased therein; that the air-seal of respondent's vaults is not impenetrable; that the Clark vault is not an accepted part of the modern funeral service; that the Clark vault does not afford complete and lasting protection; that the Clark vaults are not made of rust and corrosion resisting metal; that the metal of which Clark's vaults are made is not proof against crumpling; that the tests made of the Clark vaults before shipment are not sufficient to assure that they will remain in all cases watertight or airtight; that respondent's said vaults are made of metals which will corrode; there is a vast difference in the corrosive properties of soils throughout the United States; in some soils respondent's said vaults will pit and corrode in a period of from three (3) to ten (10) years, and in others from ten (10) to twenty (20) years; that respondent's said vaults have not been tested under ground for a period of fifty (50) years, nor has the metal of which they are made been so tested; that respondent's said vaults will corrode and pit so as to let water into them; that in many instances they will corrode and rust so as to cave in or collapse; that respondent's said vaults when buried under ground are not airtight or waterproof and will, and often do permit water or air to enter therein. Either air or water entering respondent's vaults when buried underground promote and cause disintegration of the coffin and body encased in said vaults. Water often enters the graves of the dead. The mechanism provided by respondent for sealing its said vaults will not at all times prevent the entrance of water into said vaults to an extent where the coffin is damaged.

The statements and representations described in subdivision (B) of paragraph 4 hereof are false and misleading and deceptive in that the terms "waterproof" and "airtight" as used by respondent as aforesaid mean to the ultimate purchaser thereof a watertight, airtight vault; a vault which will not permit water or air to enter the same and that will endure as such under burial conditions. The respondent's said vaults are not waterproof nor airtight as the terms are understood by the ultimate purchaser thereof. Water or air may seep into or enter the said vaults through the walls, joints, weldings, and flanges thereof, or pin holes due to rust or corrosion, or due to collapse or bending of the vault.

These said warranties contain a clause to the effect that the Clark Grave Vault Company warrant such vaults for a period of fifty (50) years from the date of purchase thereof against water entering such vault from the grave due to defective construction, rust or corrosion. The exhumations of bodies after burial are so rare as to make these certificates or warranties worthless to the purchasers of such vaults for the reason that no opportunity is afforded them to ascertain whether such vaults have or have not been airtight or waterproof. These said purported warranties are not warranties, but are merely sales persuaders under the terms of which respondent will rarely, if ever be called upon to replace said vaults. It is false and misleading for respondent to call them warranties or to issue them. Ultimate purchasers are induced to buy respondent's said vaults because of said warranties.

PAR. 6. Each and all of the said false and misleading representations used by respondent as set out in paragraph 4 hereof have and have had the capacity and tendency to induce the public to purchase and use respondent's said grave vaults in the belief that they are true, and have and have had the tendency and capacity to divert trade from said competitors of respondent.

PAR. 7. The acts and practices of respondent above set forth are all to the prejudice of the public and to respondent's said competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio with its factory and principal place of business located in the city of Columbus in said State. Respondent is now, and for several years last past has been engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing metal grave vaults used to encase coffins in the burial of the dead, to purchasers thereof located at points in the State of Ohio, and at points in various other States of the United States, and causes said products when so sold to be transported from its principal place of business in the City of Columbus, Ohio, to the purchasers thereof in the State of Ohio, and to other purchasers thereof in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective places of business, and there is now, and has been for several years last past, a course of trade and commerce by the said respondent in said product in the State of Ohio, and between and among the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia:

PAR. 2. As grounds for this paragraph of its complaint, the Federal Trade Commission reiterates, adopts, and relies upon all matters and things set out in paragraphs 2 to 7 inclusive of count 1 hereof, as each and all of the allegations of same were set out in full in said paragraph.

PAR. 3. On November 4, 1933, under and pursuant to the provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act, the President of the United States made, issued, and approved a Code of Fair Competition for the Funeral Supplies Industries, which became effective on the tenth day thereafter. The respondent herein was a party to and signatory of such Code of Fair Competition, and such Code is now in full force and effect as to this respondent.

The said National Industrial Recovery Act (Section 3, Paragraph B) provides:

After the President shall have approved any such code, the provisions of such code shall be the standards of fair competition for such trade or industry, or supervision thereof. Any violation of such standards in any transaction in or affecting interstate or foreign commerce shall be deemed an unfair method of competition in commerce within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended; but nothing in this title shall be construed to impair the power of the Federal Trade Commission under such Act, as amended.

In Article IX of said Code, under the heading "Trade Practices," appears the following:

1. The following practices constitute unfair methods of competition and are prohibited:

* * * * *

(r) To resort to or indulge in practices which are prejudicial to the public interest, such as:

Misbranding.

Misrepresentation in branding, labeling, selling and advertising.

* * * * *

(w) Nothing in this Code shall limit the effect of any adjudication by the Courts or holding by the Federal Trade Commission on complaint, finding, and order, that any practice or method is unfair; providing, that such adjudication or holding is not inconsistent with any provision of the Act or of this Code.

Notwithstanding the said provisions of said Code of Fair Competition respondent has continued to and does use such methods of competition herein alleged and described and has resorted to or indulged in the practice of misrepresentation in branding and labeling and selling, or advertising his said vaults in the manner hereinabove set forth.

The above alleged methods, acts, and practices of respondent are and have been in violation of the standards of fair competition as set forth in said Code of Fair Competition for the said Funeral Supplies Industry of the United States. Such violations in the aforesaid transactions in interstate commerce and in other transactions which affect interstate commerce in the manner set forth above are in violation of Section (3) of the National Industrial Recovery Act, and they are unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on the 12th day of March, A. D., 1935, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, The Clark Grave Vault Company, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, a stipulation as to the facts was agreed upon by and between W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, and respondent, by which it was agreed that, subject to the approval of the Commission, the statement of facts so agreed upon should be taken as the facts in this proceeding, and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto. It was further agreed that the said Commission might proceed upon such statement of facts, including inferences drawn from said stipulated facts, to issue its report stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding, without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Said stipulation as to the facts has been duly filed in the office of the Commission, and approved by it.

Thereafter the proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, and the statement of facts as agreed upon in lieu of testimony, briefs and argument having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom :

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, The Clark Grave Vault Company, is a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of Ohio, with its factory and principal place of business located in the city of Columbus, in said State. It is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling metal grave vaults, used to encase coffins for the burial of the dead, to purchasers thereof, many of whom reside outside of the State of Ohio. Orders received for such burial vaults are filled by respondent shipping the same from the said city of Columbus, in the State of Ohio, into and through other States of the United States to such purchasers.

PAR. 2. In the sale and transportation of its burial vaults, respondent is in competition with other individuals, copartnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and transportation of metal, stone, concrete, cement, and other burial vaults in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondent sells and ships said vaults to jobbers, funeral directors and undertakers, the last two of which sell the same to ultimate purchasers thereof for use in the burial of their dead.

PAR. 4. Respondent has used advertisements in magazines having a wide interstate circulation, and has used booklets, circulars, pamphlets, letters, photographs, testimonials, and other advertising media, which it has circulated, or caused to be circulated, among its said customers and prospective customers, in which the statements and representations set forth and described in paragraph 5 hereof were made.

PAR. 5. In addition to the warranty described in paragraph 18 hereof, respondent's customers, prior to filing of complaint, used, and were authorized by respondent to use, in the sale and in the promotion of the sale of its said vaults, the following claims, statements, and representations as to its said vaults :

(a) Said grave vaults will remain water-proof and air-tight when placed underground for a period of fifty (50) years;

(b) Said grave vaults afford positive and permanent protection to the coffin and body incased therein;

(c) Clark created the water-proof, all-metal vault with its impenetrable air seal;

- (d) Clark vault is an accepted part of the modern burial service;
- (e) The Clark vault is a complete and lasting protection;
- (f) The Clark vault assures comfort and peace of mind to those who must "carry on";
- (g) Clark vaults are made of specially processed rust and corrosion-resisting metal, which is proof against moisture and against crumbling;
- (h) Each Clark vault is critically tested under 500 pounds of water for air- and water-tightness, and is warranted for 50 years or more.

PAR. 6. A corpse, either embalmed or not embalmed, is in the process of decay and disintegration at the time of its burial. The process of embalming is a method of injecting certain fluids into the corpse for the purpose of delaying or retarding such decay and disintegration of the corpse for a temporary period of time, not permanently.

PAR. 7. Respondent's air-seal vaults are intended to protect the corpse, contained therein, during the life of the metal of which they are made, against accelerated decay and disintegration through damage produced or caused by water entering such vault and rising therein to such height as to touch the bottom of the casket.

PAR. 8. Respondent has been engaged in the manufacture and sale of air-seal type, sometimes commonly referred to as the "diving bell" principle, ferrous metal burial vaults, for about thirty-five (35) years. It is now using, and has used, 12 gauge Armco Ingot Iron, manufactured and processed by The American Rolling Mill Company, of Middletown, Ohio, and 12 gauge Keystone Copper Steel manufactured and processed by The American Sheet and Tinplate Company, of Pittsburgh, Pa. These metals purchased by the respondent, and used in the manufacture of its said vaults, are highly refined grades of metal, carefully made under the best modern scientifically controlled iron and steel making processes. They are high quality metals made as carefully, accurately and thoroughly as they can be made by exact control of furnacing operations to make the best ferrous metal that will resist, but not prevent, corrosion in the sense that the high quality of these metals tends to retard and slow the rate of corrosion and tends to increase their durability under ground for a longer period of time than if the impurities were not removed from the metal and if the metal had not been so highly refined and freed from those impurities which accelerate the process of rusting or corrosion.

These metals, by their very nature and texture, will not permit the passage of water or air through them during the life thereof unless they are punctured, broken or partially destroyed by rust or corrosion.

PAR. 9. The dome of the vaults of respondent, before being placed upon the market, is tested by being submerged under six (6) feet of water in an upright position without the pan being placed under it, to determine that there are no defects in its manufacture by which air is permitted to escape from, or water to enter through, the metal of which the dome is made. No vault is shipped by respondent until the dome of said vault has been so tested and found to have no defect in its material or its welds, by which air escapes from or water enters through said metal.

PAR. 10. Respondent's metal burial vaults, after burial, will not be entirely without moisture in them, because the human body, whether dead or alive, is composed largely of water and other fluids, and the air in the dome contains moisture; therefore, moisture to a certain extent will be present in every burial vault used in the burial of the dead.

PAR. 11. Respondent's vaults, made of ferrous metals, are not rust-proof, corrosionproof, rust resisting, or corrosion resisting to the extent that they will never rust or corrode after burial underground.

PAR. 12. Respondent's vaults, made of ferrous metals, are not always proof against moisture entering said vaults, or forever proof against crumbling after burial underground.

PAR. 13. Respondent's vault, made of ferrous metals, have not and will not always give positive, permanent, complete or lasting protection to the casket therein, or remain waterproof and airtight, under every burial condition, for any definitely known fixed or stated period of time.

PAR. 14. When the dome or hood of said vaults has been punctured, due to corrosion or other causes, they cease to be waterproof.

PAR. 15. Respondent's vaults after burial in the earth are not waterproof in the sense that no water whatsoever can enter within the vault underneath the bottom of the casket and are not impenetrable except for the period before rust and corrosion or other causes have punctured the metal, under every burial condition, as the life of metal burial vaults depends upon the character of the soil in which they are interred and upon the climatic and other conditions prevailing in the territory where interment is made.

Also, in order for said vaults to provide protection of the casket and body placed therein from the effects of water entering from the grave, they must be buried and remain buried under the following conditions, which are:

No. 1. The hood of the air-seal vault must not be defective and the metal and welds must be airtight.

No. 2. The vault should be buried level.

No. 3. The vault should be buried in the surface of the bottom of the grave and have no earth or other material which occupies the empty space underneath the pan.

No. 4. There should be no change in temperature after its burial.

No. 5. There should be no change in barometric pressure after its burial.

These said conditions do not obtain in all conditions of burial where said vaults are used.

Condition No. 1 is essential for the successful operation of the air-seal principle of said vaults. Conditions Nos. 2 and 3 affect these air-seal vaults unfavorably to a more or less degree, in that they reduce the amount of confined air within the dome and also its pressure, when this vault is sealed by water rising above the lower edge of the hood, and thus the water within the hood tends to rise higher. A change in conditions Nos. 4 and 5 may affect these air-seal vaults favorably, or it may affect these vaults unfavorably and make the water rise higher within the hood, even though the air-seal principle is in operation. When changes in conditions 2, 3, 4, and 5 are sufficient to cause water to enter said vaults, and to touch the casket therein then such changes tend to damage the casket and the body contained therein.

PAR. 16. Respondent has ceased to use, and is not now using the terms "rust proof," "positive and permanent protection," "absolute protection," "absolute waterproof," and "complete and lasting protection."

PAR. 17. The respondent's vault, made of ferrous metals, is a receptacle consisting of two parts, (1) a pan or base and (2) a hood, dome or top, and is constructed and manufactured to operate on the principle of the diving bell or air-seal principle, when sealed by surface of water flowing across or rising to the edge or rim of the dome on all four sides, by which the air confined thereby in the inverted airtight dome resists and prevents the rise of the water level within the hood to a height sufficient to touch and damage the casket or its contents. It is constructed of one continuous piece of metal—made so by double welding. The pan or base, at the time of filing complaint, was made of one piece of metal, and consisted of a raised metal portion three (3) inches above the plane of the lower surface of a flat edge or flange, approximately $1\frac{1}{2}$ to $1\frac{3}{4}$ inches wide which extends entirely around the bottom of the vault and rests on the ground for support. The entire base resembles an inverted pan with holes pierced through it near its top edge. Raised portions, or bosses, hold the bottom of the casket $\frac{5}{8}$ of an inch above the top of the pan and $\frac{3}{8}$ inches above the grave floor. The bottom rim or flange of the hood, top or dome rests on this outside flange of the pan the thickness of the metal from the grave floor.

Respondent's vault is made on the same general principle as the air-seal vault made by the trade generally, including Gallion, Springfield, Champion, Perfection, National, and others, but varies in dimensions, workmanship, and design. This vault is not airtight until sealed by resisting water at a level flowing or standing across the bottom edge of dome from side to side and end to end, or at a level that reaches its highest point along the bottom edge of the vault. Water rising from the bottom of the grave compresses the air in the cavity, under the base and the dome or hood, and as the pressure of the outside water head increases the resistance of the compressed air in the dome or hood increases. Circulation of air from cavity under base into hood is provided by holes along the sides of and near the top of base, thereby there is but one body of air.

PAR. 18. The warranty issued by respondent at the time of the filing of the complaint herein is in the words and figures, following, to wit:

THE CLARK GRAVE VAULT COMPANY FIFTY YEAR WARRANTY

Superior Clark Grave Vaults made of Keystone copper steel or Armco Ingot Iron and to which the warranty below applies, may be identified by this imprint which appears on them, and which is our trademark of quality.

Every Clark Grave Vault—with bottom open is submitted to a rigid inspection and test by being completely submerged under two-and-one-half (2½) tons of water to prove it is absolutely water and airtight.

In consideration of the purchase and payment for the vault with which this warranty is issued, to be indorsed hereon as indicated below, The Clark Grave Vault Company does hereby warrant such vault for a period of fifty (50) years from the date of purchase indorsed hereon below against water entering such vault from the grave due to defective construction, rust or corrosion.

Any such vault found to be defective within the terms of this warranty will be replaced within said fifty-year period without cost to the purchaser. It is understood that cinders and other highly corrosive material must not be used in filling grave and that the vault must be buried level.

This warranty shall be valid only when dated and countersigned by funeral director at time of sale of such vault and nothing contained herein shall constitute a warranty on behalf of the company against damage to the casket from dehydration of the remains or any other cause not herein specifically mentioned.

In witness whereof, The Clark Grave Vault Company has hereunto subscribed its name by its President duly authorized thereunto by resolution of its Board of Directors.

The Clark Grave Vault Company
By Allen F. Beck, President.

Name of Purchaser _____
Funeral Director _____ Date _____
Interment of _____ in _____

The foregoing warranty is issued by respondent through the jobber of said vaults, or funeral directors, and is intended to be, and in many cases is, delivered to ultimate purchasers thereof by funeral directors, undertakers, morticians, or other persons selling the vaults.

PAR. 19. Respondent's vault, after burial level in a grave approximately six feet deep, so long as the metal is not punctured by rust or corrosion, is intended to prevent the water level in the surrounding ground from rising within the dome of such vault to such a height as to reach, touch, or damage the casket and its contents. The dome of the vault is not intended to be, and never is, airtight in the sense that there is, and can be, no air in it.

PAR. 20. Water frequently appears in graves due to many conditions, including weather. Where cemeteries are located on flat or low ground, water often will be found in graves thereof, particularly during the rainy seasons. Water in graves will touch these said vaults, and in time will produce rust thereon.

PAR. 21. Rust is the beginning of corrosion. Corrosion, once started on the vault, will usually continue until the metal is punctured, at which time the hood or dome will admit water through the hole created by such puncture.

PAR. 22. All soils are more or less corrosive and will eventually cause all ferrous metals to pit or corrode.

PAR. 23. The following statements and representations made by the respondent, its agents, employees, and representatives, in connection with the offering for sale, or selling in interstate commerce, the types of air-seal burial vaults manufactured by it at the time of filing of complaint herein, in certificates of warranty and in advertising, that:

(1) They will remain waterproof and airtight when placed underground for a period of fifty years;

(2) They will afford positive and permanent protection to the coffin and body encased therein;

(3) They are waterproof and have an impenetrable seal, when buried;

(4) They give complete and lasting protection;

(5) Clark vaults are made of rust and corrosion resisting metal, which is proof against moisture and against crumbling;

(6) They are absolutely waterproof and airtight;

(7) The Clark Grave Vault Company does hereby warrant such vault for a period of fifty (50) years against water entering such vault due to rust or corrosion;

(8) That such vaults are airtight, vermin proof, or waterproof, and give lasting protection to the corpse therein contained for any definitely known fixed or stated period of time when used for burial purposes;

And other statements or representations of like import are deceptive and have and have had the capacity and tendency to induce the public to purchase and use respondent's vault under the belief that said statements and representations are true, and have and have had the tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade to the respondent from its said competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, under the conditions described in the foregoing findings, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors; they are unfair methods of competition in commerce and constitute violations of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, and the stipulated facts filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That respondent, The Clark Grave Vault Company, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of the types of air-seal burial vaults manufactured by it at the time of filing of complaint herein, or any type of burial vault made of ferrous metal, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, in purported certificates of warranty, or guaranty, in advertising, or in any other manner, that its burial vaults, made of ferrous metal:

(a) Will remain waterproof and airtight when placed underground for a period of fifty (50) years, or for any fixed or stated period of time;

(b) Will afford positive and permanent protection to the coffin and body encased therein;

(c) Are waterproof and have an impenetrable seal, when buried;

(d) Will give complete and lasting protection;

(e) Are made of rust and corrosion resisting metal, which is proof against moisture and against crumbling;

(f) Are absolutely waterproof and airtight;

(g) Are warranted for a period of fifty (50) years against water entering such vault due to rust or corrosion;

(h) Are airtight, verminproof or waterproof, and give lasting protection to the corpse therein contained for any definitely known, fixed, or stated period of time, when used for burial purposes.

(2) From making other representations of like import; and

(3) From using "certificates of warranty" or "guaranty" in connection with the sale, or offering for sale, of such vaults, unless it clearly appears therein that such certificates refer to the care, skill, mechanism, and materials used in the construction of said vaults, and to tests made to determine whether they leak, and not to their durability as to remaining airtight, verminproof or waterproof, when used for burial purposes.

It is further ordered, That respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
HAVANA-FLORIDA CIGAR COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 23, 1914

Docket 2667. Complaint, Aug. 5, 1936¹—Decision, Mar. 29, 1937

Where the finest quality of cigar tobacco was grown in Cuba near Havana, and the word "Havana," or "Habana," had been used and understood since time immemorial by cigar purchasing and consuming public and cigar manufacturers and dealers of the United States as meaning said tobacco, which had long been imported therein and was widely and extensively there used and consumed in cigars made in whole, and in part only, from such tobacco, and which had the reputation, among the cigar consuming and purchasing public of the United States, as cigar tobacco of highest quality and excellence, with cigars made in whole or in part therefrom in large demand, and preferentially purchased by many cigar dealers and many of the consuming public, with many believing that use of such tobacco in cigars increases the quality and desirability thereof; and thereafter a corporation engaged in Florida in the manufacture, packing, branding, and labeling of various brands of cigars, for sale and distribution by it and its dealers to the purchasing and consuming public in the United States, through personal solicitation, circulars, and other communications with customers and prospective customers, and in competition with many who sell and distribute cigars composed in whole, and also cigars composed in part only, of Havana tobacco, and who rightfully and truthfully advertise, represent and label their said cigars as containing such tobacco, and with many who sell and distribute among the States cigars containing no such tobacco, but composed wholly of said product grown in the United States, or elsewhere than on the Island of Cuba, and who do not brand, label, advertise, or otherwise represent their said cigars as made of Havana or Cuban tobacco—

Sold and distributed, through personal solicitation of salesmen and through circulars and written correspondence, in large and substantial quantities, under such names and brands as "Garcia's Havana Smoker," cigars made by it to be sold at a price of two or five cents, and featured said name on the labels of the paper cigar bands and on various places upon the cigar boxes or containers in which sold in varying quantities, and so packed its two-for-five-cents "Hav-a-Good Cigar" in containers that word "Havana" in its corporate name appeared in juxtaposition with letters "Hav-a" of said last-named cigar's brand name, notwithstanding fact that cigars thus branded, labeled, and sold were made from a cheap grade of tobacco alleged to contain 1 percent of Cuban, but purchased ready-mixed from factories and dealers and consisting largely of clippings gathered from cigars in process of manufacture, and aforesaid cigars, thus branded, labeled, described, and advertised, contained no Havana tobacco nor tobacco grown on Island of Cuba in appreciable amount;

With effect of misleading and deceiving a large and substantial number of the purchasing and consuming public into buying its aforesaid cigars in the erroneous belief that they were composed, in whole or in large part, of Havana tobacco, or that grown on said Island of Cuba, and of placing in the hands of its dealers and distributors an instrumentality through which they might and did mislead and deceive the purchasing public, and with result, from such false and misleading representations, that consuming public was injured and trade was diverted to it from aforesaid competitors; to their injury and that of retail dealers and to the substantial injury of substantial competition in commerce, and to the prejudice of the buying public:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Marshall Morgan for the Commission.

AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT

Whereas, The Federal Trade Commission did heretofore, to wit, on December 20, 1935, issue its complaint herein charging and alleging that the respondent corporation is, and has been, guilty of unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914:

And whereas, This Commission, since the issuance of said complaint, has been advised that the respondent therein is, and has been, using unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce other than, and in addition to, those in relation to which the Commission issued its complaint aforesaid on December 20, 1935, in violation of the provisions of Section 5 of said Act;

Now, therefore, Acting in the public interest, pursuant to the provisions of the Act of September 26, 1914, aforesaid, the Federal Trade Commission charges that Havana Florida Cigar Company, Inc., has been, and now is, using unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce in violation of Section 5 of said Act, and states its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Havana Florida Cigar Company, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Florida, with its principal office and place of business at 501 North Madison Street, Quincy, Fla. Respondent is now and for more than three years last past has been engaged, as hereinafter described, in the business of manufacturing various brands of cigars and selling and distributing the same to dealers in various parts of the United States, more particularly in the States of Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia, and New York. The said cigars are manufactured by respondent in Quincy, Fla., where they are packed, branded, and labeled by respondent for sale and distribution by it and by its dealer-customers to the purchasing and consuming public of the United States. In consummating such sales and in distributing such products, respondent causes the cigars so sold to be transported and delivered from its place of business in Quincy, Fla., through and into various other States of the United States to the respective purchasers thereof at their respective points of location. In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent has been and is now engaged in direct and substantial competition with various corporations, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of cigars, and offering such products for sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and within the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The cigar originated in the Spanish West Indies. The finest quality of tobacco for cigar purposes is grown in Cuba, not far from the city of Havana. The word "Havana," also spelled "Habana," is the name and designation of the tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba, which name and designation is and has been since time immemorial used and understood by the cigar-purchasing and consuming public of the United States, and by cigar manufacturers and dealers throughout the United States, as meaning and designating tobacco which has been grown on the Island of Cuba. Said tobacco has long been imported into the United States and widely and extensively used and consumed therein in cigars manufactured in whole and in part only from such tobacco. Such Havana tobacco has the reputation among the cigar consuming and purchasing public of the United States as being cigar tobacco of highest quality and excellence, and cigars made in whole or in part from said tobacco are in large demand throughout the United States. Many of the cigar dealers and many of the consuming public of the United States prefer to purchase cigars containing Havana tobacco and have believed, and still believe, that the use of such Havana tobacco in cigars adds to and increases the quality and desirability of such cigars.

The outer leaf, or wrapper, of a cigar comprises about five per cent of the entire cigar, while the filler and binder, constituting ninety-five per cent of the cigar, are the controlling factors in its size, strength, and flavor. The filler controls, primarily, the designed length, thickness, and shape of the cigar as rolled into a binder or binder wrapper of desired size. A dark cigar can be mild if it has a mild filler and binder, while a light colored cigar can be quite strong if the filler and binder are of a strong grade of leaf. The filler of the cheapest grades of cigars, such as "2 for 5's", is composed principally of what is known as "scrap," being clippings from cigars in the process of manufacture.

PAR. 3. For a long period of years prior to the time respondent engaged in its said business, cigars composed wholly of Cuban tobacco were made in both Cuba and in the United States, and are now so made, for sale and consumption in the United States by manufacturers whose surname was "Garcia," and who respectively used and displayed, and still use and display, the said surname, either alone or in combination with the rest of their name, or with other words, on the bands of their cigars, or on the boxes or containers thereof, and on labels used in connection with the sale thereof.

For many years, persons in the cigar and tobacco trade, and many of the public purchasing cigars for consumption, have believed, and still believe, that cigars in connection with the sale of which the name "Garcia" so appeared or appears, were or are made by manufacturers named "Garcia," and of Cuban nationality or descent, and of Cuban grown tobacco exclusively, and that said cigars were and are of a quality superior to those made by many other manufacturers and superior in quality to cigars made wholly or in part of tobacco grown elsewhere than on the Island of Cuba, and in purchasing such cigars became accustomed to and still call for them either by the name of "Garcia" alone, or in combination with the remainder of the name of a manufacturer of that surname, or with the word "Havana," or other word or words denoting Cuban or Havana tobacco.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of respondent's business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, sales of cigars are made and purchase orders therefor obtained through and as a result of the personal solicitation of salesmen, the use of circulars and by means of written correspondence and other communications with respondent's customers and prospective customers. The said cigars, manufactured, sold and distributed competitively by respondent in interstate commerce, as set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, are and for several years last past have been sold and distributed by respondent in large and substantial quantities, under such names and brands, among others, as "Garcia's Havana Smoker," a brand manufactured to be sold at a price of 2 for 5¢. The following hereinafter described brands and labels have been affixed by respondent to the said cigar and to the containers thereof. The labels attached to the cigars themselves consist of a paper band placed by respondent around each cigar and bearing conspicuously the words "Havana Garcia's Smokers," printed in letters of red upon a label of yellow. The containers for such cigars are the usual and customary cigar boxes or cigar containers of varying capacities, holding from fifteen cigars up to fifty and a hundred. The labels and brands attached to each box or container have been designed and affixed thereto by respondent, and are as follows:

(1) Centered on the outside of the lid of the box is a label or brand bearing the words "GARCIA'S HAVANA SMOKER" in large black letters, on a background of brown. In the center, between the word "Garcia's" and the words "Havana Smoker", appear the following: "H. F. Co. Mild and Fragrant".

This same brand or label appears again on the inside of the top of the box, and in either of the two upper corners, printed on a black background, appears the legend "2 for 5¢".

On the outside of the box front, in black letters on a background of brown, appears the following: "Havana Smoker Claro 2 for 5¢".

This same wording is also found on either end of the larger boxes used by respondent in the sale and distribution of its above described cigars.

(2) Centered on the outside of another box or container is a band or label reading:

GARCIA'S SMOKERS
No Fancy Labels—Bands or Boxes
All the quality in the Cigars.

Said respondent also manufactures and sells the same or a similar brand under the name and designation:

Garcia Smoker Refills

Respondent also under the brand name "Hav-a-Good Cigar" sells two kinds of cigars, one made of genuine "Havana" tobacco, retailing for 5¢, and the other made wholly from domestic tobacco treated with a certain process hereinafter referred to and described, and retailing 2 for 5¢. The said cigars made of domestic tobacco, especially treated as aforesaid, are packed by respondent in a box in such a manner as to leave visible immediately to the left of the centered brand name, the first word of respondent's corporate name, that is, the word "Havana," the said word "Havana" being used in connection with, and appearing in juxtaposition with the first four letters of said brand name, that is, "Hav-a."

The said cigars, branded, labeled, and sold by respondent, respectively, as "Garcias Havana Smoker," "Garcias Smoker," "Garcia Smoker Refills," and the aforesaid "Hav-a-Good" brand made of domestic tobacco are and have been made from a cheap grade of tobacco alleged to contain 1% of Cuban tobacco. Tobacco used for this type of cigar may be purchased ready mixed from factories and dealers, and consists largely of clippings gathered from cigars in the process of their manufacture.

PAR. 5. Respondent's use of the word "Havana" in its corporate name and as a brand or label or part of a brand or label for cigars, and its use of the words "Garcia's" and "Garcia" are alleged to be predicated by respondent upon the following facts and circumstances:

Respondent company is now and for sometime past has been located at Quincy, Fla. Respondent at one time employed as foreman of its Quincy factory a man by the name of Raymond Garcia, who had theretofore operated a cigar factory at Havana, Fla. Some two and one-half years ago Garcia discovered a process of treating domestic tobacco with a solution made in the following manner:

Stems of Havana tobacco remaining after the tobacco is stripped from the leaf, and technically known as "Petroli," are purchased in bulk at Tampa, Fla., by respondent. Quantities of these stems are placed in barrels and water is added. The mixture is then allowed to ferment for three weeks, the liquid forming in the barrel becoming a sort of tobacco brew or vinegar. A quantity of domestic tobacco is then sprayed with such liquid, after which the domestic tobacco is allowed to heat. After the tobacco thus sprayed and treated is heated, and carefully watched for a number of days, it is sprayed again, then heated again, until in the view of respondent it develops the "certain mellowness" and "true flavor of real Havana tobacco." Said domestic tobacco so treated is thereafter used respectively as wrappers, binders, and filler in the manufacture of cigars.

Said respondent, as a result of said spraying procedure, employs the word "Havana" in its corporate name and the words "Havana" and "Garcia's" and "Garcia" singularly and in combination as brands or labels for cigars manufactured by it and advertised and sold by it in commerce.

PAR. 6. In truth and fact respondent's cigars, branded, labeled, described, and advertised, respectively, as "Garcias Havana Smoker," "Garcias Smoker," "Garcia Smoker Refills," and "2 for 5¢ Hav-a-Good," and sold by the respondent and by dealers to the purchasing and consuming public, as hereinbefore described, do not contain Havana tobacco, nor tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba, in any appreciable amount, nor have they at any time contained such tobacco in any appreciable amount, but are, and have been, manufactured entirely from, and wholly composed of, tobacco grown elsewhere than on the Island of Cuba. The use of the word "Havana" in said designation "Garcia's Havana Smoker" in respondent's corporate name and in connection with respondent's "2 for 5¢ Hav-a-Good" brand, and the use of the words "Garcia's" and "Garcia" in said designations "Garcia's Havana Smoker," "Garcia Smoker," and "Garcia Smoker Refills" in branding, labeling, describing, and advertising said cigars containing no Havana tobacco, or no Havana tobacco in appreciable amount, as hereinabove set forth, is misleading and has, and has had, the capacity and tendency to, and does and did, mislead and deceive a large and substantial number of the purchasing and consuming public into purchasing said cigars in the erroneous belief that they are and were composed, in whole or in large part, of Havana tobacco, that is, tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba.

PAR. 7. Among the competitors of respondent, referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, there are many who sell and distribute, in competition with respondent, cigars composed in whole and also cigars composed in part only of Havana tobacco, and who rightfully and truthfully advertise, represent, sell, and label such cigars as containing said Havana tobacco. There are also many of said competitors who sell and distribute between and among the several states in competition with respondent cigars containing no Havana tobacco and being composed wholly of tobacco grown in the United States or elsewhere than on the Island of Cuba, and who do not brand, label, advertise, or otherwise represent that said cigars are made of Havana or Cuban tobacco. There are also among the individuals, firms, and corporations referred to above who are and have been in competition with the respondent, some whose names are not "Garcia," and some who manufacture and sell cigars made of tobacco part of which only is grown in Cuba, or of tobacco grown elsewhere than in Cuba, and who do not brand or label, and have not been branding or labeling, the cigars made by them or the containers thereof, with the words "Garcia's" or "Garcia."

Respondent's so-called "Garcias Havana Smoker," "Garcias Smoker," "Garcia Smoker Refills," and "2 for 5¢ Hav-a-Good" are displayed, offered for sale, and sold to the consuming public by respondent, and in and by cigar stores and other dealer-establishments in competition with the said cigars of competitors. The respondent's use of the word "Havana" and of the words "Garcia" and "Garcias," as hereinabove described, in relation to a cigar having no Havana tobacco, or no appreciable amount of Havana tobacco, is false and misleading. As a result of such false and misleading representations on the part of respondent the consuming public is being, and has been, injured, trade is being, and has been, diverted to respondent from such competitors in interstate commerce, and thereby substantial injury is done, and has been done, by the respondent to substantial competition in interstate commerce, and there is, and has been, placed in the hands of respondent's dealers and distributors an instrument by means of which they mislead and deceive, and have misled and deceived, the purchasing public.

PÁR. 8. Said representations of respondent, contained in its brands, labels, advertisements, circulars, or other media through which the trade and consuming public are reached, have resulted in injury to respondent's competitors and to retail dealers and to the prejudice of the buying public, and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

This matter coming on to be heard by the Commission upon the record, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises;

It is ordered, That the case growing out of the amended and supplemental complaint hereinbefore issued on the 5th day of August, 1936, insofar as said case relates to the alleged unfair or misleading use of the word "Garcia" be, and the same hereby is, closed.

It is further ordered, That as to all other allegations growing out of the aforesaid amended and supplemental complaint, the case proceed to trial in accordance with the regular procedure of the Commission.

filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said amended complaint and the answer thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Havana-Florida Cigar Company, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Florida, with its principal office and place of business at 501 North Madison St., Quincy, Fla. Respondent is now, and for more than 3 years last past has been engaged, as hereinafter described, in the business of manufacturing various brands of cigars and selling and distributing the same to dealers in various parts of the United States, and more particularly in the States of Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia, and New York. The said cigars are manufactured by respondent in Quincy, Fla., where they are packed, branded, and labeled by respondent for sale and distribution by it and by its dealer-customers to the purchasing and consuming public of the United States. In consummating such sales and in distributing such products respondent causes the cigars so sold to be transported and delivered from its place of business in Quincy, Fla., through and into various other States of the United States to the respective purchasers thereof at their respective points of location. In the course and conduct of its business, the respondent has been, and is now, engaged in direct and substantial competition with various corporations, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of cigars, and offering such products for sale in commerce, between and among the various States of the United States and within the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The cigar originated in the Spanish West Indies. The finest quality of tobacco for cigar purposes is grown in Cuba, not far from the city of Havana. The word "Havana," also spelled "Habana," is the name and designation of the tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba, which name and designation is and has been since time immemorial used and understood by the cigar-purchasing and consuming public of the United States, and by cigar manufacturers and dealers throughout the United States, as meaning and designating tobacco which has been grown on the Island of Cuba. Said tobacco has long been imported into the United States and widely and extensively used and consumed therein in cigars manufactured in whole and in part only from such tobacco. Such Havana tobacco has the reputation among the cigar consuming and purchasing public of the United States as being cigar tobacco of highest quality and excellence, and cigars made in whole or in part from said tobacco are in large demand throughout the United States. Many of the cigar dealers and many of the consuming public of the United States prefer to purchase cigars containing Havana tobacco and have believed, and still believe, that the use of such Havana tobacco in cigars adds to and increases the quality and desirability of such cigars.

The outer leaf, or wrapper, of a cigar comprises about five percent of the entire cigar, while the filler and binder, constituting ninety-five percent of the cigar, are the controlling factors in its size, strength, and flavor. The filler controls, primarily, the designed length, thickness and shape of the cigar as rolled into a binder or binder wrapper of desired size. A dark cigar can be mild if it has a mild filler and binder, while a light-colored cigar can be quite strong if the filler and binder are of a strong grade of leaf. The filler of the cheapest grades of cigars, such as "2 for 5," is composed principally of which is known as "scrap," being clippings from cigars in the process of manufacture.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of respondent's business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, sales of cigars are made and purchase orders therefor obtained through and as a result of the personal solicitation of salesmen, the use of circulars and by means of written correspondence and other communications with respondent's customers and prospective customers. The said cigars, manufactured, sold, and distributed competitively by respondent in interstate commerce, as set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, are and for several years last past have been sold and distributed by respondent in large and substantial quantities, under such names and brands, among others, as "Garcia's Havana Smoker," a brand manufactured to be sold at a price of 2 for 5¢. Brands and labels, as hereinafter described, have been affixed by respondent to the said cigar and to the containers thereof. The labels attached to the cigars themselves consist of a paper band placed by respondent around each cigar and bearing conspicuously the words "Havana Garcia's Smokers," printed in letters of red upon a label of yellow. The containers for such cigars are the usual and customary cigar boxes or cigar containers of varying capacities, holding from fifteen cigars up to fifty and a hundred. The labels and brands attached to the box or container of respondent's "Garcia's Havana Smoker" have been designed and affixed thereto by respondent, and are as follows:

Centered on the outside of the lid of the box is a label or brand bearing the words "GARCIA'S HAVANA SMOKER" in large black letters, on a background of brown. In the center, between the word "Garcia's" and the words "Havana Smoker," appear the following: "H. F. Co. Mild and Fragrant." This same brand or label appears again on the inside of the top of the box, and in either of the two upper corners, printed on a black background, appears the legend "2 for 5¢." On the outside of the box front, in black letters on a background of brown, appears the following: "Havana Smoker Claro 2 for 5¢." This same wording is also found on either end of the larger boxes used by respondent in the sale and distribution of its above-described cigars.

Respondent also under the brand name "Hav-a-Good Cigar" sells two kinds of cigars, one made of genuine "Havana" tobacco, retailing for 5¢, and the other made wholly from domestic tobacco and retailing 2 for 5¢. The said cigars made of domestic tobacco are packed by respondent in a box in such a manner as to leave visible immediately to the left of the centered brand name, the first word of respondent's corporate name, that is, the word "Havana," the said word "Havana" being used in connection with, and appearing in juxtaposition with the first four letters of said brand name, that is, "Hav-a."

The said cigars, branded, labeled, and sold by respondent, respectively, as "Garcia's Havana Smoker" and the 2 for 5¢ "Hav-a-Good" brand, are and have been made from a cheap grade of tobacco alleged to contain 1% of Cuban tobacco. Tobacco used for this type of cigar may be purchased ready-mixed from factories and dealers, and consists largely of clippings gathered from cigars in the process of their manufacture.

PAR. 4. In truth and fact respondent's cigars, branded, labeled, described, and advertised, respectively, as "Garcia's Havana Smoker," and "Hav-a-Good"—"2 for 5¢," and sold by the respondent and by dealers to the purchasing and consuming public, as hereinbefore described, do not contain Havana tobacco, nor tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba, in any appreciable amount, nor have they at any time contained such tobacco in any appreciable amount, but are, and have been, manufactured entirely from, and wholly composed of, tobacco grown elsewhere than on the Island of Cuba. The use of the word "Havana" in said brand designated as "Garcia's Havana Smoker" and as used on containers in front of and in conjunction with the word, words or expression "Hav-a-Good" as printed or appearing on the container of the 2 for 5¢ brand of such cigars in branding, labeling, describing, and advertising said cigars containing no Havana tobacco, or no Havana tobacco in appreciable amount, as hereinabove set forth, is misleading and has, and has had, the capacity and tendency to, and does and did, mislead and deceive a large and substantial number of the purchasing and consuming public into purchasing said cigars in the erroneous belief that they are and were composed, in whole or in large part, of Havana tobacco, that is, tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba.

PAR. 5. Among the competitors of respondent, referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, there are many who sell and distribute, in competition with respondent, cigars composed in whole and also cigars composed in part only of Havana tobacco, and who rightfully and truthfully advertise, represent, sell, and label such cigars as containing said Havana tobacco. There are also many of said competitors who sell and distribute between and among the several states in competition with respondent cigars containing no Havana tobacco and being composed wholly of tobacco grown in the United States or elsewhere than on the Island of Cuba, and who do not brand, label, advertise, or otherwise represent that said cigars are made of Havana or Cuban tobacco.

Respondent's so-called "Garcia's Havana Smoker," and 2 for 5¢ "Hav-a-Good" brand are displayed, offered for sale, and sold to the consuming public by respondent, and in and by cigar stores and other dealer-establishments in competition with the said cigars of competitors. The respondent's use of the word "Havana" as hereinabove described, in relation to cigars having no Havana tobacco, or no appreciable amount of Havana tobacco, is false and misleading. As a result of such false and misleading representations on the part of respondent the consuming public is being, and has been, injured, trade is being, and has been, diverted to respondent from such competitors in interstate commerce, and thereby substantial injury is done, and has been done, by the respondent to substantial competition in interstate commerce, and there is, and has been, placed in the hands of respondent's dealers and distributors an instrument by means of which they mislead and deceive, and have misled and deceived, the purchasing public.

PAR. 6. Said representations of respondent, contained in its brands, labels, advertisements, or other media through which the trade and consuming public are reached, have resulted in injury to respondent's competitors and to retail dealers and to the prejudice of the buying public, and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Order

24 F. T. C.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Havana-Florida Cigar Company, Inc., are to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the original and amended and supplemental complaints of the Commission and the answer filed herein on March 26, A. D., 1937, by the respondent admitting all the material allegations of said complaints, including the allegations of the said amended and supplemental complaint as amended by order of the Commission duly entered on December 23, 1936,¹ and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes";

It is ordered, That the said respondent, Havana-Florida Cigar Company, Inc., itself, its servants, employees, or agents, individual or corporate, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of cigars in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Using the word "Havana" as descriptive of cigars unless such cigars be made entirely from tobacco grown in the Island of Cuba.

2. Representing in any manner that cigars other than those manufactured entirely from tobacco grown in the Island of Cuba, are Havana cigars.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

DAVID F. KEMP, TRADING AS UNITED STATES SCHOOL OF MUSIC

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2943. Complaint, Oct. 15, 1936—Decision, Mar. 29, 1937

Where an individual engaged in the sale of correspondence courses for home study in playing various musical instruments, and in the sale, as incident thereto, of books, booklets, and other articles—

- (a) Represented, in advertising folders, pamphlets, circulars, letters, and other literature circulated to customers and prospective customers in the various States and in the District of Columbia, and in advertisements in periodicals of general circulation, that he had taught 700,000 pupils to play musical instruments, and that when a pupil enrolled in his said course he, the pupil, was assured of success, and that at the end of said course the average pupil was sufficiently proficient to pass a teacher's examination; and
- (b) Represented, as aforesaid, that no talent was necessary, and that any pupil could, through his said course, learn to play any musical instrument, and that all pupils, regardless of their degree of talent, could be taught to play an instrument in half the time usually required, and that an automatic finger control of his invention limbered, trained, or guided one's fingers so that they fell in the proper place automatically, and that a pupil, regardless of his talent, could quickly learn to play any jazz or classical selection and could play real tunes perfectly by note from the very start of the course, or at any point thereof;

Facts being that not all pupils studying his said course can play real tunes perfectly by note from the very start thereof, or at any other point therein, some measure of musical talent is generally necessary in order to enable a person to play a musical instrument, his said course is not such that a pupil can learn to play any such instrument without any musical talent, and aforesaid representations were otherwise exaggerated and false;

With capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers of his said correspondence lessons and courses of instruction, and to mislead a substantial portion of purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all said representations were true, and with result that a number of the consuming public, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by such acts and representations, purchased substantial volume of said correspondence lessons and courses, and trade was unfairly diverted to him from competitors similarly engaged in sale and distribution of correspondence lessons and courses and who truthfully represent the effectiveness thereof and results to be obtained from their study; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Joseph C. Fehr for the Commission.

R. L. P. Wallace and Co., of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, David F. Kemp, trading and doing business under the trade name United States School of Music, has his principal office and place of business located at 225 Fifth Avenue, in the city of New York, State of New York. He is now, and has been for a number of years, engaged in the business of distributing and selling, in commerce as herein set out, correspondence lessons and courses of instruction for home study in the art of playing various musical instruments to persons hereinafter referred to as pupils, and in selling to such pupils severally as incidental and accessory to the instruction in and to the learning, use and practice of such art, certain merchandise consisting of books, booklets, pamphlets, and other articles.

PAR. 2. Said respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said courses of instruction and accessory material, when sold, to be transported from his principal place of business in the State of New York to the respective purchasers thereof located at various points in the States of the United States other than the State of New York. Respondent, has at all times, maintained a constant current of trade in said correspondence courses and said accessory materials, sold and distributed by him, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his business, the respondent is now, and has been for many years, in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms and corporations likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling correspondence lessons and courses of instruction for home study in the art of playing various musical instruments, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. In the course of the operation of said business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his correspondence lessons and courses of instruction, respondent has printed and circulated throughout the various States to customers and prospective customers, through the United States mails and otherwise, advertising folders, pamphlets, circulars, letters, and other literature, and has made use of advertisements in newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals of widespread and interstate circulation. In all of said advertisements, and other advertising literature above referred to, the respondent has caused his trade name United States School of Music to be conspicuously displayed, together with the following statements:

(a) We have taught 700,000 people to play—more than any other school on earth.

Learn to play the United States School of Music way—more than 700,000 have done so already.

(b) At the end of the course, our average pupil is ready to pass a teacher's examination.

(c) You can actually learn to play your favorite instrument two or three times faster, this amazing short cut way.

(d) Automatic finger control—our own invention—limbers, trains and guides your fingers so that they fall in the proper place almost automatically.

(e) Quickly learn to play any jazz or classical selection.

(f) Almost before you realize it, you are able to pick up any piece of music and play it.

From the very start, you are playing real tunes perfectly by note.

You actually learn real tunes right from the very start.

(g) No talent needed. Forget the old-fashioned idea that you need talent. Just read the list of instruments and decide which one you want to play and the United States School of Music will do the rest.

(h) When you enroll for an United States School of Music course you are assured of success.

All of said statements, together with many similar statements appearing in respondent's advertising literature, and in advertisements inserted in newspapers and magazines, as herein detailed, purport to be descriptive of respondent's courses of instruction and their effectiveness in teaching pupils how to play various musical instruments. In all of his advertising literature, including said newspaper and magazine advertising, respondent represents, through the statements and representations herein set out and other statements of similar import and effect, (1) that he has taught 700,000 pupils to play musical instruments; (2) that at the end of the course, the average pupil is sufficiently proficient to pass a teacher's examination; (3) that a pupil studying respondent's course of instruction can be taught to play a musical instrument in one-half the time usually required; (4) that an automatic finger control of respondent's own invention limbers, trains or guides one's fingers so that they fall in the proper place automatically; (5) that a pupil studying respondent's course of instruction will quickly learn to play any jazz or classical selection; (6) that any pupil studying respondent's course of instruction can play real tunes perfectly by note from the very start of the course; (7) that no talent is necessary and that any pupil can, through respondent's course of instruction, learn to play any musical instrument; and (8) that when a pupil enrolls in the United States School of Music, he is assured of success.

PAR. 5. The representations made by the respondent, as herein set out in paragraph 4, are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue. In truth and in fact, respondent has not taught 700,000 pupils through his courses of instruction and the average pupil completing the course is not ready to pass a teacher's examination without other training. The courses of instruction offered by the respondent are not such that all pupils can learn to play a musical instrument in one-half the time usually required. The respondent has not invented an automatic finger control that serves to limber, train or guide the pupil's fingers to such an extent that they automatically fall in the proper place on the instrument being played. All pupils studying respondent's course of instruction do not quickly learn to play any jazz or classical selection. Not all pupils studying respondent's course of instruction can play real tunes perfectly by note from the very start of the course. Some measure of musical talent is generally necessary in order to enable a person to play a musical instrument and respondent's course of instruction is not such that a pupil can learn to play any musical instrument without any musical talent. The mere enrollment in respondent's course of instruction is not sufficient to insure the pupil that he will successfully learn to play any musical instrument.

PAR. 6. There are among respondent's competitors many who distribute and sell correspondence lessons and courses of instruction for home study in the art of playing various musical instruments and who do not, in any way, misrepresent the character of said lessons or the result to be obtained from a study thereof.

PAR. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondent, as herein set out, in offering for sale and selling his correspondence lessons and courses of instruction were, and are, calculated to, and had, and now have, a capacity and tendency to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true and that after taking said lessons and courses of instruction, a pupil is able to accomplish the results claimed by the respondent. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by the acts and representations of the respondent as hereinabove detailed, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's correspondence lessons and courses of instruction with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling correspondence lessons and courses of instruction who truthfully represent the effectiveness of said lessons and courses of instruction and the results to be obtained from a study thereof. As a result, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 8. The above and foregoing acts, practices and representations of the respondent have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as aforesaid, and constitute unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on the 15th day of October, A. D., 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, David F. Kemp, trading as United States School of Music, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of said respondent's answer thereto a stipulation as to the facts was entered into by and between the respondent and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, by which it was agreed that, subject to the approval of the Commission, the statement of facts so agreed upon should be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto; and by which stipulation it was further agreed that the Commission might proceed upon said statement of facts to issue its report stating its findings as to the facts (including inferences which it might draw from the said stipulated facts) and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of arguments or the filing of briefs. Said stipulation as to the facts has been duly filed in the office of the Commission and approved by it. Thereafter the proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto and the statement of facts as agreed upon in lieu of testimony, briefs and argument having been waived and the Commission having duly considered the same and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, David F. Kemp, trading and doing business under the trade name United States School of Music, has his principal office and place of business located at 225 Fifth Avenue, in New York City, N. Y. He is now, and has been for forty years, engaged in the business of distributing and selling, in commerce as herein set out, correspondence lessons and courses of instruction for home study in the art of playing various musical instruments to persons hereinafter referred to as pupils, and in selling to such pupils severally as incidental and accessory to the instruction in and to the learning, use and practice of such art, certain merchandise consisting of books, booklets, pamphlets, and other articles.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, as aforesaid, respondent causes said courses of instruction and accessory material, when sold, to be transported from his principal place of business in the State of New York to the respective purchasers thereof located at various points in the States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. Since the organization of the business, some forty years ago, more than 700,000 people have taken the courses. Respondent has at all times maintained a constant current of trade in said correspondence courses and said accessory materials, sold and distributed by him, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The respondent is now, and has been for many years, in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms, corporations, and partnerships likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling correspondence lessons and courses of instruction for home study in the art of playing various musical instruments, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In directing the operation of his business, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of his correspondence lessons and courses of instruction, respondent has printed and circulated to customers and prospective customers located in the various States and in the District of Columbia, through the United States mails and otherwise, advertising folders, pamphlets, circulars, letters, and other literature, and has also made use of advertisements in magazines of general circulation throughout the United States. In all of the advertising literature above referred to, the respondent has caused his trade name, United States School of Music, to be conspicuously displayed, together with the following statements:

(a) We have taught 700,000 people to play—more than any other school on earth.

Learn to play the United States School of Music way—more than 700,000 have done so already.

(b) At the end of the course, our average pupil is ready to pass a teacher's examination.

(c) You can actually learn to play your favorite instrument two or three times faster, this amazing short cut way.

(d) Automatic finger control—our own invention—limbers, trains and guides your fingers so that they fall in the proper place almost automatically.

(e) Quickly learn to play any jazz or classical selection.

(f) From the very start, you are playing real tunes perfectly by note.

You actually learn real tunes right from the very start.

(g) No talent needed. Forget the old-fashioned idea that you need talent. Just read the list of instruments and decide which one you want to play and the United States School of Music will do the rest.

(h) When you enroll for an United States School of Music course you are assured of success.

Among the statements and representations made by the respondent since October 2, 1935, have been the following:

Learn to play the U. S. School of Music way. More than 700,000 have done so already.

Yes, you can actually learn to play your favorite instrument 2 to 3 times faster this amazing short-cut way.

PAR. 5. The statements and representations, as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, and other similar thereto, serve as representations on the part of respondent to purchasers and prospective purchasers of his correspondence lessons and courses of instruction for home study in the art of playing various musical instruments as to the value of said courses and as to the results to be obtained by subscribers to said courses and have the capacity and tendency to lead purchasers and prospective purchasers of respondent's said correspondence lessons and courses of instruction into the mistaken beliefs: (1) that he has taught 700,000 pupils to play musical instruments; (2) that at the end of the course, the average pupil is sufficiently proficient to pass a teacher's examination; (3) that all pupils studying respondent's course of instruction, regardless of their degree of musical talent, can be taught to play a musical instrument in one-half the time usually required; (4) that an automatic finger control of respondent's own invention limbers, trains or guides one's fingers so that they fall in the proper place automatically; (5) that all pupils studying respondent's course of instruction will, regardless of their degree of musical talent, quickly learn to play any jazz or classical selection; (6) that all pupils studying respondent's course of instruction can, regardless of their degree of musical talent, play real tunes perfectly by note from the very start of the course; (7) that no talent is necessary and that any pupil can, through respondent's course of instruction, learn to play any musical instrument; and (8) that when a pupil enrolls in the United States School of Music, he is assured of success; and to purchase respondent's said correspondence lessons and courses of instruction for home study in the art of playing various musical instruments on account of such beliefs.

PAR. 6. The said statements and representations made by the respondent, as herein set out in paragraphs 4 and 5 are exaggerated and have the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead purchasers and prospective purchasers of respondent's said correspondence lessons and courses of instruction for home study in the art of playing various musical instruments.

In truth and in fact, respondent has not actually taught 700,000 pupils through his courses of instruction and the average pupil completing the course is not ready to pass a teacher's examination without other training. The courses of instruction offered by the respondent are not such that all pupils, regardless of their degree of talent, can learn to play a musical instrument in one-half the time usually required. The respondent has not invented an automatic finger control that serves to limber, train, or guide the pupil's fingers to such an extent that they automatically fall in the proper place on the instrument being played. All pupils studying respondent's course of instruction do not quickly learn to play any jazz or classical selection. Not all pupils studying respondent's course of instruction can play real tunes perfectly by note from the very start of the course, or at any other point in the course. Some measure of musical talent is generally necessary in order to enable a person to play a musical instrument and respondent's course of instruction is not such that a pupil can learn to play any musical instrument without any musical talent. The mere enrollment in respondent's course of instruction is not sufficient to insure the pupil that he will successfully learn to play any musical instrument.

PAR. 7. There are among respondent's competitors many who distribute and sell correspondence lessons and courses of instruction for home study in the art of playing various musical instruments and who do not represent the character of said lessons or the result to be obtained from a study thereof in such a way as to mislead and deceive purchasers or prospective purchasers into subscribing for said courses in preference to those offered by competitors.

PAR. 8. Each and all of the misleading and deceptive statements and representations made by the respondent, as herein set out, in offering for sale and selling his correspondence lessons and courses of instruction had and now have a capacity and tendency to mislead a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true and that after taking said lessons and courses of instruction, a pupil will be able to accomplish the results claimed by the respondent. Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by the acts and representations of the respondent as hereinabove detailed, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondent's correspondence lessons and courses of instruction with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling correspondence lessons and courses of instruction who truthfully represent the effectiveness of said lessons and courses of instruction and the results to be obtained from a study thereof. As a result, injury has been, and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, David F. Kemp, trading as United States School of Music, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, and the agreed stipulation of facts entered into between the respondent herein, David F. Kemp, trading as United States School of Music, and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondent herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceedings, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, David F. Kemp, individually, and trading as United States School of Music, or trading under any other name, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the advertising, offering for sale, and sale and distribution of courses of instruction for home study in the art of playing various musical instruments in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing in newspapers and magazines and through circulars, catalogues, labels, or in any other form of printed matter or by radio broadcasting, or in any other way or manner:

1. That he has taught 700,000 pupils to play musical instruments;
2. That at the end of the course, the average pupil is sufficiently proficient to pass a teacher's examination;
3. That all pupils studying respondent's course of instruction, regardless of their degree of talent, can be taught to play a musical instrument in one-half the time usually required;
4. That an automatic finger control of respondent's own invention limbers, trains or guides one's fingers so that they fall in the proper place automatically;
5. That a pupil studying respondent's course of instruction will, regardless of having musical talent, quickly learn to play any jazz or classical selection;
6. That any pupil can, regardless of having musical talent by studying respondent's course of instruction, play real tunes perfectly by note from the very start of the course or at any point in the course;
7. That no talent is necessary and that any pupil can, through respondent's course of instruction, learn to play any musical instrument;
8. That when a pupil enrolls in the United States School of Music, he is assured of success;

and from making any other representations of similar tenor or import.

And it is hereby further ordered, That the said respondent shall within 60 days from the date of the service upon it of this order file with this Commission a report, in writing, setting forth the manner and form in which it shall have complied with this order.

GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2941. Complaint, Nov. 13, 1936¹—Decision, Apr. 2, 1937

Where four corporations engaged in manufacture and sale of turbine-generators, largest consumers of which included public utilities, whether public or privately owned, and municipal, State and Federal Governments, and in connection with which not only initial cost, but efficiency and performance guarantees, with their decided effect upon cost of operation, are vital factors and become inseparable from the prices to be paid therefor to prospective purchasers thereof, and constituting a group so large and influential in the manufacture of such products that they were able to influence and control the flow of trade thereof between and among various States and in the District of Columbia, and, but for the below set forth practices, and prior thereto, in competition with one another as to prices in the sale thereof; for the purpose of eliminating price competition among themselves—

Entered into and carried out an agreement, combination and understanding among themselves to fix and maintain, and by which they did fix and maintain, uniform delivered prices to be exacted from the purchasers of turbine-generators, and thus to fix delivered prices of such products entering into commerce among and between the various States and in the aforesaid District, and, pursuant thereto—

- (1) Fixed and maintained, by agreement among themselves, uniform delivered prices for such products, and adopted as their own, and adhered to, the delivered price sheets compiled by one of their number, notwithstanding the fact the same were unrelated to their respective individual costs;
- (2) Fixed and maintained, by agreement among themselves, uniform performance guarantees for such turbine-generators, and adopted as their own confidential performance data compiled by one of their number, notwithstanding the fact the same were unrelated to the actual or true theoretical performance of their said respective products; and
- (3) Conferred, compared and discussed, before submitting delivered prices in competitive bidding for turbine-generators, with each other, the delivered prices to be charged therefor, and agreed, as a result thereof, to submit identical bids, not only for such products, but for the numerous "extras" necessary for the proposed installation thereof;

With result that business of dealing in and distributing said products was monopolized in themselves, competition in industry in question was unreasonably lessened, eliminated, restrained, stifled, and hampered, and competition therein suppressed, and purchasing and consuming public was deprived of advantages in price, service and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed or free and fair competition in said trade and industry, and said agreement, etc., and acts and practices otherwise operated as a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition therein, and

AMENDED COMPLAINT

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, General Electric Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business in Schenectady, in said State.

Respondent, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business at East Pittsburgh, in said State.

Respondent, Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business in Milwaukee, in the State of Wisconsin.

Respondent, Elliott Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business in Jeanette, in said State.

Respondent, Worthington Pump & Machinery Corp., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal place of business at Harrison, in the State of New Jersey.

Respondent, Foster-Wheeler Corp., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business in New York City, in said State.

Respondent, C. H. Wheeler Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business at Philadelphia, in said State.

Respondent, Ingersoll-Rand Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal office and place of business at Jersey City, in said State.

Respondent, Ross Heater & Manufacturing Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business at Buffalo, in said State.

The Heat Exchange Institute, is an unincorporated trade association organized on or about June 1, 1933, with its principal place of business at New York City, in the State of New York. Its officers now are James E. Watson, president, Russell C. Jones, vice-president, and Charles H. Rohrbach, secretary and treasurer.

PAR. 2. Respondents General Electric Company, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Elliott Company, and Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., are now, and since their organization have been engaged in the manufacture, at their respective places of business, of "turbine-generators" and in the sale thereof throughout the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondents Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Elliott Company, Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., Worthington Pump & Machinery Corp., Foster-Wheeler Corp., C. H. Wheeler Manufacturing Co., Ingersoll-Rand Company and Ross Heater & Manufacturing Company, are now, and since their organization, have been engaged in the manufacture at their respective places of business of "condensers" and in the sale thereof throughout the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of their respective businesses said respondents for more than five years last past have caused and still cause their products, when sold by them, to be transported from the State of origin of the shipment to the purchasers thereof located at points in various States of the United States other than the State from which said shipment was made and in the District of Columbia.

Among the largest consumers of turbine-generators and condensers are public utilities, either publicly or privately owned, municipal, State, and Federal Government.

PAR. 3. Respondents constitute a group so large and influential in the manufacture of turbine-generators and condensers that they are able to influence and control the flow of trade in commerce of such products between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. The said respondents were, prior to 1933, in competition as to price with one another in the sale of turbine-generators and condensers in commerce as hereinabove set out, and but for the combination, agreement, understanding, and conspiracy hereinafter described said respondents would have been at all times since 1933, and would now be, in such competition with one another.

To prospective purchasers of these products, not only the initial cost but also the efficiency and performance guarantees, which have a decided effect in the cost of operation, are vital factors and become inseparable from the prices to be paid for these products. Thus, of several generators or condensers all selling for one delivered price, yet with varying performance guarantees, those with the more favorable performance guarantees would be selected by the prospective purchasers.

PAR. 4. During the year 1933 respondents referred to in paragraph 2 hereof for the purpose of eliminating price competition among themselves entered into and have since carried out and are still carrying out an agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy among themselves to fix and to maintain, and by which they have fixed and maintained, uniform delivered prices to be exacted by them from the purchasers of turbine-generators and condensers, and thus to fix the delivered price of turbine-generators and condensers entering into commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Pursuant to and for the purpose of carrying out said agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy the said respondents have among other things done the following:

(a) By agreement among themselves have fixed and maintained and still fix and maintain uniform delivered prices for turbine-generators and condensers.

(b) By agreement among themselves have fixed and maintained and still fix and maintain uniform performance guarantees for said turbine-generators and condensers.

(c) Adopted as their own and adhered to the delivered pricing sheets compiled by one of the respondents although the same is unrelated to the individual costs of the respective respondents.

(d) Adopted as their own the confidential performance data compiled by one of the said respondents although the same is unrelated to the actual or true theoretical performance of the turbine-generators and condensers of the respective respondents.

(e) Conferred, compared, and discussed before submitting delivered prices in competitive bidding for turbine-generator sets and condensers with each other the delivered prices to be charged for said products and agreed, as a result thereof, to submit identical delivered bids, not only for said turbine-generators and condensers, but for the numerous "extras" necessary for the proposed installation of said generators and condensers, and to submit identical performance guarantees for said generators and condensers.

(f) Took disciplinary action against any of said respondents who fail to abide by the delivered prices in accordance with said agreement, understanding, and conspiracy.

PAR. 5. Respondent, The Heat Exchange Institute, of which those respondents engaged in the manufacture of condensers are a separate branch, was organized for the purpose of more effectively aiding said respondents to carry out the agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, in so far as the same applies to the sale and distribution of condensers, and to the subjection of said respondents to penalties for failure to adhere to the agreed delivered prices.

The capacity, tendency, and effect of said agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy, and the said acts and practices of the respondents set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, are and have been to monopolize in said respondents the business of dealing in and distributing turbine-generators and condensers; to unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in said industry, and to deprive the purchasing and consuming public of the advantages in price, service, and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed, or free and fair competition in said trade and industry; to otherwise operate as a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in said trade and industry and to obstruct the natural flow of trade in the channels of interstate commerce.

PAR. 6. The above alleged acts and things done by respondents as set forth herein are monopolistic practices and to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning, and in violation of Section 5 of said Act approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on the 9th day of October 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the following named respondents: General Electric Company, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., and Elliott Company. On the 13th day of November 1936, an amended complaint was issued and served in this proceeding upon the above-named respondents, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On the 9th day of March 1937, said respondents filed their answers, in which answers they stated that it is not their desire or intention to violate Section 5 of the Act commonly called The Federal Trade Commission Act, approved September 26, 1914; that they desire to waive hearing on the charges set forth in said amended complaint, and not to contest the proceedings, and therefore, but solely for the purpose of disposing of this proceeding, they consent that all the material facts alleged in the amended complaint, in so far as the same are connected with the business of selling or offering for sale turbine-generators, may be deemed to be admitted as unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of said Federal Trade Commission Act, but not within the intent and meaning of any other law of the United States; that said answers do not constitute admission of any conclusion of law or fact by said respondents for any other purpose, nor are they to be used against it in any other proceeding, suit, or action. And for the sole purpose of avoiding trouble and expense incident to the further continuance of this proceeding they waive hearing herein and refrain from contesting this proceeding, and consent that the Commission may, without trial, or without the taking of evidence or any other proceeding make and enter its findings as to the facts and issue and serve upon them an order to cease and desist from any method of competition alleged in the amended complaint in so far as the same is connected with the business of selling or offering for sale turbine-generators which constitute violations of Section 5 of said Federal Trade Commission Act; that any and all admissions given by them herein are given solely upon the conditions, and for the purposes aforesaid, and in so far as they constitute admissions are not made as, nor are they to be taken to be admissions of fact for any other purpose whatsoever.

Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said amended complaint and the answers thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, General Electric Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business in Schenectady, in said State.

Respondent, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business at East Pittsburgh, in said State.

Respondent, Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business in Milwaukee, in the State of Wisconsin.

Respondent, Elliott Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business in Jeanette, in said State.

PAR. 2. These respondents are now, and since their organization have been engaged in the manufacture of turbine-generators and in the sale thereof throughout the States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

Said respondents cause their turbine-generators when sold by them to be transported in commerce throughout the United States, to the purchasers thereof located at points in various States of the United States other than the State in which said shipment was made and in the District of Columbia.

Among the largest consumers of turbine-generators are public utilities, either publicly or privately owned, municipal, State, and Federal Governments.

PAR. 3. These respondents constitute a group so large and influential in the manufacture of turbine-generators that they are able to influence and control the flow of trade in commerce of such products between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. These respondents were, prior to 1933, in competition as to prices with one another in the sale of turbine-generators in commerce as hereinbefore set forth, and but for the combination, agreement, and understanding hereinafter described, these respondents would have been at all times since 1933, and would now be, in such competition with one another.

To prospective purchasers of turbine-generators, not only the initial cost but also the efficiency and performance guarantees, which have a decided effect upon the cost of operation, are vital factors and become inseparable from the prices to be paid for said turbine-generators.

PAR. 4. During the year 1933, these respondents, for the purpose of eliminating price competition among themselves, entered into, and have since carried out, at the date of the amended complaint herein were still carrying out an agreement, combination and understanding among themselves to fix and maintain, and by which they have fixed and maintained, uniform delivered prices to be exacted by them from the purchasers of turbine-generators and thus to fix the delivered prices of turbine-generators entering into commerce between and among the various States of the United States and of the District of Columbia. Pursuant to, and for the purpose of carrying out said agreement, combination and understanding, these respondents have, among other things, done the following:

(a) By agreement among themselves have fixed and maintained, and at the date of the amended complaint herein were still fixing and maintaining uniform delivered prices for turbine-generators;

(b) By agreement among themselves have fixed and maintained, and at the date of the amended complaint herein were still fixing and maintaining uniform performance guarantees for said turbine-generators;

(c) Adopted at their own, and adhered to, the delivered pricing sheets compiled by one of the respondents although the same are unrelated to the individual costs of the respective respondents;

(d) Adopted as their own the confidential performance data compiled by one of the said respondents, although the same are unrelated to the actual or true theoretical performance of the turbine-generators of the respective respondents;

(e) Conferred, compared, and discussed, before submitting delivered prices in competitive bidding for turbine-generators, with each other, the delivered prices to be charged for said products, and agreed, as a result thereof, to submit identical bids not only for said turbine-generators, but for the numerous "extras" necessary for the proposed installation of said turbine-generators.

PAR. 5. The capacity, tendency, and effect of said agreement, combination, and understanding and the said acts and practices of these respondents as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, are, and have been to monopolize in said respondents the business of dealing in and distributing turbine-generators; to unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in said industry and to deprive the purchasing and consuming public of the advantages in price, service and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed or free and fair competition in said trade and industry; to otherwise operate as a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in said trade and industry and to obstruct the natural flow of trade in the channels of interstate commerce.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents General Electric Company, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., and Elliott Company are to the prejudice of the public and of said respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This matter coming on to be heard by the Commission on the complaint filed herein on October 9, 1936, the amended complaint filed herein on November 13, 1936, and the answers of respondents General Electric Company, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Elliott Company and Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., herein, filed herein on March 9, 1937, in which said respondents, in so far as this proceeding relates to the business of selling or offering for sale turbine-generators, state that they desire to waive hearing on the charges set forth in the amended complaint in so far as the same refers to alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of the Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," and that for the sole purpose of avoiding the trouble and expense incident to further continuation of this proceeding they refrain from contesting this proceeding, and consent that all the material facts alleged in said amended complaint may be deemed to be admitted as unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of said Federal Trade Commission Act, but not within the intent and meaning of any other law of the United States, such answers not constituting an admission of any conclusions of law and not constituting an admission of fact for any other purpose nor to be used against them in any other proceeding, suit or action, and that said respondents consent that the Commission may without trial, without the taking of evidence, and without any other proceeding make and enter its findings as to the facts and issue and serve upon them an order to cease and desist from any methods of competition alleged in the amended complaint which constitute violations of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act;

Now, therefore, it is hereby ordered, That the respondents, General Electric Company, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. and Elliott Company, and their successors, officers, agents, and employees, forthwith cease and desist in connection with the business of selling or offering for sale turbine-generators in interstate commerce, from doing and performing, by agreement, combination or conspiracy between or among any two or more of said respondents the following acts and things:

1. Fixing and maintaining uniform delivered prices;
2. Fixing and maintaining uniform performance guarantees where the same are unrelated to the actual or true theoretical performance of the turbine-generators of the respective respondents;

3. Adopting as their own and adhering to the delivered pricing sheets of any of the respondents;

4. Submitting uniform or identical delivered prices in competitive bidding for turbine-generators and for the extra equipment necessary for their installation, and submitting uniform or identical performance guarantees for said turbine-generators where the same are unrelated to the actual or true theoretical performance of the turbine-generators of the respective respondents;

Provided, however, That nothing contained in this order shall prohibit the respondents, or any of them, from exchanging scientific, technical, or engineering data or information with respect to the actual performance, rating, or capacity of turbine-generators manufactured by them, or any of them, or from participating with one another, or with third persons, in discussions, meetings or studies of a scientific, technical or engineering character for the purpose of improving, standardizing or simplifying their products or testing methods or facilities relating thereto, defining technical terms, or promoting safety, such as:

(1) Determining the highest actual efficiency practically obtainable by turbine-generators of various types or sizes and under various conditions, and (2) standardizing the various types or sizes of turbine-generators and specifying the actual performance or characteristics which a turbine-generator should attain under given conditions in order to be designated as of a specific type or size, and provided further that nothing in this order contained shall prohibit the respondents, or any of them, from using, in such manner as any of said respondents may individually so desire to do, the results of the technical or engineering data and information above referred to; but this proviso is in no way to be construed as permitting the said several respondents named in this order to accomplish unlawfully what is specifically prohibited in paragraphs 2 and 4 of this order; and

Provided further, That the prohibitions of this order shall not apply to any lawful action taken under patents or license agreements relating thereto.

It is hereby further ordered, That respondents shall, within 60 days of the date of service upon them of this order, file with this Commission a report or reports in writing stating the manner and form in which they shall have complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2941. Complaint, Nov. 13, 1936¹—Decision, Apr. 2, 1937

Where eight corporations engaged in manufacture and sale of condensers, largest consumers of which included public utilities, whether public or privately owned, and municipal, State, and Federal Governments, and in connection with which not only initial cost, but efficiency and performance guarantees, with their decided effect upon cost of operation, are vital factors and become inseparable from the prices to be paid therefor to prospective purchasers thereof, and constituting a group so large and influential in the manufacture of such products that they were able to influence and control the flow of trade thereof between and among various States and in the District of Columbia, and, but for the below set forth practices, and prior thereto, in competition with one another as to prices in the sale thereof; for the purpose of eliminating price competition among themselves—

Entered into and carried out an agreement, combination and understanding among themselves to fix and maintain, and by which they did fix and maintain, uniform delivered prices to be exacted from the purchasers of condensers, and thus to fix delivered prices of such products entering into commerce among and between the various States and in the aforesaid District, and, pursuant thereto—

- (1) Fixed and maintained, by agreement among themselves, uniform delivered prices for such products, and adopted as their own, and adhered to, the delivered price sheets compiled by one of their number, notwithstanding the fact the same were unrelated to their respective individual costs;
- (2) Fixed and maintained, by agreement among themselves, uniform performance guarantees for such condensers, and adopted as their own confidential performance data compiled by one of their number, notwithstanding the fact the same were unrelated to the actual or true theoretical performance of their said respective products;
- (3) Conferred, compared and discussed, before submitting delivered prices in competitive bidding for condensers, with each other, the delivered prices to be charged therefor, and agreed, as a result thereof, to submit identical bids, not only for such products, but for the numerous "extras" necessary for the proposed installation thereof; and
- (4) Took disciplinary action against any of their number who failed to abide by the delivered prices, in accordance with said agreement, combination and understanding;

With the result that business of dealing in and distributing said products was monopolized in themselves, competition in industry in question was unreasonably lessened, eliminated, restrained, stifled, and hampered, and competition therein suppressed, and purchasing and consuming public was deprived of advantages in price, service and other considerations which they respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its amended complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

AMENDED COMPLAINT

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, General Electric Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business in Schenectady, in said State.

Respondent, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business at East Pittsburgh, in said State.

Respondent, Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business in Milwaukee, in the State of Wisconsin.

Respondent, Elliott Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business in Jeanette, in said State.

Respondent, Worthington Pump & Machinery Corp., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal place of business at Harrison, in the State of New Jersey.

Respondent, Foster-Wheeler Corp., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business at New York City, in said State.

Respondent, C. H. Wheeler Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business at Philadelphia, in said State.

Respondent, Ingersoll-Rand Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal office and place of business at Jersey City, in said State.

Respondent, Ross Heater & Manufacturing Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business at Buffalo, in said State.

The Heat Exchange Institute, is an unincorporated trade association organized on or about June 1, 1933, with its principal place of business at New York City, in the State of New York. Its officers now are James E. Watson, president, Russell C. Jones, vice president, and Charles H. Rohrbach, secretary and treasurer.

PAR. 2. Respondents General Electric Company, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Elliott Company, and Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., are now, and since their organization have been engaged in the manufacture, at their respective places of business, of "turbine-generators" and in the sale thereof throughout the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondents Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Elliott Company, Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., Worthington Pump & Machinery Corp., Foster-Wheeler Corp., C. H. Wheeler Manufacturing Co., Ingersoll-Rand Company, and Ross Heater & Manufacturing Company, are now, and since their organization, have been engaged in the manufacture at their respective places of business of "condensers" and in the sale thereof throughout the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course and conduct of their respective businesses said respondents for more than five years last past have caused and still cause their products, when sold by them, to be transported from the State of origin of the shipment to the purchasers thereof located at points in various States of the United States other than the State from which said shipment was made and in the District of Columbia.

Among the largest consumers of turbine-generators and condensers are public utilities, either publicly or privately owned, municipal, State, and Federal Governments.

PAR. 3. Respondents constitute a group so large and influential in the manufacture of turbine-generators and condensers that they are able to influence and control the flow and trade in commerce of such products between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. The said respondents were, prior to 1933, in competition as to price with one another in the sale of turbine-generators and condensers in commerce as hereinabove set out, and but for the combination, agreement, understanding, and conspiracy hereinafter described said respondents would have been at all times since 1933, and would now be, in such competition with one another.

To prospective purchasers of these products, not only the initial cost but also the efficiency and performance guarantees, which have a decided effect in the cost of operation, are vital factors and become inseparable from the prices to be paid for these products. Thus, of several generators or condensers all selling for one delivered price, yet with varying performance guarantees, those with the more favorable performance guarantees would be selected by the prospective purchasers.

PAR. 4. During the year 1933 respondents referred to in paragraph 2 hereof for the purpose of eliminating price competition among themselves entered into and have since carried out and are still carrying out an agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy among themselves to fix and to maintain, and by which they have fixed and maintained, uniform delivered prices to be exacted by them from the purchasers of turbine-generators and condensers, and thus to fix the delivered price of turbine-generators and condensers entering into commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Pursuant to and for the purpose of carrying out said agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy the said respondents have among other things done the following:

(a) By agreement among themselves have fixed and maintained and still fix and maintain uniform delivered prices for turbine-generators and condensers.

(b) By agreement among themselves have fixed and maintained and still fix and maintain uniform performance guarantees for said turbine-generators and condensers.

(c) Adopted as their own and adhered to the delivered pricing sheets compiled by one of the respondents although the same is unrelated to the individual costs of the respective respondents.

(d) Adopted as their own the confidential performance data compiled by one of the said respondents although the same is unrelated to the actual or true theoretical performance of the turbine-generators and condensers of the respective respondents.

(e) Conferred, compared, and discussed before submitting delivered prices in competitive bidding for turbine-generator sets and condensers with each other the delivered prices to be charged for said products and agreed, as a result thereof, to submit identical delivered bids, not only for said turbine-generators and condensers, but for the numerous "extras" necessary for the proposed installation of said generators and condensers, and to submit identical performance guarantees for said generators and condensers.

PAR. 5. Respondent, The Heat Exchange Institute, of which those respondents engaged in the manufacture of condensers are a separate branch, was organized for the purpose of more effectively aiding said respondents to carry out the agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, in so far as the same applies to the sale and distribution of condensers, and to the subjection of said respondents to penalties for failure to adhere to the agreed delivered prices.

The capacity, tendency and effect of said agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy, and the said acts and practices of the respondents set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, are and have been to monopolize in said respondents the business of dealing in and distributing turbine-generators and condensers; to unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in said industry, and to deprive the purchasing and consuming public of the advantages in price, service, and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed, or free and fair competition in said trade and industry; to otherwise operate as a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in said trade and industry and to obstruct the natural flow of trade in the channels of interstate commerce.

PAR. 6. The above alleged acts and things done by respondents as set forth herein are monopolistic practices and to the prejudice and injury of the public and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning, and in violation of Section 5 of said Act approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

amended complaint, and not to contest the proceedings, and therefore, but solely for the purpose of disposing of this proceeding, they consent that all the material facts alleged in the amended complaint, insofar as the same are connected with the business of selling or offering for sale condensers, may be deemed to be admitted as unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of said Federal Trade Commission Act, but not within the intent and meaning of any other law of the United States; that said answers do not constitute admission of any conclusion of law or fact by said respondents for any other purpose, nor are they to be used against it in any other proceedings, suit, or action. And for the sole purpose of avoiding trouble and expense incident to the further continuance of this proceeding they waive hearing herein and refrain from contesting this proceeding, and consent that the Commission may, without trial, or without the taking of evidence or any other proceeding make and enter its findings as to the facts and issue and serve upon them an order to cease and desist from any method of competition alleged in the amended complaint insofar as the same is connected with the business of selling or offering for sale condensers which constitute violations of Section 5 of said Federal Trade Commission Act; that any and all admissions given by them herein are given solely upon the conditions and for the purposes aforesaid, and insofar as they constitute admissions are not made as, nor are they to be taken to be admissions of fact for any other purpose whatsoever.

Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said amended complaint and said answers, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business at East Pittsburgh, in said State.

Respondent, Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal office and place of business in Milwaukee, in the State of Wisconsin.

Respondent, Elliott Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business in Jeannette, in said State.

Respondent, Worthington Pump & Machinery Corp., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Virginia, with its principal place of business at Harrison, in the State of New Jersey.

Respondent, Foster-Wheeler Corp., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business at New York City, in said State.

Respondent, C. H. Wheeler Manufacturing Co., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business at Philadelphia, in said State.

Respondent, Ingersoll-Rand Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal office and place of business at Jersey City, in said State.

Respondent, Ross Heater & Manufacturing Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business at Buffalo, in said State.

The Heat Exchange Institute is an unincorporated trade association organized on or about June 1, 1933, with its principal place of business at New York City, in the State of New York.

PAR. 2. Respondents, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., Elliott Company, Worthington Pump & Machinery Co., Foster-Wheeler Corp., C. H. Wheeler Manufacturing Co., Ingersoll-Rand Company, and Ross Heater & Manufacturing Company, are now, and since their organization have been, engaged in the manufacture of condensers, and in the sale thereof in the various States throughout the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Said respondents cause their condensers when sold by them to be transported in commerce throughout the United States, to the purchasers thereof located at points in various States of the United States other than the State in which said shipment was made and in the District of Columbia.

Among the largest consumers of condensers are public utilities, either publicly or privately owned, municipal, State and Federal Governments.

PAR. 3. These respondents constitute a group so large and influential in the manufacture of condensers that they are able to influence and control the flow of trade in commerce of such products between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. These respondents were, prior to 1933, in competition as to prices with one another in the sale of condensers, in commerce as hereinbefore set forth, and but for the combination, agreement, and understanding hereinafter described, these respondents would have been at all times since 1933, and would now be, in such competition with one another.

To prospective purchasers of condensers, not only the initial cost but also the efficiency and performance guarantees, which have a decided effect upon the cost of operation, are vital factors and become inseparable from the prices to be paid for said condensers.

PAR. 4. During the year 1933, these respondents, for the purpose of eliminating price competition among themselves, entered into, and have since carried out, and at the date of the amended complaint herein were still carrying out an agreement, combination, and understanding among themselves to fix and maintain, and by which they have fixed and maintained, uniform delivered prices to be exacted by them from the purchasers of condensers, and thus to fix the delivered prices of condensers entering into commerce between and among the various States of the United States and of the District of Columbia. Pursuant to, and for the purpose of carrying out said agreement, combination and understanding, these respondents have, among other things, done the following:

(a) By agreement among themselves have fixed and maintained, and at the date of the amended complaint herein were still fixing and maintaining uniform delivered prices for condensers;

(b) By agreement among themselves have fixed and maintained, and at the date of the amended complaint herein were still fixing and maintaining uniform performance guarantees for said condensers;

(c) Adopted as their own, and adhered to, the delivered pricing sheets compiled by one of the respondents although the same are unrelated to the individual costs of the respective respondents;

(d) Adopted as their own the confidential performance data compiled by one of the said respondents, although the same are unrelated to the actual or true theoretical performance of the condensers of the respective respondents;

(e) Conferred, compared, and discussed, before submitting delivered prices in competitive bidding for condensers, with each other, the delivered prices to be charged for said products, and agreed, as a result thereof, to submit identical bids not only for said condensers, but for the numerous "extras" necessary for the proposed installation of said condensers;

(f) Took disciplinary action against any of said respondents who failed to abide by the delivered prices in accordance with the said agreement, combination and understanding.

PAR. 5. The capacity, tendency, and effect of said agreement, combination and understanding and the said acts and practices of these respondents as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, are, and have been to monopolize in said respondents the business of dealing in and distributing condensers; to unreasonably lessen, eliminate, restrain, stifle, hamper, and suppress competition in said industry, and to deprive the purchasing and consuming public of the advantages in price, service and other considerations which they would receive and enjoy under conditions of normal and unobstructed or free and fair competition in said trade and industry; to otherwise operate as a restraint upon and a detriment to the freedom of fair and legitimate competition in said trade and industry and to obstruct the natural flow of trade in the channels of interstate commerce.

These respondents engaged in the condenser industry constitute only that section of the Heat Exchange Institute known as the Condenser Section, and compliance with the order to cease and desist by these respondents engaged in the condenser industry will be as effective as if the order were directed against the Heat Exchange Institute.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondents Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., Elliott Company, Worthington Pump & Machinery Co., Foster-Wheeler Corp., C. H. Wheeler Manufacturing Co., Ingersoll-Rand Company, and Ross Heater & Manufacturing Company are to the prejudice of the public and of said respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

This matter coming on to be heard by the Commission on the complaint filed herein on October 9, 1936, the amended complaint filed herein on November 13, 1936, and the answers of respondents Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., Elliott Company, Worthington Pump & Machinery Corp..

Foster-Wheeler Corp., C. H. Wheeler Manufacturing Co., Ingersoll-Rand Company and Ross Heater & Manufacturing Company, herein, filed herein on March 9, 1937, in which said respondents, insofar as this proceeding relates to the business of selling or offering for sale condensers, state that they desire to waive hearing on the charges set forth in the amended complaint insofar as the same refers to alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of the Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," and that for the sole purpose of avoiding the trouble and expense incident to further continuation of this proceeding they refrain from contesting this proceeding, and consent that all the material facts alleged in said amended complaint may be deemed to be admitted as unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of said Federal Trade Commission Act but not within the intent and meaning of any other law of the United States, such answers not constituting an admission of any conclusions of law and not constituting an admission of fact for any other purpose nor to be used against them in any other proceeding, suit or action, and that said respondents consent that the Commission may without trial, without the taking of evidence, and without any other proceeding make and enter its findings as to the facts and issue and serve upon them an order to cease and desist from any methods of competition alleged in the amended complaint which constitute violations of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act; and

Respondents Worthington Pump & Machinery Corp., Foster-Wheeler Corp., C. H. Wheeler Manufacturing Co., Ingersoll-Rand Company and Ross Heater & Manufacturing Company, in their answers deny, as to themselves, every allegation in the amended complaint insofar as they relate to the business of selling or offering for sale turbine-generators;

Now, therefore, it is hereby ordered, That the respondents Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., Elliott Company, Worthington Pump & Machinery Corp., Foster-Wheeler Corp., C. H. Wheeler Manufacturing Co., Ingersoll-Rand Company, and Ross Heater & Manufacturing Company, and their successors, officers, agents and employees forthwith cease and desist in connection with the business of selling or offering for sale condensers in interstate commerce, from doing and performing, by agreement, combination, or conspiracy between or among any two or more of said respondents the following acts and things:

1. Fixing and maintaining uniform delivered prices;

2. Fixing and maintaining uniform performance guarantees where the same are unrelated to the actual or true theoretical performance of the condensers of the respective respondents;

3. Adopting as their own and adhering to the delivered pricing sheets of any of the respondents;

4. Submitting uniform or identical delivered prices in competitive bidding for condensers, and for the extra equipment necessary for their installation, and submitting uniform or identical performance guarantees for said condensers where the same are unrelated to the actual or true theoretical performance of the condensers of the respective respondents;

5. Imposing, attempting or threatening to impose, by any means whatsoever, any disciplinary action on any of the respondents who fail to abide by any delivered prices as stated in paragraphs 1, 3, and 4 hereof;

Provided, however, That nothing contained in this order shall prohibit the respondents, or any of them, from exchanging scientific, technical or engineering data or information with respect to the actual performance, rating, or capacity of condensers manufactured by them or any of them or from participating with one another, or with third persons, in discussions, meetings, or studies of a scientific, technical or engineering character for the purpose of improving, standardizing, or simplifying their products or testing methods or facilities relating thereto, defining technical terms, or promoting safety, such as:

(1) Determining the highest actual efficiency practically obtainable by condensers of various types or sizes and under various conditions, and (2) standardizing the various types or sizes of condensers and specifying the actual performance or characteristics which a condenser should attain under given conditions in order to be designated as of a specific type or size, and provided further that nothing in this order contained shall prohibit the respondents, or any of them, from using, in such manner as any of said respondents may individually so desire to do, the results of the technical or engineering data and information above referred to; but this proviso is in no way to be construed as permitting the said several respondents named in this order to accomplish unlawfully what is specifically prohibited in paragraphs (2) and (4) of this order; and

Order

24 F. T. C.

It is hereby further ordered, That all respondents, except the Heat Exchange Institute, shall, within 60 days of the date of service upon them of this order, file with this Commission a report or reports in writing stating the manner and form in which they shall have complied with this order; and

Since the respondents engaged in the condenser industry constitute only that section of the Heat Exchange Institute known as the Condenser Section, and since compliance with the order to cease and desist by these respondents engaged in the condenser industry will be as effective as if the order were directed against the Heat Exchange Institute;

It is hereby further ordered, That the complaint in this proceeding as amended be, and the same is hereby dismissed as to the respondent the Heat Exchange Institute.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF

SAMUEL BRIER, DOING BUSINESS AS SAMUEL BRIER & COMPANY AND QUAKERTOWN LUGGAGE COMPANY, INC.

Docket 3049. Complaint, Feb. 4, 1937—Decision, Apr. 2, 1937

Where an individual, and a corporation, headed and controlled, managed and operated by him, engaged in the manufacture, distribution, and sale of handbags, suitcases, and other luggage to jobbers and retailers, portion of which luggage, thus manufactured and sold by them, was made from top grain leather and portion of which was made from the inferior and less durable and costly split or inner side leather—

Placed upon pieces of said latter luggage, covered with said split leather, conspicuous stamp reading "Warranted Cowhide," "Genuine Cowhide," "All Leather," "Genuine Leather," and thereby represented that such pieces were covered with the preferred top grain leather;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that luggage so stamped by them was covered with the outside or top layer of the hide, and with the result of enabling retailers and jobbers to mislead and deceive the purchasing public as to the quality of the material with which such luggage was covered, and of placing in the hands of retailers and dealers an instrument and means whereby they might commit a fraud upon members of such public, and with the further result, as a direct consequence of the misleading and erroneous belief induced as aforesaid, that a number of the consuming public bought a substantial volume of their said luggage, and trade was unfairly diverted to them from those likewise engaged in the sale of luggage covered with split hide, and who truthfully labeled the same, and from those also engaged in the sale of top grain leather-covered luggage; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. George Foulkes for the Commission.

Bender, Rubin & Simons, of Philadelphia, Pa., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Samuel Brier, an individual doing business as Samuel Brier & Company and Quakertown Luggage Company, Inc., a corporation hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Samuel Brier, is an individual doing business as Samuel Brier & Company, with his principal office and place of business located at 310 Spruce Street, Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania.

Respondent Quakertown Luggage Company, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business located in Quakertown, State of Pennsylvania.

Respondent, Samuel Brier is president of the respondent, Quakertown Luggage Company, Inc. He controls, manages and operates the sales policies and business activities of respondent, Quakertown Luggage Company, Inc.

PAR. 2. Respondents have been, for more than one year last past, and are now, engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling handbags, suitcases and other luggage to jobbers and retailers, many of whom reside in States other than the State of Pennsylvania. When orders are received therefor they are filled by respondents by shipping said luggage to said purchasers from the respective places of business of said respondents into and through other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been during the time hereinbefore mentioned, a constant current of trade in commerce in said luggage so distributed and sold by respondents between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

In the course of their said businesses said respondents were, and are, in substantial competition with other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of handbags, suitcases and other luggage in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Certain pieces of luggage manufactured and sold by respondents, as aforesaid, are made from top grain leather, while other pieces are made from split leather. Top grain leather is that portion of the hide which includes the outer surface or hair side. Split leather consists of a cut or layer of the hide which remains after the top grain or surface has been removed from said hide. Split leather is of inferior quality and durability to top grain leather and commands a lower price. The terms "Top Grain Leather," "Grained Leather," "Genuine Leather," "Genuine Cowhide," "Warranted Leather," "Warranted Cowhide," "All Leather," and "Leather," when applied to leather products, are understood by the trade and consuming public to mean top grain leather as distinguished from split leather as described above, and there is a preference among the trade and consuming public for luggage made of such leather over luggage made from split leather. Certain pieces of the luggage manufactured and sold as aforesaid by respondents are covered with said split leather and respondents place upon the surface of luggage so manufactured from split leather a conspicuous stamp reading as follows:

Warranted Cowhide .
 Genuine Cowhide
 All Leather
 Genuine Leather

Said stamps, labels, and markings serve as representations to the purchasing public that the material with which such luggage is covered is top grain leather. In addition, retailers and jobbers are thus enabled by reason of said stamps, labels, and representations to mislead and deceive the purchasing public as to the quality of the material with which such luggage is covered.

PAR. 4. The acts and practices of respondents in offering for sale and selling said handbags, suitcases and other luggage stamped and labeled as aforesaid had, and now has, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that luggage so stamped by respondents is covered with the outside or top layer of the hide. Further, said acts and practices as herein set out places in the hands of retailers and dealers an instrument and a means whereby said retailers and dealers may commit a fraud upon members of the purchasing public. As a direct consequence of the misleading and erroneous belief induced by the advertisements and representations of respondents, as hereinabove enumerated, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondents' luggage with the result that trade has been and is now being unfairly diverted to respondents from corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the business of selling luggage covered with split hide and who truthfully label said luggage, as well as from corporations, firms, partnerships and individuals who are engaged in the business of selling luggage covered with top grain leather. As a result thereof substantial injury has been done and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 5. The above and foregoing acts, practices and representations of respondents have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on February 4, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Samuel Brier, an individual doing business as Samuel Brier & Company, and respondent Quakertown Luggage Company, Inc., a corporation, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of the said act. On February 25, 1937, the respondents filed their answer, in which answer they admitted all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and stated that they waived hearing on the charges set forth in the complaint and that, without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission might issue and serve upon them findings of the facts and conclusion and an order to cease and desist from the violations of law charged in the complaint. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPHS 1. Respondent Samuel Brier is an individual doing business as Samuel Brier & Company, with his principal office and place of business located at 310 Spruce Street, Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania.

Respondent Quakertown Luggage Company, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business located in Quakertown, State of Pennsylvania.

Respondent Samuel Brier is president of the respondent, Quakertown Luggage Company, Inc. He controls, manages, and operates the sales policies and business activities of respondent, Quakertown Luggage Company, Inc.

PAR. 2. For more than one year last past the respondents have been, and are now, engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling handbags, suitcases, and other luggage to jobbers and retailers, many of whom reside in States other than the State of Pennsylvania. When the respondents receive orders for their luggage they are filled by respondents by shipping said luggage to purchasers from the respective places of business of said respondents into and through other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

There is now, and has been during the time hereinbefore mentioned, a constant current of trade in commerce in said luggage so distributed and sold by respondents between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

The respondents, in the course of the operation of their said businesses, were and are in substantial competition with other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of handbags, suitcases, and other luggage in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. A portion of the luggage manufactured and sold by the respondents, as aforesaid, is made from top grain leather, while other pieces are made from split leather.

Top grain leather is that portion of the hide which includes the outer surface or hair side. Split leather consists of a cut or layer of the hide which remains after the top grain or surface has been removed from said hide.

Split leather is of inferior quality and durability to top grain leather and commands a lower price on the market.

The terms "Top Grain Leather," "Grained Leather," "Genuine Leather," "Genuine Cowhide," "Warranted Leather," "Warranted Cowhide," "All Leather," and "Leather," when applied to leather products, are understood by the trade and consuming public to mean top grain leather as distinguished from split leather as described above.

There is a preference among the trade and consuming public for luggage made of top grain leather over luggage made from split leather.

Certain pieces of the luggage manufactured and sold as aforesaid by the respondents are covered with said split leather and respondents place upon the surface of luggage so manufactured from split leather a conspicuous stamp reading as follows:

Warranted Cowhide
Genuine Cowhide
All Leather
Genuine Leather

These stamps, labels, and markings serve as representations to the purchasing public that the material with which such luggage is covered is top grain leather. By placing said labels and markings on the luggage respondents enable retailers and jobbers to mislead and deceive the purchasing public as to the quality of the material with which such luggage is covered.

PAR. 4. The acts and practices of respondents in offering for sale and selling said handbags, suitcases and other luggage stamped and labeled as aforesaid had, and now has, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that luggage so stamped by respondents is covered with the outside or top layer of the hide. Further, said acts and practices as herein set out places in the hands of retailers and dealers an instrument and a means whereby said retailers and dealers may commit a fraud upon members of the purchasing public.

As a direct consequence of the misleading and erroneous belief induced by the advertisements and representations of respondent, as hereinabove enumerated, a number of the consuming public have purchased a substantial volume of respondents' luggage with the result that trade has been and is now being unfairly diverted to respondents from corporations, firms, partnerships and individuals likewise engaged in the business of selling luggage covered with split hide and who truthfully label said luggage, as well as from corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals who are engaged in the business of selling luggage covered with top grain leather. As a result thereof substantial injury has been done and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Samuel Brier, an individual doing business as Samuel Brier & Company, and respondent Quakertown Luggage Company, Inc., a corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and answer of the respondents, in which answer the respondents admit all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and state that they waive hearing on the charges set forth in said complaint and that, without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon them findings as to the facts and conclusion and an order to cease and desist from the violations of law charged in the complaint, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Samuel Brier, individually and doing business as Samuel Brier & Company, or doing business under any other trade name, and the respondent Quakertown Luggage Company, Inc., a corporation, and its officers, their respective representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of handbags, suitcases, and other luggage in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing, through the use of the words "Warranted Cowhide," "Genuine Cowhide," "All Leather," "Genuine Leather," or through the use of any other words or symbols of similar import and meaning, or in any manner whatever, that handbags, suitcases, and other luggage sold by them and made from split leather or the inner split of leather are in fact made from the outer split or any part of the hide or skin other than the inner split thereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall within 30 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

BEAR MILL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, INC.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 25 1914

Docket 2678. Complaint, Oct. 11, 1935—Decision, Apr. 5, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in the sale and distribution of cotton and rayon fabrics and of rayon and cotton mixtures, purchasing unfinished cotton, rayon, and mixed fabrics and having the same processed according to its instructions by a finishing company over which it exercised no control and which it did not own or operate, and selling its said fabrics in substantial competition with those engaged in sale and distribution, or in manufacture, sale, and distribution, of cotton and rayon fabrics and of cotton and rayon mixtures, and including among its competitors many who sell and distribute, but do not manufacture, their said cotton and rayon fabrics, or in any way represent themselves as manufacturers thereof, and competitor manufacturers of cotton and rayon fabrics sold by them who do employ terms "mill" and "manufacturing" or other terms of similar import and meaning—

Represented, through use of terms "Mill" and "Manufacturing" as included in its corporate name, on its stationery and invoices circulated throughout the United States to customers and prospective customers, and on folders containing samples of its said products and carried by its salesmen who travel throughout the United States, to its customers, prospective customers, and general buying public, that it actually owned and operated, or directly and absolutely controlled, a mill wherein its goods were made, the facts being it did not thus own, operate or control any such factory or mill and was not engaged in manufacturing, and was not itself a manufacturer as understood by trade and purchasing public generally, and did not own any print works, dye works, bleach works, finishing works, spinnery or weavery, but was engaged solely in sale and distribution of fabrics made by others as hereinbefore set forth;

With effect of misleading a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that it actually owned and operated, or directly and absolutely controlled, a mill or mills wherein the products sold by it were manufactured, and with further result that the buying public, as a result of the erroneous belief thus induced, bought a substantial volume of its said products, and trade was unfairly diverted to it from competitors likewise engaged in sale and distribution of cotton and rayon fabrics and who truthfully advertise and represent the nature and character of their respective businesses; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce;
Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Charles F. Diggs, trial examiner.

Mr. T. H. Kennedy for the Commission.

Mr. Dudley B. Borsal of Curtis, Mallet-Prevost, Colt & Mosle, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Bear Mill Manufacturing Company, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act; and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, states its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Bear Mill Manufacturing Company, Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York in 1907, then, ever since and now exists by virtue of the laws of said State, and now has its principal place of business in the City of New York, State of New York. The respondent is, and for more than one year last past has been engaged in supplying rayons and cottons to commission weavers, who, in turn, manufacture or weave the material so supplied them into fabric. The title to the material so supplied said weavers, and in the product manufactured by the said weavers, is retained in the respondent. Respondent, for more than one year last past, has been engaged in the sale and distribution of rayon and cotton cloth or fabric either as an agent for others or on its own behalf. Said operations of respondent have been and are in commerce between and among the various States of the United States. When the products herein referred to are sold, respondent causes them to be shipped from its place of business in the State of New York or other State of origin to purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States and other than the State of New York or other State of origin. In the course and conduct of its business said respondent was at all times hereinafter referred to in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the supplying of materials to weavers for manufacture by them and in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of similar products.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1, said respondent adopted as and for its name the words Bear Mill Manufacturing Company, Inc., under which to carry on its business and which name containing the words "Mill" and "Manufacturing" it has used continuously since in or about 1907 and is now using in soliciting the sale of and selling its said products in interstate commerce. Respondent has caused said name "Bear Mill Manufacturing Company, Inc." to appear on its letterheads and other stationery and advertisements circulated, in soliciting the sale of and selling its products in interstate commerce when in truth and in fact said respondent did not manufacture any of the products which it sold and distributed and did not own, control, or operate any mill or factory wherein said products were manufactured or fabricated, which said products respondent sold and distributed in interstate commerce.

PAR. 3. There is a preference on the part of certain of the retail merchants in the different States of the United States for goods, wares and merchandise, to be resold at retail to the public, bought directly from the mill owner or manufacturer thereof, and there is an impression and belief existing among certain of said retail merchants that by dealing directly with the mill owner or manufacturer they can buy goods at a cheaper price and on more favorable terms than they can from jobbers or corporations, associations, individuals, firms, and partnerships not manufacturing goods, wares, and merchandise they sell to such retail dealers by eliminating the profits of the middleman and that a more uniform line of goods can be purchased from a mill operator than from one who does not operate a mill. The use by respondent of the words "Mill" and "Manufacturing" in its name in respondent's letterheads, billheads, invoices, stationery, and otherwise has a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive purchasers who are customers and prospective customers of respondent by causing them to believe that respondent actually owns and operates, or directly and absolutely controls the mill or mills in which said products are made or manufactured, or that respondent himself makes or manufactures his products, and that thereby such customers or prospective customers save and will save the middleman's profit; and the use by respondent of the words "Mill" and "Manufacturing" has a tendency and capacity unfairly to divert trade to respondent from other corporations, associations, individuals, firms, and partnerships, who are actually manufacturing products similar to the products of respondent for sale in interstate commerce and those competitors of respondent who do not manufacture similar or like products to those of respondent for sale and distribution in interstate commerce, but who truthfully advertise and label same and who do not claim or represent themselves to be manufacturers.

PAR. 4. The practices of respondent described in paragraph 2 hereof are all to the prejudice of the public and the respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce in violation of the provisions of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes.”

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes,” the Federal Trade Commission, on October 11, 1935, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Bear Mill Manufacturing Company, Inc., charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent’s answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Thomas H. Kennedy, attorney for the Commission, before Charles F. Diggs, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Dudley B. Bonsal, attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Bear Mill Manufacturing Company, Inc., is a New York corporation, organized in 1907. Its principal office is at 361 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

It is now, and since its incorporation has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of cotton fabrics. During more recent years it has added rayon fabrics and rayon and cotton mixtures to its line of merchandise. When orders are received for respondent’s goods it either ships them from its place of business in New York, N. Y., or from the point at which the goods are processed, to the purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of origin of shipment. The respondent has, at all times during the past several years, maintained a constant current of trade and commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia in the merchandise which it sells. Its dollar volume of sales for the year 1935 approximated $2,500,000 and for 1936 $3,500,000.

At all times during the last several years, the respondent has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution, or in the manufacture, sale, and distribution, of cotton fabrics, rayon fabrics, and cotton and rayon mixtures in commerce, among and between the several States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The respondent's corporate name, "Bear Mill Manufacturing Company, Inc.," appears on its stationery and invoices circulated throughout the United States to customers and prospective customers. Its salesmen, who travel throughout the United States, carry samples of respondent's products, the folders of which bear the respondent's corporate name. Its corporate name also appears in the New York City telephone directory.

The use of the terms "mill" and "manufacturing", as a part of its trade name, serves as a representation to respondent's customers, prospective customers and the general buying public that the respondent actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls a mill wherein its goods are manufactured.

PAR. 3. The respondent does not, in fact, own, operate or control any factory or mill wherein its said products are manufactured. It is not engaged in the business of manufacturing and is not itself a manufacturer as those terms are understood by the trade and the purchasing public generally. It does not own any print works, dye works, bleach works, finishing works, spinnery or weavery, but is engaged solely in the sale and distribution of fabrics manufactured by others. It buys unfinished cotton, rayon, and mixed fabrics and has said fabrics processed, according to its own instructions, by a finishing company over which it exercises no control and which it does not own or operate.

PAR. 4. A substantial portion of the fabric-buying public has a preference for dealing direct with a manufacturer of the fabrics being purchased. Said purchasers believe they obtain better prices, superior quality, and other advantages in dealing direct with a manufacturer rather than a broker or middleman.

PAR. 5. Many of respondent's competitors who sell and distribute cotton and rayon fabrics in interstate commerce do not manufacture the products sold by them and do not in any way represent that they are the manufacturers of said products. There are also among respondent's competitors manufacturers of cotton and rayon fabrics which they sell in interstate commerce, who do employ the terms "mill" and "manufacturing" or other terms of similar import and meaning, in their corporate names and advertising.

PAR. 6. Respondent's practice of designating and representing itself as a manufacturer through the use of the terms "mill" and "manufacturing" as parts of its corporate name, which appears on its stationery, invoices, in the telephone directory, and on its advertising matter, has had, and now has, the capacity, and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled, a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that respondent actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls a mill or mills wherein the products which it sells are manufactured. As a result of the erroneous belief induced by the false and misleading representation above referred to, the buying public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with a result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from its competitors likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing cotton and rayon fabrics, who truthfully advertise and represent the nature and character of their respective businesses. Thereby substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and of the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Bear Mill Manufacturing Company, Inc., are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Charles F. Diggs, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein, and oral arguments by Thomas H. Kennedy, counsel for the Commission, and by Dudley B. Bonsal, counsel for the respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes.”

It is ordered, That the respondent, Bear Mill Manufacturing Company, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the sale and distribution of cotton and rayon fabrics, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing, directly or by implication, through the use of the words “mill” or “manufacturing,” alone or in conjunction with other words, as part of its corporate or trade name, or in any other manner, or through any other means or device, that it manufactures the product which it sells until and unless it actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls the mill or factory wherein such products are made.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

H. WILL ELDERS

Docket 2673. Complaint, Dec. 28, 1935—Decision, Apr. 5, 1937

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution, under name "Dr. H. Will Elders," or "Dr. Elders," as case might be, of his so-called "Private Prescription" for women, "Laxative Lozenges" and "Private Prescription Sanitary Douche"; in advertising the same in periodicals circulated to the purchasing public in the various States and through circulars, letters, and other advertising material, and through publication of testimonials of others—

- (a) Represented, directly or by implication, that his said preparations constituted a cure, remedy, or competent and adequate treatment for sterility in women, facts being that causes of such condition are many and varied, and in many cases are not due to functional weakness, but are result of disease and anatomical abnormalities, and that while his said "Filled Prescription," by virtue of its action as a general tonic, and tendency to aid nutrition, tended to relieve sterility in cases not due to any diseased or abnormal condition by aiding and restoring patient to normal health, and might be beneficial to some of such cases due to functional weakness, it could not be beneficial in all of such cases, including those where such weakness was result of disease, only effect of said lozenges in connection with treatment of sterility was to give temporary relief in constipation where such condition might exist and thus be associated with such other conditions to be treated, said "Private Prescription Sanitary Douche" did not, in itself, have curative properties in many causative pathological conditions producing sterility, and his said medicines, used either together or singly, did not constitute a cure, remedy, or competent and adequate treatment for such condition in women, nor for diseased conditions which are most frequently the cause thereof, and in cases of sterility due to disease or to anatomical abnormalities would not be effective in removing the same; and
- (b) Represented, as aforesaid, that his said prescriptions constituted a cure, remedy, or competent and adequate treatment for similar diseases generally, and especially for leucorrhoea and delayed, painful, and suppressed menstruation, facts being that, while his said "Filled Prescription" acted as a palliative and gave some relief from pain, it had no curative effects where any definite pathology existed, and would not cure or remedy ovarian pains and various other conditions and ailments included in the term "female diseases," and had no effect on the causes underlying or forming the basis of such diseases where a pathological condition existed, and that, while said "Private Prescription Sanitary Douche" was a cleansing sanitary wash and had inhibitory antiseptic properties and some slight inhibitory germicidal properties, it was not a general germicide, and while its use might be beneficial to women, whether suffering from female disorders or not, and use thereof would tend to be beneficial in some ways in certain cases of leucorrhœa, it would not be in all such cases, and while some such antiseptic wash was indicated generally in treating vaginal disorders, it did not, in itself, have curative properties in most so-called female diseases, and said medicines, whether used together or singly, did not constitute a cure, remedy, or competent and adequate treatment for such diseases or for leucorrhœa or for delayed, suppressed, or painful menstruation, and were not effective in the treatment of such conditions and diseases where caused by many diseased conditions, and representations to the contrary were neither accurate nor limited enough to express the true therapeutic effects of said medicines;

With tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the public in the aforesaid particulars and to cause and induce them to buy and use said preparations because of the erroneous beliefs engendered as above set forth, and to divert trade to him from competitors engaged in the sale in interstate commerce of preparations of the same or similar kind as those sold by him, or of those adapted to and used for the same general purposes for which his said preparations were adapted, and with effect of diverting business to him from competitors, including those who do not make, in any wise, the same or similar misleading representations, but truthfully and accurately state the therapeutic effects of their said preparations; to their substantial injury and prejudice:

COMPLAINT

PARAGRAPH 1. That said respondent, H. Will Elders is now and has been engaged for more than five years last past in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of a certain medicinal preparation known and described as Dr. H. Will Elders' Filled Prescription for Women, as well as of certain other medicinal preparations designed and intended to be used in connection therewith and known and described, respectively, as Dr. H. Will Elders' Private Prescription Sanitary Douche and Dr. Elders' Laxative Lozenges. The office and principal place of business of respondent in the conduct of his said business is and has been located in the city of St. Joseph in the State of Missouri. Said respondent, in the course and conduct of his said business, causes the said medicines, so sold by him, to be transported in interstate commerce from his said place of business in Missouri to, into and through States of the United States other than Missouri to various and numerous persons in such other States to whom such preparations are or have been sold.

PAR. 2. That, during the time above mentioned, other individuals, firms, and corporations in various States of the United States are and have been engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of medicines and preparations similar in kind to those of respondent or intended for and adapted to the uses for which respondent's said medicines are adapted. Such other individuals, firms, and corporations have caused and do now cause their said medicines and preparations, when sold by them, to be transported from the various States of the United States where they are located to, into, and through States other than the State of origin of the shipment thereof. Said respondent has been, during the aforesaid time, in competition in interstate commerce in the sale of his said medicines with such other individuals, firms, and corporations.

PAR. 3. That respondent, in connection with the sale of his said medicines, as aforesaid, has made use of advertisements inserted in magazines and other publications circulated to the purchasing public in the various States of the United States. He also has advertised and does now advertise his said medicines by means of circular letters and other advertising material which he causes to be distributed to the purchasing public in various States of the United States by mail or otherwise.

PAR. 4. That, by the means aforesaid, respondent represents, either directly or by implication, or by the publication of testimonials of others, that his preparations, as above set out and described, constitute a cure, remedy or competent and adequate treatment for sterility in women. Respondent further represents, by the means and in the manner aforesaid, that his said preparations constitute a cure, remedy or competent and adequate treatment for female diseases generally, and especially for leucorrhœa and delayed, painful and suppressed menstruation. One such advertisement so used by respondent containing such representations is the following:

Representations to the general effect as above stated have been made by respondent in his advertising matter by quoting from testimonials given by users of his aforesaid medicines. The following excerpts from a few of such testimonials so used by respondent are illustrative of such representations:

Your medicines have improved me greatly. I don't have that soreness and tender feeling, not even when I am menstruating. It has done wonders to me for as sick as I was. It has saved me the worry of an operation. * * *

I used to suffer terribly every month and would have to go to bed and stay some times all day but now I feel fine and when my menstruation periods come I don't have those terrible pains. I am telling the honest truth I don't believe I would ever have had a baby if it had not been for your medicine. * * *

* * * Will say that Dr. Elders Filled Prescription has made a new woman out of me.

I want to thank you for your wonderful treatments I took last fall. I am expecting a baby in October. * * * I know the treatments did the work. * * *

Am very glad to let you know that the last box of Dr. Elders Filled Prescription for Women I took has surely helped me out. I am now five months pregnant, and am very glad. I certainly will praise your prescription to any woman who wants a family.

* * * If it had not been for your treatment I would have been dead. I am glad to be well again after 23 years of sickness. * * *

I am feeling so fine I just have to sit down and write to you and let you know that your medicine has helped me. * * * I have suffered 2 years with painful, irregular menstruation and tired aching feeling. I didn't have any appetite to speak of, eating sometimes only once a day but now I just can't get enough to eat and am feeling fine.

Other representations made by respondent in his advertising matter in regard to his said medicines include the following:

Sanitary Douche (Mentho-Borodine), my own Private Prescription, offers the most speedy relief from this condition (Leucorrhœa) of any treatment I have ever found.

You are now beginning a treatment * * * which has a most unusual and long record of success in alleviating many cases of painful, delayed or irregular menses, general female disorders and lack of feeling.

Moreover, respondent makes many other representations in his advertising matter of the general effect as heretofore stated.

PAR. 5. That in truth and in fact respondent's said medicines do not constitute a cure, remedy or competent and adequate treatment for sterility in women or for female diseases generally, or for leucorrhœa or for delayed, painful and suppressed menstruation, nor do they constitute an effective treatment for such diseases and conditions where the same are caused by many diseased and abnormal conditions. Said medicines are not beneficial in cases of sterility unless such condition is due to functional weakness. They act, respectively, only as a palliative and tonic, as an antiseptic, and as a laxative. The representations of respondent as aforesaid are greatly exaggerated, inaccurate, misleading, and much broader than are justified by the facts.

PAR. 6. That the representations of respondent as aforesaid have had and do have the tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the public in the particulars as aforesaid, and to cause and induce them to buy and use respondent's said preparations because of the erroneous beliefs engendered as above set forth, and to divert trade to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale of preparations of the same or similar kind as those sold by respondent or of those adapted to and used for the same general purposes for which respondent recommends his said preparations as aforesaid. There are among the competitors of respondent those who in no wise make the same or similar false and misleading representations as made by respondent as herein set out and who truthfully and accurately state the uses for which their said preparations may be used and the effects thereof.

PAR. 7. The above acts and things done by respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and the competitors of respondent in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on December 28, 1935, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, H. Will Elders, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, a stipulation as to the facts was agreed upon by and between W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, and the respondent by which it was agreed that the statement of facts so agreed upon should be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto. It was further agreed that said Commission might proceed upon such statement of facts to make its report stating its findings as to the facts (including inferences from said stipulated facts) and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Said stipulation as to the facts has been duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, and the statement of facts agreed to, as aforesaid, in lieu of testimony, briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Said respondent, H. Will Elders, is now and has been engaged for more than five years last past in the sale and distribution in commerce of a certain medicinal preparation known and described as Dr. H. Will Elders Filled Prescription for Women, as well as of certain other medicinal preparations designed and intended to be used in connection therewith and known and described, respectively, as Dr. H. Will Elders' Private Prescription Sanitary Douche and Dr. Elders' Laxative Lozenges. The office and principal place of business of respondent in the conduct of his said business is and has been located in the city of St. Joseph in the State of Missouri. Said respondent, in the course and conduct of his said business, causes the said medicines, so sold by him, to be transported in interstate commerce from his said place of business in Missouri to, into and through States of the United States other than Missouri to various and numerous persons in such other States to whom such preparations are or have been sold. Respondent's usual course of business is to sell his said medicines direct to members of the public.

PAR. 2. During the time above mentioned, other individuals, firms, and corporations in various States of the United States are and have been engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of medicines and preparations similar in kind to those of respondent or intended for and adapted to the uses for which respondent's said medicines are adapted. Such other individuals, firms, and corporations have caused and do now cause their said medicines and preparations, when sold by them, to be transported from the various States of the United States where they are located to, into and through States other than the State of origin in the shipment thereof. Said respondent has been, during the aforesaid time, in competition in interstate commerce in the sale of his said medicines with such other individuals, firms, and corporations. Such competition has been direct and substantial. Such competing medicines and preparations are sold either direct to members of the consuming public by mail or through agents or they are sold to wholesale or retail dealers through whom they are in turn sold to members of the public.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in connection with the sale of his said medicines, as aforesaid, has made use of advertisements inserted in magazines and other publications circulated to the purchasing public in the various States of the United States. He also has advertised and does now advertise his said medicines by means of circular letters and other advertising material which he causes to be distributed to the purchasing public in various States of the United States by mail or otherwise.

PAR. 4. By the means aforesaid, respondent represents, either directly or by implication or by the publication of testimonials of others, that his preparations, as above set out and described, constitute a cure, remedy or competent and adequate treatment for sterility in women. Respondent further represents, by the means and in the manner aforesaid, that his said preparations constitute a cure, remedy or competent and adequate treatment for female diseases generally, and especially for leucorrhœa and delayed, painful and suppressed menstruation. One such advertisement so used by respondent containing such representations is the following:

A BABY IN YOUR HOME.
Scientists now state that "Complete unity in life depends on sex harmony" and that the lack of it is the one greatest cause for unhappy marriages. Also that every woman "has the capacity for sex expression" but too often she is undeveloped or suffering with general female disorders, which rob her of her normal desires. During an experience of more than 35 years specializing in the treatment of diseases peculiar to women, I developed a simple home treatment which has brought new hope, health and happiness to many thousands. Many who had been childless for years became proud and happy mothers. Husbands have written me the most glowing letters of gratitude and now I want every woman who is run-down or suffering from female disorders to learn about this splendid treatment, and how she may use it in the privacy of her own home.

DR. H. WILL ELDERS, Suite 528-E, 7th and Feltz Streets, St. Joseph, Mo.

Other representations to the same general effect as stated in the foregoing advertisement have been made by respondent in his advertising matter by quoting from testimonials given by users of his aforesaid medicines. The following excerpts from a few of such testimonials so used by respondent are illustrative of such representations:

Your medicines have improved me greatly. I don't have that soreness and tender feeling, not even when I am menstruating. It has done wonders to me for as sick as I was. It has saved me the worry of an operation. * * *

I used to suffer terribly every month and would have to go to bed and stay some times all day but now I feel fine and when my menstruation periods come I don't have those terrible pains. I am telling the honest truth I don't believe I would ever have had a baby if it had not been for your medicine. * * *

* * * Will say that Dr. Elders Filled Prescription has made a new woman out of me.

I want to thank you for your wonderful treatments I took last fall. I am expecting a baby in October. * * * I know the treatments did the work. * * *

Am very glad to let you know that the last box of Dr. Elders Filled Prescription for Women I took has surely helped me out. I am now five months pregnant, and am very glad. I certainly will praise your prescription to any woman who wants a family.

* * * If it had not been for your treatment I would have been dead. I am glad to be well again after 23 years of sickness. * * *

I am feeling so fine I just have to sit down and write to you and let you know that your medicine has helped me. * * * I have suffered 2 years with painful, irregular menstruation and tired aching feeling. I didn't have any appetite to speak of, eating sometimes only once a day but now I just can't get enough to eat and am feeling fine.

Other representations made by respondent in his advertising matter in regard to his said medicines include the following:

Sanitary Douche (Mentho-Borodine), my own Private Prescription, offers the most speedy relief from this condition (Leucorrhœa) of any treatment I have ever found.

You are now beginning a treatment * * * which has a most unusual and long record of success in alleviating many cases of painful, delayed or irregular menstruation, general female disorders and lack of feeling.

Respondent makes many other representations in his advertising matter of the same general effect as heretofore stated.

PAR. 5. The qualitative formula for said Dr. H. Will Elders' Filled Prescription for Women, with quantitative formula per tablet, is as follows:

Powdered Viburnum Opulus-----	½ gr.
Powdered Gentian-----	1 gr.
Powdered Ferrous Sulphate—Dried-----	1 gr.
Arsenous Acid-----	1/80 gr.
P. E. Cascara Sagrada-----	1/12 gr.
Powdered Hydrastis-----	1 gr.
Powdered Aletris-----	1 gr.
Powdered Caulophyllum-----	1½ gr.
Powdered Pulsatilla-----	1 gr.
Powdered Cimicifuga-----	1 gr.
Dessiccated Corpus Lutea (Sow)-----	½ gr.

The dosage for said medicine, as recommended by respondent, is one to two tablets at meal time three times a day.

The qualitative formula for said Dr. Elders' Laxative Lozenges, with quantitative formula per tablet is as follows:

Cascarin-----	¼ gr.
Aloin-----	¼ gr.
Podophyllum Resin (U. S. P.)-----	½ gr.
Strychnine Sulphate-----	½ ¹⁸⁰ gr.
Ext. Belladonna Leaves-----	½ ¹⁶ gr.
Oleoresin Ginger-----	¼ min.

The dosage for said last named medicine, as recommended by respondent, is one to two lozenges on retiring or one lozenge before meals.

The formula for Dr. H. Will Elders' Private Prescription Sanitary Douche, based on a quantity of 101 pounds, is as follows:

Borate Tetra-----	100 lbs.
Chloramine-T-----	500 grms.
Menthol Crystals-----	200 grs.

The directions for use of said last named preparation, as given by respondent to his customers, are to dissolve one teaspoonful in one quart of hot water and use as a vaginal douche by means of a syringe each night until improvement and then every second night.

Findings

Respondent's said medicines are directed to be used together in the treatment of the conditions for which respondent recommends them and are usually so used.

PAR. 6. Respondent's said medicines when used either together or singly do not constitute a cure, remedy or competent and adequate treatment for sterility in women, nor for diseased conditions which are most frequently the cause of sterility. In cases of sterility due to disease or to anatomical abnormalities, such medicines would not be effective in removing the condition. Neither do said medicines used together or singly constitute a cure, remedy or competent and adequate treatment for female diseases or for leucorrhea or for delayed, suppressed or painful menstruation, nor are they effective in the treatment of such conditions and diseases where the same are caused by many diseased conditions. Representations to the contrary are neither accurate nor limited enough to express the true therapeutic effects of said medicines.

Said medicine, Dr. H. Will Elders' Filled Prescription for Women, may be beneficial in some cases of sterility due to functional weakness, but it is not beneficial in all such cases, including those cases where the functional weakness is the result of disease. The causes of sterility are many and varied. Many of such cases are not due to functional weakness, but are the result of disease and anatomical abnormalities. Said medicine acts as a general tonic and tends to aid nutrition. In this way it would tend to relieve sterility in cases not due to any diseased or abnormal condition by aiding in restoring the patient to normal health.

Said medicine acts as a palliative and gives some relief from pain. It has no curative effects where any definite pathology exists. It will not cure or remedy ovarian pains, uterine displacements, leucorrhea, pus tubes, enlargement or inflammation of the generative organs, fibroids of the uterus, cyst of the ovary, cancer of the uterus, infections of the uterus or of the Fallopian tubes, all of which are included in the term "female diseases." It has no effect on the causes underlying or forming the basis of female diseases where a pathological condition exists.

Respondent's said medicine Dr. Elders' Laxative Lozenges is a laxative. Its only effect in connection with the treatment of sterility and of female disorders is to cause an evacuation of the bowels and to give temporary relief in constipation, where such condition may exist, and thus is associated with such other conditions to be treated.

Respondent's said medicine Dr. H. Will Elders' Private Prescription Sanitary Douche is a cleansing, sanitary wash. It has inhibitory antiseptic properties and some slight inhibitory germicidal properties but is not a general germicide. Its use may be beneficial to women, whether suffering from female disorders or not, by promoting cleanliness and desirable hygienic conditions in the vagina. Its use would tend to lessen the discharges in some cases of leucorrhoea but not in cases of leucorrhoea due to gonorrhoea. Some such antiseptic wash is indicated generally in treating vaginal disorders. However, it does not in itself have curative properties in many causative pathological conditions producing sterility and most so-called female diseases.

PAR. 7. The representations of respondent, as aforesaid, have had and do have the tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the public in the particulars as aforesaid, and to cause and induce them to buy and use respondent's said preparations because of the erroneous beliefs engendered as above set forth, and to divert trade to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in interstate commerce of preparations of the same or similar kind as those sold by respondent or of those adapted to and used for the same general purposes for which respondent's said preparations are adapted.

PAR. 8. There are among the competitors of respondent, in the sale of his said preparations, those who do not make in anywise the same or similar misleading representations as made by respondent, as herein set forth, but who truthfully and accurately state the therapeutic effects of their said preparations. Respondent's said acts and practices tend to and do divert business to respondent from its competitors, to the substantial injury and prejudice of such competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, H. Will Elders, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, and an agreed statement of facts in lieu of testimony, briefs and oral argument having been waived, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent

ent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered that the respondent, H. Will Elders, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of his medicinal preparations known and described as Dr. H. Will Elders' Filled Prescription for Women, Dr. H. Will Elders' Private Prescription Sanitary Douche and Dr. Elders' Laxative Lozenges, or of any preparations of the same or similar formulae, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or indirectly, or by implication, or by use of the statements, endorsements, or testimonials of others:

1. That said medicinal preparations, or any of them, constitute a cure, remedy, or competent and adequate treatment for sterility in women.

2. That said medicinal preparations, or any of them, are beneficial in the treatment of sterility in women unless such representations are specifically limited to cases of sterility due to functional weakness.

3. That said medicinal preparations, or any of them, are beneficial in all cases of sterility in women due to functional weakness or that they are beneficial in such cases where the functional weakness is the result of disease.

4. That said medicinal preparations, or any of them, constitute a cure, remedy, or competent and adequate treatment for so-called female diseases or troubles, or for leucorrhoea or for delayed, painful, or suppressed menstruation, or for the pathological conditions producing or that may cause the same.

5. That said medicinal preparations, or any of them, are beneficial in the treatment of leucorrhoea unless such representations are limited to such cases not due to gonorrhoeal infection and also limited to the sedative effects of the said Filled Prescription and to the antiseptic and soothing effects of said Sanitary Douche.

6. That said medicinal preparations, or any of them, are beneficial in the treatment of delayed, painful or suppressed menstruation unless such representations are limited to relief from pain and to the sedative and palliative effects of said Filled Prescription in cases where no definite pathology exists.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

GEORGE LANDON AND MICHAEL MASON WARNER,
TRADING AS LANDON & WARNER

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2947. Complaint, Oct. 15, 1936—Decision, Apr. 5, 1937

Where two individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of billfolds, Gladstone handbags, and other similar products, in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution of similar goods or articles in commerce between and among the various States, and with numerous competitors who make and sell their billfolds and aforesaid handbags, covered with leather made from the outside or top side of cow skin, after having been separated or split from the flesh side thereof, and properly described by makers of such products, and generally known by manufacturers and dealers and purchasing public as "cowhide," "genuine cowhide," "choice leather," and ". . . A-1 quality leather," and for which articles and other leather products thus made and generally known and described as aforesaid, purchasing public generally has a pronounced and distinct preference—

- (a) Represented, through marks, stamps, and brands in large letters on their said handbags, that the same were genuine cowhide, and in advertising circulars distributed widely among their customers and prospective customers, that the said handbags, thus offered, sold and distributed, were "made only of choice leather . . .," and of "A-1 quality leather," facts being handbags thus described were not made from the outside or top side of cowskin and were not genuine cowhide or made of choice leather or of A-1 quality leather, as ordinarily and commonly understood by purchasing public, but were composed of the much inferior, less durable, and cheaper split cowhide derived from the flesh side of the skin; and
- (b) Represented, in their advertising circulars, that the initials of purchasers of said handbags were placed thereon in "14-K Gold" and that such initials would be encased within a "14-K Gold" frame, and, in their advertising catalogs distributed to their customers and prospective customers, that the metallic corners and snap-buttons on their billfolds were "14-K Gold," facts being said initial letters and frames and metallic corners and snap-buttons were not composed of "14-K gold," but, on the contrary, were 14-K gold plated;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasing public into the erroneous beliefs that the Gladstone handbags advertised, offered, and sold by them were made from the outside or topside of cow skin and were genuine cowhide, choice leather, and A-1 quality leather, as represented by them, and that said articles, when purchased, would be stamped with initials of the purchaser in 14-K Gold and a 14-K Gold frame, and that the said billfolds' metallic corners and snap-buttons were 14-K Gold, and with capacity and tendency to induce members of the purchasing public to buy said products because of the erroneous beliefs thus engendered, and to

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that George Landon and Michael Mason Warner, Jr., trading as Landon and Warner, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, George Landon and Michael Mason Warner, Jr., are copartners, trading under the name and style of Landon and Warner, with their office and principal place of business located at 360 N. Michigan Avenue, in the city of Chicago, Ill. They are now, and have been for more than one year last past, engaged in the business of selling and distributing billfolds, Gladstone bags, and other similar products to members of the purchasing public in commerce, as herein set out.

PAR. 2. The respondents, being engaged in business as aforesaid, cause and caused said products, when sold by them, to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of Chicago, Ill., to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been at all times mentioned herein a constant current of trade in commerce in said products sold and distributed by said respondents among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business are now, and have been at all times mentioned herein, engaged in substantial competition with other partnerships and with corporations, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. Many of respondents' competitors, mentioned in paragraph 3 hereof, make and sell billfolds and Gladstone bags covered with leather made from the outside or top-side of cowskin after same has been separated or split from the flesh-side of the skin. Such leather is described by makers of such products, and generally known by manufacturers, tanners, dealers, and the purchasing public as "cowhide," "genuine cowhide," "choice leather," and "A-1 quality leather." The flesh side of the cowskin is now used to some extent for the making of leather, which leather is ordinarily known and described as "split cowhide." It is very much inferior in quality and durability to, and cheaper in price than, "genuine cowhide," "choice leather," and "A-1 quality leather" as described in this paragraph. There is a marked preference on the part of the purchasing public for billfolds and Gladstone bags made from genuine cowhide, choice leather, and A-1 quality leather as described herein.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of their business as described herein, respondents, in offering for sale, selling, and distributing in interstate commerce their "Landon and Warner" feature Gladstone bags represented and still represent by marks, stamps, and brands in large and conspicuous letters on the bags themselves that said Gladstone bags were and are "genuine cowhide," and they further represented and still represent in advertising circulars, circulated widely among their customers and prospective customers, that the Gladstone bags so offered for sale, sold, and distributed were "made only of choice leathers . . .," and of "A-1 quality leather." Said respondents in soliciting the sale of, and selling their Gladstone bags in interstate commerce represented, and still represent, in the advertising circular referred to that the initials of purchasers of said bags would be placed thereon in 14-K gold, and that such initials would also be encased within a 14-K gold frame. Further, respondents in the aid of the sale of their billfolds under the trade name "Pasmaster," which billfolds were, and are, equipped with metallic corners and snap buttons, represented and represent in their advertising catalogs that said metallic corners and snap buttons were "14-K gold."

PAR. 6. Said descriptions, representations, marks, stamps, and brands made by respondents as to their Gladstone bags and billfolds were, and are, false and fraudulent in that:

1. The Gladstone bags described as "genuine cowhide," "made of only choice leathers," and "A-1 quality leather" are not, and were not, genuine cowhide, made of only choice leathers, or made of A-1 quality leather as such descriptions, marks, brands, and representations are commonly understood by the purchasing public.

2. The initial letters and frames placed, and offered to be placed, on the Gladstone bags were not, and are not 14-K gold, but on the contrary were, and are, 14-K gold-plated.

3. The metallic corners and snap buttons on their billfolds were not, and are not, 14-K gold as represented, but were other than 14-K gold.

PAR. 7. The representations, descriptions, marks, stamps, and brands, as hereinbefore set out, and other similar representations, have had, and do have, the tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous beliefs that the Gladstone bags advertised and sold by respondents were genuine cowhide, made of only choice leathers, and of A-1 quality leather, as described herein, and that said bags, upon request of the purchaser, would be stamped by the respondents with the initials of the purchaser in 14-K gold and placed in a 14-K gold frame; that the metallic corners and snap buttons of the billfolds advertised and sold by respondents were 14-K gold. The said representations, descriptions, marks, brands, and stamps have had, and do have, the capacity and tendency to induce members of the purchasing public to buy said products because of the erroneous beliefs engendered, as above set forth. Further, said representations, descriptions, marks, brands, and stamps have the capacity and tendency to unfairly divert trade from competitors of respondents engaged in the sale in interstate commerce of similar products, which said competitors truthfully and rightfully advertise and represent their said products. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been and now is being done by respondents' to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The acts and practices of respondents are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors of respondents in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on the 15th day of October 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, George Landon and Michael Mason Warner, partners, trading as Landon & Warner, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Astor Hagg, attorney for the Commission, before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by George Landon, attorney for the respondents, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence and brief in support of the complaint (respondents' counsel having waived the filing of brief); and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. George Landon and Michael Mason Warner are partners trading and doing business as Landon & Warner, with their office and principal place of business located at 360 North Michigan Avenue, in the city of Chicago, Ill. For more than one year last past, respondents have been engaged in the business of selling and distributing billfolds, Gladstone handbags and other similar products. They sell and distribute their products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents ship their products when sold, from their place of business in the States of Illinois, to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. Respondents are now and for more than one year last past have been in substantial competition with other partnerships and with corporations, firms and individuals engaged in the business of selling and distributing billfolds, Gladstone handbags, and other similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. Numerous competitors of respondents manufacture and sell their billfolds and Gladstone handbags covered with leather made from the outside or topside of cowskin, after same has been separated or split from the flesh side of the skin. Leather made from the outside or topside of cowskin is properly described by makers of such products, and is generally known by manufacturers, dealers and the purchasing public, as "cowhide," "genuine cowhide," "choice leather," and "A-1 quality leather." The flesh side of the cowskin is used to some extent in the making of certain grades of leather, which grades of leather are ordinarily known and described as "split cowhide." "Split cowhide" is very much inferior in quality and durability to, and cheaper in price than, "genuine cowhide," "choice leather," and "A-1 quality leather," which are made from the outside or topside of cowskin, as before described. The purchasing public generally has a pronounced and distinct preference for billfolds and Gladstone handbags and other leather products that have been made from leather from the outside or topside of cowskin generally known and described as "genuine cowhide," "choice leather," and "A-1 quality leather" rather than split cowhide.

PAR. 3. Respondents in offering for sale and selling in interstate commerce their Gladstone handbags have represented by marks, stamps, and brands in large letters on the handbags themselves that said Gladstone handbags were "genuine cowhide." They have also represented, in advertising circulars circulated widely among their customers and prospective customers, that the Gladstone handbags so offered for sale, sold and distributed, were "made only of choice leather . . .", and of "A-1 quality leather." They have also represented in their advertising circulars that the initials of purchasers of said handbags are placed on the handbags in 14-K Gold, and that such initials would be encased within a 14-K Gold frame. Respondents have represented in their advertising catalogs distributed to their customers and prospective customers that the metallic corners and snap-buttons on their billfolds were "14-K Gold."

PAR. 4. The descriptions, representations, marks, stamps and brands used by respondents in connection with their Gladstone handbags and billfolds were and are false and misleading in that:

1. The Gladstone handbags described as being "genuine cowhide" "made of only choice leather" and "A-1 quality leather" were not made from the outside or topside of cowskin, and were not genuine cowhide, were not made of choice leather, or of A-1 quality leather as such descriptions are ordinarily and commonly understood by the purchasing public, but on the contrary such handbags were and are composed of split cowhide, derived from the flesh side of the cowskin.

2. The initial letters and frames placed and offered to be placed on the said handbags, and the metallic corners and snap buttons on their billfolds were not composed of 14-K Gold, but on the contrary, such initial letters, frames, corners and snap buttons were 14-K Gold-plated.

PAR. 5. The above and foregoing descriptions, marks and brands used by the respondents and the representations made by respondents have had and do have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the erroneous beliefs that the Gladstone handbags advertised, offered for sale, and sold by respondents, were made from the outside or topside of cowskin and were "genuine cowhide," "choice leather," and "A-1 quality leather" as represented by respondents, and that said handbags, when purchased would be stamped by the respondents with initials of the purchaser in 14-K Gold and placed in a 14-K Gold Frame; that the metallic corners and snap-buttons of the billfolds advertised and sold by the respondents were 14-K Gold. The representations, marks, brands and descriptions used by respondents as aforesaid have had and do have the capacity and tendency to induce members of the purchasing public to buy said products because of the erroneous beliefs engendered as above set forth. Such representations, descriptions, marks, and brands used by the respondents, have a capacity and tendency to unfairly divert trade from competitors of respondents engaged in the sale in interstate commerce of similar products who rightfully and truthfully represent their products and who do not in anywise falsely represent their products; and in this manner, respondents do substantial injury to the competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, George Landon and Michael Mason Warner, partners, trading and doing business as Landon & Warner, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief of the Commission filed herein (respondents having waived the filing of brief); and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondents, George Landon and Michael Mason Warner, individually and as partners trading as Landon and Warner, their representatives, agents, servants, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of Gladstone handbags, luggage and billfolds in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Labeling, stamping, marking, branding, advertising or otherwise representing through the use of the words "cowhide," "genuine cowhide," "choice leather," and "A-1 quality leather," or any other word or words of similar meaning, import or effect, that Gladstone handbags or other luggage manufactured in whole or in part from the under layers or flesh side of cowskin, known as split leather, are made from the outside layer of cowskin;

2. Using the term "14-K Gold" or any other term, mark or symbol of similar import to describe initials or letters placed on the handbags when such initials are not composed of 14-K gold and when they are gold-plated;

IN THE MATTER OF
JOSEPH A. PIUMACOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 2229. Complaint, Sept. 5, 1934—Decision, Apr. 6, 1937*

Where an individual, manufacturing pharmacist, engaged in sale and distribution of a preparation made for him under his formula and known and sold for some seven or eight years theretofore under name "Glendage," and formerly under name "Sexvitor," and in marketing said preparation, packaged in bottles of ninety tablets, for sale at retail for $3.00, through wholesale drug jobbers principally, and through retail drug chains, and occasionally direct to consumers, at various points in the several States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with those engaged in offer and sale of remedies, preparations, products and treatments used and useful for treatment and correction of ailments and conditions for which his said "Glendage" might possess any corrective or therapeutic value, and for treatment and correction of ailments and conditions for which he represented said preparation as an effective corrective or treatment—

Represented, in advertising said "Glendage" in newspapers in various cities and through form letters mailed to prospective purchasers thereof and through pamphlets distributed among such purchasers and containing statements as to the value thereof in the treatment and correction of human ailments and conditions, and superiority thereof compared with other preparations and products used in treatment and correction of ailments and conditions for which it was recommended, that said "Glendage" was a gland tonic and remedy which would restore vigorous health, and was the best such remedy known, and the "last word" in "modern science" in such remedies, and one which stimulated all the glands to healthy activity and was entirely unlike other so-called gland remedies, and stood superior as a tonic, and was a remedy for nervousness, overwork, and lack of vim and vigor, and would return one to the full vigor of manhood or womanhood, and constituted competent and effective treatment or corrective for use in remedying ailments and conditions indicated, facts being it did not possess the therapeutic efficacy represented and implied by him in treatment and correction of ailments and conditions for which recommended, and said various representations and statements were false and misleading;

With effect of misleading and deceiving many persons affected with ailments and conditions concerning which said representations and implications were made, and of causing a substantial portion of such persons erroneously to believe that said representations and implications were true, and that preparation in question possessed therapeutic efficacy represented, and was a competent and effective treatment or corrective for use in remedying ailments and conditions for which recommended, and of causing a substantial portion of such persons, because of such erroneous belief, to buy said preparation, and thereby unfairly divert trade to him from his competitors who truthfully represent their preparations, products, remedies and treatments; to their substantial injury and that of the public:

Complaint

24 F. T. C.

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. Edw. W. Thomerson for the Commission.

Canepa & Castruccio, of Los Angeles, Calif., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that Joseph A. Piuma, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Joseph A. Piuma, is a manufacturing pharmacist, with his principal office and place of business in the city of Los Angeles, in the State of California. Now and for more than two years last past he has been engaged in the business of selling, among other articles, a purported medicinal preparation designated by him as "Glendage," and in the sale thereof between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, causing said "Glendage" when sold by him to be transported from his place of business in the city of Los Angeles, California, to the purchasers thereof located in said State and to other purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now and has been for more than two years last past a constant current of trade in commerce by the respondent in the said "Glendage" between and among the various States and territories of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent is now, and for more than two years last past has been, in substantial competition with other persons, and with firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in commerce between and among the various States of the United States; in medicinal preparations, pills and compounds for use in the treatment of physical impairments and physical disabilities for which respondent's said "Glendage" is advertised and represented by respondent to be a remedy.

PAR. 2. In and by advertisements, circulars, and letters sent by respondent through the mails, respondent in selling and soliciting the sale between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, of his said product called "Glend-age," now and for more than two years last past, has falsely represented, and still falsely represents, among other things concerning said "Glendage," that—

1. Said "Glendage" is a gland tonic;
2. Said "Glendage" restores vigorous health;
3. Said "Glendage" is the best gland remedy known;
4. Said "Glendage" constitutes a remedy for glands;
5. Said "Glendage" is the last word in modern science;
6. Said "Glendage" stimulates all the glands to healthy activity;
7. Said "Glendage" is entirely unlike other so-called gland remedies;
8. Said "Glendage" stands superior to a tonic;
9. Said "Glendage" is a wonderful remedy for cases of nervousness or overwork, or lack of vim, or lack of vigor; and
10. Said "Glendage" will return one to the full vigor of manhood or womanhood, when in truth and in fact said "Glendage" is not a gland tonic; will not restore vigorous health; not only is not the best gland remedy known but is not a gland remedy; does not constitute a remedy for glands; not only is not the last word in modern science but is not a scientific product; will not stimulate all of the glands to healthy activity, or any of them; is not unlike other so-called gland remedies; is not a tonic; is not a wonderful remedy, or any remedy at all, for cases of nervousness or overwork, or lack of vim, or lack of vigor, and will not return one to the full vigor of manhood or womanhood.

PAR. 3. The aforesaid misrepresentations made by the said respondent as set out in paragraph 2 hereof, have had, and still have, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and have misled and deceived the purchasing public in the beliefs that the aforesaid statements set out in paragraph 2 hereof made by the said respondent, are true, and have had and still have the capacity and tendency to induce, and have induced the purchasing public to purchase said "Glendage" from the respondent in such beliefs.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of the respondent mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and sellers of medicinal preparations and products who do not make representations concerning their medicinal preparations and products such as those made by the respondent and enumerated in paragraph 2 hereof. The aforesaid misrepresentations made by respondent have the capacity and tendency to divert trade from such competitors in interstate commerce and thereby substantial injury is done by respondent to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 5. The above alleged acts and things done by respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on September 5, 1934, issued and, on September 10, 1934, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Joseph A. Piuma, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Edw. W. Thomerson, attorney for the Commission, before W. W. Sheppard, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, no evidence having been offered by the respondent in opposition thereto; and said testimony and evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and evidence, brief in support of the complaint, no brief having been filed in opposition thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Joseph A. Piuma, is a manufacturing pharmacist and sells and distributes a number of medicinal preparations, with his office and principal place of business at 600 Spring Street in the city of Los Angeles, in the State of California, and maintains a laboratory at 221 San Fernando Road, Los Angeles, Calif. Among the medicinal preparations sold and distributed by the respondent from his said place of business in the city of Los Angeles, in the State of California, is a preparation manufactured by Sharp and Dohme of Philadelphia, Pa., under a formula of the respondent, which is now, and has been for the past seven or eight years, known as, and sold under the name, "Glendage" and which was formerly known as and sold under the name of "Sexvitor."

Respondent markets said preparation Glendage principally through wholesale drug jobbers, through retail drug chains, and, occasionally, direct to consumers located at various points in the several States of the United States other than in the State of California and in the District of Columbia, and when such sales are made, the respondent causes said preparation to be transported from his place of business in the city of Los Angeles and State of California to the said purchasers thereof.

The preparation Glendage is packaged in bottles of ninety tablets each which sell at retail for the sum of $3.00. Respondent's annual business in the sale of said preparation for the past three or four years has ranged from $25,000 to $30,000. The respondent in offering for sale and selling the preparation Glendage in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, is in substantial competition with other individuals and with firms and corporations who are engaged in said commerce in the business of offering for sale and selling remedies, preparations, products, and treatments used and useful for the treatment and correction of the ailments and conditions for which the respondent's said preparation Glendage might possess any corrective or therapeutic value and for the treatment and correction of the ailments and conditions for which the respondent represents the preparation Glendage to be an effective corrective or treatment.

PAR. 2. The preparation Glendage is in tablet form and is packaged in bottles containing ninety tablets which retail for $3.00 per bottle. The approximate annual sales of the preparation Glendage are between $25,000 and $30,000.

The preparation Glendage is compounded of glandular substances in combination with phosphorus nux vomica and cascara. An analysis of the preparation Glendage shows that it is constituted as follows:

Number of tablets—63.

Average weight (50 tabs.), 0.3155 gm. or 4.868 grs./tablet

Total alkaloids calculated as nux vomica extract (USP X), 3.59% or 0.175 grs./tablet

Iodine in organic combination, 0.0334% or 0.00148 grs./tablet, 0.0304% or 0.00148 grs./tablet

Equivalent to thyroid, 0.87 grs./tablet

Qualitative Tests:

Alkaloids—Present. (Brucine and strychnine identified, which point to presence of nux vomica extract)

Phosphates—Trace.

Emodin test—Positive. (Extract cascara sagrada indicated)

Zinc—Present.

Findings

24 F. T. C.

Tablet excipients Present. (Talc, iron oxide, calcium carbonate, and red coloring matter)

Glandular substances—Indicated by odor.

Inorganic iodides—Absent.

Product is a red coated pill, and is composed of animal tissues apparently glandular in nature (which is indicated by odor of the substance, and also the organically combined iodine content), with small amounts of alkaloids (strychnine and brucine, probably indicating the presence of nux vomica), emodin bearing drugs (cascara indicated by taste and odor), and traces of zinc, phosphates, iron, calcium, and talc (the latter three probably as tablet excipients).

The organically combined iodine content of the pills correspond to 0.87 gr./tablet of thyroid (U. S. P. X), but iodine is also a constituent of other glandular substances.

The formula used in compounding the preparation in 1927 is as follows:

Suprarenal Glands desiccated.....	1/8 Gr.
Thyroid desiccated.....	1/8 Gr.
Pituitary Whole desiccated.....	1/12 Gr.
Orchic Substance desiccated.....	2 Gr.
Zinc Phosphide to represent Phosphorus.....	1/100 Gr.
Ext. Nux Vomica.....	1/8 Gr.
Ext. Cascara Sagrada.....	1/8 Gr.

Excipient to make one tablet.

PAR. 3. The respondent, Joseph A. Piuna, during the five years last past, has advertised the preparation Glendage in newspapers located in various cities in the States of the United States, and through form letters mailed to prospective purchasers of said preparation, and through pamphlets distributed among prospective purchasers containing statements as to the value of said preparation in the treatment and correction of ailments and conditions found to exist in the human body and the superiority of the preparation when compared with other preparations and products used in the treatment and correction of the ailments and conditions for which it is recommended.

Among and typical of the statements so used are the following:

GLENDAGE is the last word in glandular therapy. In convenient tablet form, Glendage contains the extracts from the glands of healthy animals, and stimulates ALL OF THE GLANDS to healthy activity. The effect is astonishing—almost magical. You return to the full vigor of manhood and womanhood. Your interest in life returns. Vigorous health is necessary for success in all activity today.

Do not confuse Glendage with other so called gland remedies. It is entirely unlike others—is a REAL GLAND PRODUCT and carries an unlimited guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

Restores Vigorous Health

We guarantee to restore your pep, vigor, vitality, or we refund every cent. That's how sure we are that we have the best gland remedy known. Thousands of tests have proved this to our full satisfaction. Now, WITHOUT RISK, you can prove it to yours.

IS YOUR HEALTH SLIPPING?

New Gland Tonic Discovered

If you feel that the "big kick" of life is passing, if your vigor and pep is waning, try Glendage, the new money-back glandular tablet. It is no longer necessary to be weak, nervous, frail, run down. By regulating and stimulating gland secretions millions of red blood corpuscles are built and you again feel the glow of youthful vigor.

IS YOUR VIGOR SLIPPING?

PAR. 4. By the means and in the manner above stated, the respondent Joseph A. Piuma represents and implies that the said preparation Glendage is a gland tonic; that it will restore vigorous health; that it is the best gland remedy known; that it constitutes a remedy for glands; that it is the last word in "modern science" in gland remedies and stimulates all of the glands to healthy activity; that it is entirely unlike other so-called gland remedies; that it stands superior to all other tonics as a tonic; that it is a remedy for cases of nervousness, overwork, lack of vim and lack of vigor; that it will return one who does not possess the full vigor of manhood or womanhood to such a state; and that said preparation Glendage is a competent and effective treatment or corrective for use in remedying the ailments and conditions mentioned.

In truth and in fact, said preparation Glendage is not a competent and effective treatment or corrective for use in remedying the ailments and conditions for which it is recommended; it is not a gland tonic; it will not restore vigorous health; it is not the best gland remedy known; it does not constitute a remedy for glands; it is not the last word in "modern science" in gland remedies nor does it stimulate all the glands to healthy activity; it is not unlike other so-called gland remedies; it is not superior as a tonic; it is not a remedy for cases of nervousness, overwork, lack of vim and lack of vigor; and it will not return one to the full vigor of manhood or womanhood.

In truth and in fact, said preparation Glendage does not possess the therapeutic efficacy represented and implied by the respondent Joseph A. Piuma in the treatment and correction of the ailments and conditions for which it is recommended.

Order.

24 F. T. C.

PAR. 5. The representations and implications so used by the respondent Joseph A. Pioma, in connection with the sale of said preparation Glendage in said commerce, in the matter hereinabove set out, are false and misleading and have had, and do have, the tendency and capacity to, and have, and do, mislead and deceive many persons affected with the ailments and conditions about which said representations and implications are made, and cause a substantial portion of such persons erroneously to believe that said representations and implications are true and that said preparation possesses the therapeutic efficacy represented and is a competent and effective treatment or corrective for use in remedying the ailments and conditions for which it is recommended; and cause a substantial portion of such persons, because of such erroneous belief, to purchase said preparation Glendage, thereby unfairly diverting trade to the respondent from his competitors who truthfully represent their preparations, products, remedies, and treatments, to the substantial injury of said competitors in said commerce and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Joseph A. Pioma, are to the prejudice of the public and the respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Joseph A. Pioma, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of the medicinal preparation now known as, and sold under the name, Glendage, or any other preparation, under whatever name sold, composed of similar ingredients and possessing therapeutic properties similar to the preparation now known as, and sold under the name, Glendage, in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly representing:

1. That said preparation is a gland tonic;
2. That said preparation will restore vigorous health;
3. That said preparation is the best gland remedy known;
4. That said preparation constitutes a remedy for glands;
5. That said preparation is the "last word" in "modern science" in gland remedies, and stimulates all the glands to healthy activity;
6. That said preparation is entirely unlike other so-called gland remedies;
7. That said preparation stands superior as a tonic;
8. That said preparation is a remedy for cases of nervousness, overwork, lack of vim and lack of vigor;
9. That said preparation will return one to the full vigor of manhood or womanhood;
10. That said preparation is a competent and effective treatment or corrective for use in remedying the ailments and conditions hereinabove mentioned.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
E. G. ZELLERS AND M. W. ZELLERS, TRADING AS ZELLERS
LABORATORIES

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2835. Complaint, June 5, 1936—Decision, Apr. 6, 1937

Where a firm engaged in the sale and distribution of poultry medicines and remedies, including their "Zellers Kamala Nicotine Tabs," "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 1," "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 2," and "Carbo-Zel Tablets," in substantial competition with others engaged in the manufacture and sale of similar and like commodities used for the same or similar purposes—

Represented, in advertising their aforesaid four preparations, that said products, as the case might be, constituted effective remedies or treatments for round and tape worms and internal parasites in fowls, and an effective remedy and agency for the removal of all such parasites, and effective remedies and treatments for intestinal flu and various other conditions and ailments in turkeys and irritations caused by worms in fowls, and constituted perfect and ideal antiseptics for fowls, and would preclude infestation by worms, or were scientifically prepared successfully to combat the ravages of intestinal worms in fowls, and to counteract toxic poisons created by their presence, and constituted a worm preventive, facts being such representations and statements were false and misleading and said various preparations did not have the qualities or properties thus represented, and would not accomplish such results;

With tendency and capacity to deceive and mislead substantial portions of purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and with the result that consuming public, as a direct consequence of mistaken and erroneous beliefs thus engendered, purchased substantial volume of their commodities and trade was thereby unfairly diverted to them from competitors engaged in sale of products of same kind and nature, and who truthfully advertise and represent their character and quality and results to be obtained from use thereof; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

name Zellers Laboratories, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and now are, using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. E. G. Zellers and M. W. Zellers, copartners, doing business under the trade name Zellers Laboratories, with their principal place of business at Orrton Avenue and Noble Street, Reading, Pa., are now and for several years last past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of poultry products, consisting of medicines and remedies for various diseases in fowls, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the course of the sale and distribution of the aforesaid commodities cause the same to be transported to the purchasers thereof from their place of business in the city of Reading, State of Pennsylvania, into and through the various States of the United States other than the State of Pennsylvania.

PAR. 2. There are among the competitors of respondents, individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the manufacture and sale of similar and like commodities, or commodities to be used for the same and similar purposes, who offer for sale and sell their said products to purchasers located in the various States of the United States, and who cause their said products when sold to be transported to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. There are, among the poultry products offered for sale and sold by respondents as aforesaid, products sold under the trade names "Zellers Kamala Nicotine Tabs," "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 1," "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 2," and "Carbo-Zel Tablets." In the course of the offering for sale and sale of the poultry medicines and remedies sold under the trade names designated supra in this paragraph, the respondents have caused and cause statements and representations to be made in advertisements, pamphlets, circulars, trade magazines, and other printed matter which is published or distributed in the various States of the United States to the following effect, gist, or meaning:

(a) "Zellers Kamala Nicotine Tabs" are an effective individual worm treatment for Round and Tape Worms in chickens, turkeys and other fowls; they are a powerful and effective agency for ridding your birds of worms; they do not dissolve until they reach the gizzard, where normal grinding action releases the medicine right at the seat of the worms; they produce results in less than six hours; medication is released at the very seat of the worm infestation, resulting in efficient ridding of the bird's body of intestinal parasites; unless the head of the Tape Worm is removed treatment will be of no avail; and the head of the worm must come out as it is the root of the Tape Worm.

(b) "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 1" contains the elements essential to the proper development of future layers; it is a special tonic for building up disease resistance and aiding in the quick recovery from worm infestation; it and "Carbo-Zellers Tablets" are ideal antiseptics; they will prevent digestive disorders; they are effective treatments for intestinal flu, coccidiosis, diarrhea, cholera, typhoid, brooder pneumonia, blackhead in turkeys and irritation caused by worms.

(c) "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 2" is especially recommended for flock treatment of worms, is scientifically prepared to combat the ravages of these small, microscopic worms, to counteract the toxic poisons they give off; it is an excellent tonic and worm preventive.

PAR. 4. All of the representations and statements made by the respondents in the manner indicated in paragraph 3 hereof are false and misleading. "Zellers Kamala Nicotine Tabs" is not an effective treatment for all worms in chickens and other fowls, and is not an effective remedy for tape worms and worms other than round worms; it will not remove the heads of tape worms, and is not an effective remedy for such purpose. "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 1" and "Carbo-Zellers Tablets" are not effective remedies for coccidiosis and other poultry diseases designated in sub-section (b) of paragraph 3 supra, and will not produce the results represented by respondents as set forth in said paragraph. "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 2" is not an effective flock treatment scientifically prepared to combat the ravages of small, microscopic worms and to counteract the toxic poison they give off; it is not a worm preventive and will not produce the results represented by respondents as described in sub-section (c) of paragraph 3 supra.

PAR. 5. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondents in the manner hereinabove set out, were, and are calculated to, and have had, and now have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive substantial portions of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. As a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced thereby the consuming public has purchased a substantial volume of respondents' commodities, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondents from competitors engaged in selling commodities of the same kind and nature in commerce as hereinabove set out, and who truthfully advertise and represent the character and quality, and the results to be obtained from the use of their said products. As a result thereof, a substantial injury has been and is being done by respondents to competition in commerce, as hereinabove set forth.

PAR. 6. The above acts and practices of respondents are to the injury and prejudice of the public and to competitors of respondents in interstate commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer, briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, E. G. Zellers and M. W. Zellers, copartners, are doing business under the trade name of Zellers' Laboratories, having a principal place of business at Orrton Avenue and Noble Street, Reading, Pa. They are and for several years past have been engaged in the sale and distribution of poultry products consisting of medicines and remedies for various diseases in fowls. When sales are made, respondents cause said products to be transported from their place of business in the city of Reading, Pa., into and through various States of the United States to the purchasers thereof.

Findings

24 F. T. C.

PAR. 2. There are other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the manufacture and sale of similar and like commodities which are used for the same and similar purposes, who offer for sale and sell their products to purchasers located in the various States of the United States, and who cause their products, when sold, to be transported to purchasers located in the various States of the United States. Respondents are engaged in substantial competition with such other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations in such commerce.

PAR. 3. Among the products offered for sale and sold by respondents as aforesaid, are products sold under the trade names "Zellers Kamala Nicotine Tabs," "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 1," "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 2," and "Carbo-Zel Tablets." In the course of the promotion and sale of their products under the trade names designated herein, the respondents cause statements and representations to be made in advertising matter which is distributed in the various States of the United States to the following effect, gist, or meaning:

(a) "Zellers Kamala Nicotine Tabs" are an effective individual worm treatment for round and tape worms in chickens, turkeys and other fowls; they are a powerful and effective agency for ridding birds of worms; they do not dissolve until they reach the gizzard, where normal grinding action releases the medicine right at the seat of the worms; they produce results in less than six hours; medication is released at the very seat of the worm infestation, resulting in efficient ridding of the bird's body of intestinal parasites; unless the head of the tape worm is removed treatment will be of no avail; and the head of the worm must come out, as it is the root of the tape worm.

(b) "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 1" contains the elements essential to the proper development of future layers; it is a special tonic for building up disease resistance and aiding in the quick recovery from worm infestation; it and "Carbo-Zel Tablets" are ideal antiseptics; they will prevent digestive disorders; they are effective treatments for intestinal flu, coccidiosis, diarrhea, cholera, typhoid, brooder pneumonia, blackhead in turkeys and irritations caused by worms.

(c) "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 2" is especially recommended for flock treatment of worms, is scientifically prepared to combat the ravages of these small microscopic worms, to counteract the toxic poisons they give off; it is an excellent tonic and worm preventive.

PAR. 4. Representations and statements to the aforesaid effect and meaning, as made by the respondents in the manner indicated in paragraph 3 hereof, are false and misleading. "Zellers Kamala Nicotine Tabs" is not an effective treatment for all worms in chickens and other fowls, and is not an effective remedy for tape and other worms; it will not remove the heads of tape worms and is not an effective remedy for such purpose. "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 1" and "Carbo-Zel Tablets" are not effective remedies for coccidiosis and other poultry diseases designated in sub-section (b) of paragraph 3, supra, and will not produce the results represented by respondents as set forth in said paragraph. "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 2" is not an effective flock treatment scientifically prepared to combat the ravages of small, microscopic worms and to counteract the toxic poisons they give off; it is not a worm preventive and will not produce the results represented by respondents as set forth in sub-section (c) of paragraph 3, supra.

PAR. 5. Representations and statements made by respondents to the effect and meaning of those set forth in paragraph 3, supra, are calculated to and do have the tendency and capacity to deceive and mislead substantial portions of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true. As a direct consequence of their mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced thereby, the consuming public has purchased a substantial volume of respondents' commodities, with the attendant result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondents from competitors engaged in selling commodities of the same kind and nature, in commerce, as hereinabove set out, and who truthfully advertise and represent the character and quality, and the results to be obtained from the use of their said products. Substantial injury is thereby done by respondents to competition in commerce, as hereinabove set forth.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents E. G. Zellers and M. W. Zellers, copartners doing business under the trade name, Zellers Laboratories, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer filed herein on February 10, 1937, by respondents admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress

Order

entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914:

It is ordered, That the respondents, E. G. Zellers and M. W. Zellers, individually and as copartners doing business under the trade name Zellers Laboratories, or under any other name, their representatives, agents and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of their poultry products now designated as "Zellers Kamala Nicotine Tabs," "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 1," "Carbo-Zel Tablets" and "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 2," or any other products of substantially the same ingredients or having the same therapeutic effect, sold under those names or any other names, do forthwith cease and desist from directly or indirectly representing:

1. That "Zellers Kamala Nicotine Tabs" is an effective remedy or treatment for round worms, tape worms, or intestinal parasites in fowls; or that it is an effective remedy and agency for the removal of all intestinal parasites in fowls.

2. That "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 1" and "Carbo-Zel Tablets" are effective remedies and treatments for intestinal flu, coccidiosis, diarrhea, cholera, typhoid, brooder pneumonia, blackhead in turkeys, and irritation caused by worms in fowls; that they are perfect and ideal antiseptics for fowls or that they will preclude worm infestation.

3. That "Zellers Fowl Tone Formula No. 2" is scientifically prepared to successfully combat the ravages of intestinal worms in fowls and that it will counteract toxic poisons created by their presence in fowls; or that it is a worm preventive.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this request.

IN THE MATTER OF

FRANK MCKINNON, TRADING AS EASTERN ART COMPANY AND UNITED ART ASSOCIATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2912. Complaint, Aug. 28, 1936—Decision, Apr. 8, 1937

- Where an individual engaged, under two separate trade names, in the offer and sale of tinted or colored photographic enlargements of family and other photographs, and of frames therefor, through the medium of salesmen or agents, working in squads, groups, or teams, and whom it supplied with identification cards and with equipment including samples or specimens of its so-called "paintings," and with printed order or contract forms, and with sales talks and with certificates or coupons for salesmen's use in the lucky "draw" ruse employed by him, and who called upon the prospective customers and, in accordance with their instructions, falsely represented that said individual was conducting a contest for national advertisers, and that winning pictures in such contest, and particularly those of babies, would appear on Cream of Wheat, Ovaltine, Ralston, and other packages or containers, and that parents of child would obtain royalties for use of the picture and a grand prize, and that paintings to be entered in such contest might result in the offer of a movie contract to the customer, and who made further false and misleading representations to the effect that said individual was conducting an art school at which pictures made for customers would be exhibited, etc., and made other representations in enlisting interest of prospective customers over and in addition to those below set forth, and in direct substantial competition with others similarly engaged in sale between and among the various States of tinted or colored photographic enlargements and frames therefor, and with those engaged in the similar sale of genuine, free-hand, original, oil, and water color paintings, and including among said former competitors those who truthfully represent and honestly vend their products, and, among the latter, those who truthfully represent their genuine portraits as paintings—
- (a) Described said enlargements as "paintings" and as "fine oil paintings" and as "hand paintings," and as a work of art and not photographic enlargements, in soliciting sale thereof as above set forth, and as "portrait paintings" on the order or contract forms with said individual's trade name thereon, notwithstanding fact that so-called "paintings" were not portrait paintings, oil paintings, etc., or original paintings or works of art, but were merely cheap photographic enlargements of photographs which had been tinted or colored through use of pastel or crayon water color or other powdered pigments sprayed thereon with air brush and compressed air;
 - (b) Represented to the prospective customer contacted by one of his said sales agents or representatives that a drawing contest would be held to decide a few lucky persons to receive free paintings in their homes, and that customer would be allowed two draws or trials, and informed the participating customer, upon invariable receipt of a winning check or coupon purportedly entitling him, as theretofore announced, to a genuine oil painting, painting or portrait free, or to a substantial discount on the price thereof, and, following the subsequent negotiations and contract for such a painting, free or at substantial discount, and after the closing of the deal, casually and incidentally, that there was a nominal charge of $3.98 to be paid as representing actual cost of materials used in making the paintings, facts being said alleged "draw" or "drawing" was a mere sham device employed for the sole purpose of inducing prospective purchaser to believe erroneously, that if he drew a lucky coupon or certificate he would thereby have the distinct advantage of obtaining a painting free, or at a price below that ordinarily charged, and all customers, unknown to each other, were approached in the same manner through use of said scheme and device and were similarly beguiled into the false belief that they had been favored by chance and that their cases were exceptional in such respects, when such was not the fact;

- (c) Represented, as aforesaid, that said sum of $3.98 covered actual cost of materials used in making painting, and that said individual desired to open a branch studio in the home town of the customer and a limited number would be selected as exhibitors to receive paintings free of charge, paying only such incidental item to cover cost of materials as aforesaid, or that customers would receive a fine oil painting for said sum, as covering alleged cost of materials only, or that, in view of a special sale, a hand painted miniature, representing the mere cost of materials, would be painted for $3.08, and in his order blanks set forth that customer was entitled to "portrait painting," as above set forth, and of specified size, at a "cost of production" price of $3.98, facts being sum mentioned therein did not represent such actual cost, but constituted an initial substantial profit to him on the character and type of work done by him, and he was not painting miniatures in oil or otherwise for aforesaid sum in connection with any special sale or otherwise, was not offering any customer any special price or genuine price reduction in case of any "painting" or frame therefor, or operating any art school or giving work to unemployed artists in painting pictures of babies for prize contests, or opening any branch studio in town or community in question, or exhibiting customers' paintings for benefit of artists, or conducting any contest, etc., and no child's mother was to receive a grand prize or the child's parents any royalties, as variously claimed and represented in salesmen's contact sales talks, as above indicated;
- (d) Represented that pictures and frames had selling prices and values which were fictitious and greatly in excess of the prices at which similar products were usually sold and intended to be sold, and in excess of the values of such or similar products, through such statements as that the customer would receive a fine oil painting on canvas, worth $35 or $40, for $3.98, alleged cost of materials only, as above set forth, and that prominent people paid as much as $1,000 for portraits painted by hand in fadeless colors such as those made by him, facts being said so-called "paintings," etc., were, as above set forth, merely cheap photographic enlargements or photographs tinted or colored as hereinabove explained, were not worth and did not have the value of $35 or $40, or any other sum approaching such amount, but constituted cheap inferior products costing around

$1.25 each, and were not pictures of the type ever bought by prominent people for $1,000; and

- (e) Failed to disclose, in soliciting and taking the order, and after selection by agent of a family photograph to be used, as stated, merely to check details in the so-called "oil painting" to be furnished free to the customer, and except for the so-called incidental item of $3.98 to cover cost of materials, that the painting would be made on a peculiar shaped convex surface, hexagonal in form, as subsequently disclosed to customer by a second, and different, agent who called to exhibit a sketch, outline or proof of such oil painting and endeavored to collect in advance said so-called incidental sum of $3.98, and who represented that it would be necessary for the full protection of the picture to have a frame with convex unbreakable glass, such as could be obtained only from aforesaid individual, and which was priced to consumer at various exorbitant figures, and sale of which cheap and inferior frame was further pressed by a third salesman who called to deliver finished product, in event of second salesman's failure to consummate same;

With tendency and capacity to cause members of the purchasing public to form mistaken and erroneous beliefs that said colored or tinted photographic enlargements were genuine oil or water color paintings, drawings, and portraits in the ordinary accepted meaning, and that said pictures had a value of $35 to $40, or other similar sum, and were the type sold for $1,000, or some such figure, as hereinbefore set forth, and that purchaser would receive a picture free or at a substantially reduced price on account of being a winner in a drawing contest, and with result that many of the members of the public, acting in such erroneous beliefs, induced by various misrepresentations, purchased said colored photographic enlargements and frames therefor, and with further capacity and tendency to divert to said individual trade of competitors engaged in selling in interstate commerce colored photographs and photographic enlargements and frames therefor, truthfully advertised and represented; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Marshall Morgan for the Commission.

Hartigan, Mullen & Roberts, of Providence, R. I., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Frank McKinnon, an individual trading under the names, Eastern Art Company and United Art Association, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Frank McKinnon, is an individual, residing at Providence, State of Rhode Island, and doing business at No. 710 Eddy Street in said city, under the trade names, Eastern Art Company and United Art Association.

Respondent is the sole owner and operator of the business conducted by him through the medium of the aforementioned trade name companies and directs the activities and controls the business policies and practices of each.

Respondent, Frank McKinnon, trading as Eastern Art Company and as United Art Association, as aforesaid, is now, and for more than two years last past, has been engaged in the business of offering for sale and the sale of tinted or colored photographic enlargements of family and other photographs, and of frames therefor. Respondent sells his products through the medium of salesmen or representatives appointed by him as agents in his behalf, to customers located in States other than the State of Rhode Island. In consummating such sales and in distributing such products, respondent Frank McKinnon causes the pictures and frames so sold by him to be transported and delivered from his place of business in Providence in the State of Rhode Island, through and into various other States of the United States to the respective purchasers thereof at their respective points of location. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent Frank McKinnon has been, and is now, engaged in direct and substantial competition with various corporations, partnerships, and individuals, likewise engaged in the sale, between and among the various States of the United States, of tinted or colored photographic enlargements and of frames therefor, and, likewise, with corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale among the various States of the United States of genuine, free hand original paintings, including oil paintings and water color paintings, as will be more fully hereinafter shown.

PAR. 2. A crayon is a pencil-shaped piece of colored clay, chalk or charcoal used for drawing upon paper. A crayon drawing is the act or art of drawing with crayons.

A drawing is a representation produced by the art of drawing; a work of art produced by pen, pencil or crayon.

The pastel, in art, is a colored crayon made of pigments ground with chalk and compounded with water into a sort of paste. A drawing made with a colored chalk or crayon is called a pastel, as is also the art of drawing with colored crayons.

Paint is defined as a substance used in painting composed of a dry coloring material intimately mixed with a liquid vehicle. A painting is a likeness, image, or scene depicted with paints without the aid of photography.

A water color is a painting with pigments for which water, and not oil, is used as a solvent.

A portrait, in its ordinarily accepted meaning, is a picture of a person drawn from life, especially a picture or representation of a face; a likeness, particularly in oil.

An oil painting is a painting done by hand with brushes in plastic oil colors on canvas, or other material, without the aid of photography.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent Frank McKinnon, trading as Eastern Art Company and as United Art Association, causes agents and representatives employed by him to visit the homes of prospective customers in the cities, towns, and rural communities of the various States of the United States. Under said respondent's selling plan he organizes the said agents and representatives into squads, groups or teams, each covering or working a particular territory under a crew manager appointed by respondent. Neither of the two trade name companies operates in the same territory, at the same time, and when agents of the Eastern Art Company are working in Connecticut or Massachusetts, agents of the United Art Association are working elsewhere. No separate book-keeping systems are maintained for the business handled through the medium of the aforesaid trade name companies, nor does an agent know before taking over a given territory which of the two companies he will represent therein. Crew managers in charge of selling teams keep in constant touch with the daily activities of the respective salesmen or representatives of respondent. One sales representative of respondent calls upon, or contacts, a prospective customer and makes a contract with said prospect for a "Portrait Painting" or oil painting at a price of $3.98, alleged to represent merely the cost of production, said sum of $3.98 to be paid when "proof" of said "painting" is shown later at said customer's residence or address. In connection with the initial order the first salesman obtains from the customer a family photograph to serve as a model for the "painting." A second and different salesman submits an outline or proof of the "painting" in due course, and endeavors at that time to collect for the incompleted "painting" and to induce the customer to agree to buy a frame therefor. A third and final representative delivers the finished "painting," collects any sum remaining due thereon and collects also for the frame if the customer has agreed to buy one. Sales talks containing approved methods of approach and convincing proposals or arguments to be used in contacting prospective purchasers of "paintings," and necessary order blanks or forms, are furnished by respondent for the use of and distribution among his sales representatives; also certificates or coupons to be used in connection with the "draw" as hereinafter related.

PAR. 4. Respondent, Frank McKinnon, trading under the names Eastern Art Company and United Art Association, as aforesaid, makes and produces and sells his "paintings" in the following manner:

A negative is made of a family photograph furnished to the agent or sales representative by the customer. This negative is then used to make a photographic enlargement of the original photograph. This photographic enlargement is then tinted or colored by spraying crayon or pastel water color or oil thereon by the use of a mechanical appliance from which liquid paint is forced by compressed air and known as an air brush. Respondent makes these enlarged tinted or colored photographs at an average cost of $1.25. Frames range in cost from 85¢ to $1.05, a few special patterns going as high as $2.25. Glass and a back for the picture or painting represent a cost of about 24¢. Picture frames are sold for as much as an agent can obtain for them at any particular home visited, respondent's largest item of profit being realized in the sale of frames. Colored enlargements are made in an unusual convex hexagonal shape necessitating a type of glass and frame which respondent represents, can only be obtained by the purchaser from him.

Respondent maintains and operates a separate collection department in connection with his aforesaid business to which specific fees or sums are credited in connection with the collection of sums alleged to be due from delinquent customers.

Respondent, Frank McKinnon, trading respectively, as aforesaid, as Eastern Art Company and United Art Association, causes orders or contracts for pictures or "paintngs" to be taken by his agents or representatives on printed forms provided by respondent bearing the name and address of one of the trade name companies across the top thereof and in such order it is "certified" that the customer is entitled to "one Venetian Convex Portrait Painting" 10 x 16 inches in size at a "cost of production" price of $3.98 unframed, payment to be made upon presentation of proof at customer's residence. Said order blank or certificate is duly signed by respondent's agent in his representative capacity on a line provided therefor. Receipts similar in tenor are signed for the trade name company by the agent making a sale.

Purchasers of pictures are given to understand that they are contracting or dealing with a duly constituted agent of one or the other of respondent's trade name companies and each agent or salesman is furnished by respondent with an identification card or card of credentials to be presented or exhibited by him when interviewing prospective purchasers. Equipment, including sample cases containing samples of specimens of fine oil paintings, is also furnished solicitors or agents by said respondent for use in soliciting orders in his behalf.

PAR. 5. Salesmen, agents, or representatives soliciting orders for and on behalf of respondent are given full and complete instructions by respondent as to the representations to be made by them upon approaching or contacting prospective purchasers of pictures or "paintings." Alluring samples of respondent's work, painted in oil paint, hand drawn and hand painted portraits to be duplicated for the prospect, are exhibited to him. Respondent's agents and representatives, with a view to inducing prospective customers to sign contracts for pictures, or "paintings," make, and are instructed to make and do make the following, among other representations:

1. That respondent is conducting a contest for national advertisers; that pictures, particularly those of babies, will be entered in such contest, the winning pictures to appear on Cream of Wheat, Ovaltine, Ralston and other packages or containers, and that the parents of the child will obtain royalties for the use of the picture, and a grand prize;

2. That respondent desires to open a branch studio in the home town of a customer; that a limited number of customers will be selected as exhibitors, these to receive paintings free of charge, paying only the incidental item of $3.98, representing the cost of materials;

3. That respondent is conducting an art school, that pictures made for customers will be exhibited to art students and for their benefit, and that respondent is assisting unemployed art students;

4. That the customer will receive a fine oil painting on canvas worth $35 to $40, for $3.98, the alleged cost of materials only;

5. That prominent people pay as much as $1,000 for portraits "painted by hand in fadeless colors" such as those made by respondent;

6. That respondent's paintings are "hand drawn, hand painted," "a work of art" and are not photographic enlargements, the photograph being used merely to obtain details for the painting;

7. That a hand painted miniature, in view of a special sale being conducted by respondent, will be painted for $3.98, representing the mere cost of materials;

Complaint

24 F. T. C.

8. That pictures of babies will be painted by unemployed artists and entered in a prize contest;

9. That a paper or document obligating the customer to pay for a painting is merely a receipt for a small photograph;

10. That paintings to be entered in a contest of national advertisers may result in the offer of a movie contract to the customer.

In further connection with his said selling methods respondent, Frank McKinnon, represents that a drawing contest will be held for the purpose of deciding who shall be one of a few lucky persons in a particular city or town to have respondent place free paintings in their homes. The agent in connection with said drawing produces a sealed box or package containing a number of slips of paper attached to a wire. It is represented that most of said slips are blank but that a few are trade checks or coupons; that a customer is allowed two draws or trials; that if he draws a blank he does not win, but if fortunate enough to draw a winning check or coupon, he will be entitled to receive a genuine oil painting free, or to receive a substantial discount on the price of a genuine oil painting. The prospective customer draws, and finally, and invariably, draws a lucky coupon, allegedly giving him an oil painting free. The customer is thereupon congratulated by the agent upon his good luck. Believing the representations of the agent to the effect that he has been lucky and has obtained a distinct financial advantage the customer is thereby induced to continue negotiations with said agent and to make a contract with the said agent for a fine "oil painting" free. The customer is casually and incidentally informed when the agent is departing that there is just a nominal charge of $3.98 to be paid in connection with the transaction, representing the actual cost of the materials to be used in making the "painting."

Said alleged "draw" or "drawing" was, and is, a mere sham device employed by respondent for the sole purpose of inducing the prospective purchaser to believe that if he draws a lucky "coupon" or certificate, he will thereby have the distinct advantage of obtaining a portrait free, or at a price below that ordinarily charged customers, when in truth and in fact other customers unknown to each other are approached in the same manner through the use of said drawing scheme and device, and likewise have been beguiled into believing that they are exceptional ones favored by fortune and chance, when such is not the fact.

The interest of the prospective customer finally having been elicited through the use of one or more of the herein described selling devices, the said agent of respondent then asks the privilege of inspecting family photographs. After careful inspection a photograph announced by the agent to be satisfactory, is selected by him. This photograph, with which the agent departs when the contract is closed, is to be used, it is stated, merely for the purpose of checking details in the oil painting to be furnished free to said customer, except for the incidental item of $3.98 to cover cost of materials.

In due course a second and different agent of said respondent calls to exhibit a sketch, outline, or proof of the oil painting to be finished for the customer; to inquire about coloring details; to collect, or to endeavor to collect, in advance of the completion and delivery of the painting, for the "incidental" cost of the materials to be used in painting the picture or "portrait," amounting to $3.98 as aforesaid; and to persuade the customer to contract for a frame for the painting. Respondent's said agent, in this relation, exhibits to the customer a model, outline, or proof of the painting made on a peculiar-shaped convex surface, hexagonal in shape. Respondent's said agent then represents that it will be necessary for the picture, in order to be fully protected, to have a frame with convex unbreakable glass and that such frame and glass can be obtained only from the said respondent. Said frame and glass are priced to the customer at various exorbitant figures, and in the event the second visiting agent fails to sell a frame and glass, a third salesman, who calls to deliver the finished painting, makes a further effort to induce the customer to add the price of a frame and glass to his contract.

PAR. 6. The pictures or photographs which are borrowed from prospective purchasers by the agents and representatives of respondent for the purpose of having "paintings" made therefrom, were, and are in most instances, pictures of members of the customer's family or near relatives, and many such pictures cannot possibly be duplicated. Such photographs loaned and furnished to respondent by his customers, possess and have possessed great sentimental value. In numerous instances the member of the family or near relative represented by the photograph, has been dead many years. In making contracts with his customers the respondent inserts therein a clause to the effect that no cancellations will be accepted. In case of a controversy involving alleged misrepresentation as to the character or quality of the work done, or for other reasons, justified in the mind of the purchaser, the respondent, Frank McKinnon, in the event any sum or balance is claimed to be due him from the purchaser, did and does insist upon holding the purchaser to the letter and terms of the contract, and, as a means of enforcing compliance with the terms of the contract in every instance, respondent did and does refuse to return the valued family photograph until the money claimed to be due him has been paid to him. Respondent in many instances has retained original photographs and colored enlargements made therefrom and has retained possession of enlargements fully paid for, at original contract price, if subsequently frames therefor were refused by the customer for any reason. Under such type of duress, many customers who are and have been dissatisfied with the character or quality of the paintings made for them by respondent, and who assert, and have asserted, misrepresentation in connection therewith, have been forced to go through with the contract in order to obtain the return of a treasured family photograph.

PAR. 7. In truth and in fact the various statements and representations made by respondent through his agents and representatives, in selling and offering for sale his pictures in cities, towns, and communities of the respective States of the United States, were and are false, deceptive and misleading in the following, among other particulars:

(a) The paintings so represented and sold on behalf of respondent, Frank McKinnon, trading as Eastern Art Company and United Art Association, are not and never have been, "portrait paintings," "oil paintings," or "hand drawn, hand painted," or "hand paintings," or "water color paintings," or "original paintings," or "works of art," or any work of art produced through the art of drawing or drawn from life, but on the contrary, are and have been, merely cheap photographic enlargements of photographs, tinted or colored by the use of pastel or crayon, water color or other powdered pigments sprayed upon the enlargement, in solution, through the use of an air brush and compressed air;

(b) Pictures or "paintings" such as those represented and sold by respondent are not worth, and have never been worth, or had the value of $40 or $35, or any other value approximating these amounts; pictures of this type have never been bought by prominent people for $1,000, nor do respondent's pictures possess, nor have they ever possessed or had the quality, characteristics, or value of oil paintings or other types of genuine paintings attributed to them by representatives of the said respondent, but on the contrary comprise a cheap, inferior product costing around $1.25 each;

(c) The sales prices represented for respondent's pictures by his sales representatives, were and are fictitious and greatly in excess of the prices at which such tinted or colored photographic enlargements were ever sold or were ever intended or contemplated to be sold;

(d) Respondent does not operate any art school and does not give work to unemployed artists and does not exhibit customer's paintings for the benefit of artists, and the United Art Association is not an art association;

(e) Respondent has not conducted, and is not conducting, any contest for or in connection with national advertisers in which the winning picture has been, or will be selected and used for advertising purposes, nor is any child's mother in connection with such alleged contest to receive a grand prize, or the child's parents to receive any royalty from any national advertiser alleged to be using the picture.

(f) Respondent has not painted, and does not paint, miniatures in oil or otherwise for $3.98 in connection with any special sale being conducted, or otherwise;

(g) The sum of $3.98 does not represent, and has never represented, the actual cost of materials used by respondent in making a "painting," but on the contrary represents and constitutes an initial, substantial profit to respondent on the type and character of work done by him;

(h) Pictures or "paintings" made by respondent for customers are different from and greatly inferior in quality, workmanship and character to alleged samples thereof exhibited by respondent's agents in endeavoring to and obtaining contracts for such pictures or "paintings";

(i) Customers do not understand and have not agreed in connection with contracts that treasured family photographs are to be retained by respondent until payment of any sum alleged by respondent to be due him;

(j) Customers have not understood and do not understand from respondent that receipts for photographs supplied by them are actually contracts for pictures or "paintings" to be made by respondent;

(k) Frames delivered by respondent in connection with the sale of the said pictures or "paintings" are not the same as, but are inferior to, alleged samples of frames exhibited by agents while obtaining contracts therefor, and the prices asked for said frames are exorbitant and far above the value thereof;

(l) Respondent has not introduced, and is not introducing, any new or special type of pictures or "paintings"; is not offering, and has not offered to any customer any special or genuine reduction in price in the case of any "painting" or frame therefor; has not opened, nor intended opening any branch studios in any city, town, or community; does not select, and has not selected, a few special exhibitors of his products in any city, town, or community, and the prices quoted by respondent's said agents to customers and prospective customers are not special or reduced prices in any instance, but on the contrary are either prices ordinarily quoted, or prices grossly in excess of the real and actual value of respondent's products as sold by him in commerce.

PAR. 8. There are among the competitors of respondent, Frank McKinnon, trading as aforesaid under the names, Eastern Art Company and United Art Association, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, partnerships, firms, and persons who are engaged in the sale of tinted or colored enlargements of photographs and of frames therefor, who do not employ and maintain the practices as set forth in paragraphs 3 to 7 of this complaint, but who truthfully represent their products and honestly vend the same, and there are also, among the competitors of respondent, Frank McKinnon, corporations, partnerships, firms, and persons engaged in the business of painting genuine portraits, who truthfully represent their products as being "paintings."

PAR. 9. The use by respondent, Frank McKinnon, trading as Eastern Art Company and United Art Association, of the said practices as set forth in paragraphs 2 to 7 of this complaint, tends to and does unfairly divert trade from competitors and thereby substantial injury has been done, and is being done, by respondent to competition in interstate commerce. By the use of the within described false and misleading representations, respondent has deceived, and is deceiving, the public concerning the quality and value of the products sold by him as aforesaid and in the various other particulars as hereinbefore described and related, and has thereby induced, and is inducing, the public to purchase said products under the erroneous belief that the same are, and were, high-grade quality "paintings" and picture frames of exceptional merit and value.

PAR. 10. The above-alleged acts and practices employed by respondent as aforesaid are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on August 28, 1936, issued, and on August 31, 1936, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Frank McKinnon, an individual trading under the names Eastern Art

Company, and United Art Association, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Frank McKinnon, is an individual residing at Providence, State of Rhode Island, and doing business at No. 710 Eddy Street in said city, under the trade names, Eastern Art Company and United Art Association. Respondent is the sole owner and operator of the business conducted by him through the medium of the aforementioned trade name companies and directs the activities and controls the business policies and practices of each.

Respondent, Frank McKinnon, trading as Eastern Art Company and as United Art Association, as aforesaid, and hereinafter referred to as respondent, is now, and for more than two years last past has been, engaged in the business of offering for sale and the sale of tinted or colored photographic enlargements of family and other photographs, and of frames therefor. Respondent sells his products through the medium of salesmen or representatives appointed by him as agents. In consummating such sales and in distributing such products, respondent Frank McKinnon causes the pictures and frames so sold by him to be transported and delivered from his place of business in Providence in the State of Rhode Island, through and into various other States of the United States to the respective purchasers thereof at their respective points of location. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent Frank McKinnon has been, and is now, engaged in direct and substantial competition with various corporations, partnerships, and individuals, likewise engaged in the sale, between and among the various States of the United States, of tinted or colored photographic enlargements and of frames therefor, and with corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale among the various States of the United States of genuine, free hand original paintings, including oil paintings and water color paintings.

PAR. 2. A crayon is a pencil-shaped piece of colored clay, chalk or charcoal used for drawing upon paper. A crayon drawing is the act or art of drawing with crayons. A drawing is a representation produced by the art of drawing; a work of art produced by pen, pencil, or crayon. The pastel, in art, is a colored crayon made of pigments ground with chalk and compounded with water into a sort of paste. A drawing made with a colored chalk or crayon is called a pastel, as is also the art of drawing with colored crayons.

A painting is a likeness, image, or scene depicted with paints without the aid of photography. A water color is a painting with pigments for which water, and not oil, is used as a solvent. A portrait, in its ordinarily accepted meaning, is a picture of a person drawn from life, especially a picture or representation of a face; a likeness, particularly in oil. An oil painting is a painting done by hand with brushes in plastic oil colors on canvas, or other material, without the aid of photography.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of his said business, respondent causes agents and representatives employed by him to visit the homes of prospective customers in the cities, towns and rural communities of the various States of the United States. Under said respondent's selling plan he organizes the said agents and representatives into squads, groups or teams, each covering or working a particular territory under a crew manager appointed by respondent. Neither of the two trade name companies operates in the same territory, at the same time. No separate bookkeeping systems are maintained for the business handled through the medium of the aforesaid trade name companies. Crew managers in charge of selling teams keep in constant touch with the daily activities of the respective salesmen or representatives of respondent. Purchasers of pictures are given to understand that they are contracting or dealing with a duly constituted agent of one or the other of respondent's trade name companies and each agent or salesman is furnished by respondent with an identification card or card of credentials to be presented or exhibited by him when interviewing prospective purchasers. Equipment, including sample cases containing samples of specimens of "paintings," is also furnished solicitors or agents by said respondent for use in soliciting orders in his behalf.

Respondent causes orders or contracts for pictures or paintings to be taken on printed forms provided by him bearing the name and address of one of the trade name companies across the top thereof and in such order it is "certified" that the customer is entitled to "one Venetian Convex Portrait Painting" 10 x 16 inches in size at a "cost of production" price of $3.98, unframed, payment to be made upon presentation of proof at customer's residence. Said order blank or certificate is duly signed by respondent's agent in his representative capacity on a line provided therefor. Receipts similar in tenor are signed for the trade name company by the agent making a sale.

Sales talks containing approved methods of approach and convincing proposals or arguments to be used in contacting prospective purchasers of paintings, and necessary order blanks or forms, are furnished by respondent for the use of and distribution among his sales representatives; also certificates or coupons to be used in connection with the "draw" as hereinafter related.

PAR. 4. Respondent makes and produces and sells his "paintings" in the following manner:

A negative is made of a family photograph furnished to the agent or sales representative by the customer. This negative is then used to make a photographic enlargement of the original photograph. This photographic enlargement is then tinted or colored by spraying crayon or pastel water color or oil thereon by the use of a mechanical appliance known as an air brush, from which liquid paint is forced by compressed air. Respondent makes these enlarged tinted or colored photographs at an average cost of $1.25. Frames range in cost from 85¢ to $1.05, a few special patterns going as high as $2.25. Glass and a back for the picture or painting represent a cost of about 24¢. Picture frames are sold for as much as an agent can obtain for them at any particular home visited, respondent's largest item of profit being realized in the sale of frames. Said colored enlargements are made in an unusual convex hexagonal shape necessitating a type of glass and frame which respondent fails or refuses to disclose at the time of the purchase of the picture, can be obtained only from him.

PAR. 5. In pursuance of the sales methods employed by and on behalf of and under the direction of respondent, a sales agent or representative calls upon or contacts a prospective customer, usually at the home of the latter. Said sales agent represents that a drawing contest will be held for the purpose of deciding who shall be one of a few lucky persons in a particular city or town to have respondent place free paintings in their homes. The agent then produces a box or package containing a number of slips of paper. It is represented that most of said slips are blank but that a few are trade checks or coupons; that a customer is allowed two draws or trials; that if he draws a blank he does not win, but if fortunate enough to draw a winning check or coupon, he will be entitled to receive a genuine oil painting, painting or portrait free, or to receive a substantial discount on the price of a genuine oil painting or valuable painting. The prospective customer draws, and finally, and invariably, draws a lucky coupon, allegedly giving him a painting free, or at a substantial discount. Believing the representations of the agent to the effect that he has been lucky and has obtained a distinct financial advantage the customer is thereby induced to continue negotiations with said agent and to make a contract with the said agent for a fine oil painting or portrait painting free, or at a substantial discount. The customer is casually and incidentally informed, when the deal is closed, that there is just a nominal charge of $3.98 to be paid in connection with the transaction, representing the actual cost of the materials to be used in making the painting.

Said alleged "draw" or "drawing" was, and is, a mere sham device employed by respondent for the sole purpose of inducing the prospective purchaser to believe that if he draws a lucky coupon or certificate, he will thereby have the distinct advantage of obtaining a painting free, or at a price below that ordinarily charged. In truth and in fact all customers, unknown to each other, are approached in the same manner through the use of said drawing scheme and device, and likewise have been and are beguiled into believing that they are exceptional ones favored by chance, when such is not the fact. Respondent's agents and representatives, with a view to inducing prospective customers to sign contracts for oil, portrait or other valuable types of painting, make, and are instructed to make and do make the following, among other representations:

(1) That respondent is conducting a contest for national advertisers; that pictures, particularly those of babies, will be entered in such contest, the winning pictures to appear on Cream of Wheat, Ovaltine, Ralston, and other packages or containers, and that the parents of the child will obtain royalties for the use of the picture, and a grand prize; (2) That respondent desires to open a branch studio in the home town of a customer; that a limited number of customers will be selected as exhibitors, these to receive paintings free of charge, paying only the incidental item of $3.98, representing the cost of materials; (3) That respondent is conducting an art school, that pictures made for customers will be exhibited to art students and for their benefit, and that respondent is assisting unemployed art students; (4) That the customer will receive a fine oil painting on canvas worth $35 to $40 for $3.98, the alleged cost of materials only; (5) That prominent people pay as much as $1,000 for portraits painted by hand in fadeless colors such as those made by respondent; (6) That respondent's paintings are hand drawn, hand painted, a work of art, and are not photographic enlargements; (7) That a hand-painted miniature, in view of a special sale being conducted by respondent, will be painted for $3.98, representing the mere cost of materials; (8) That pictures of babies will be painted by unemployed artists and entered in a prize contest; (9) That paintings to be entered in a contest of national advertisers may result in the offer of a movie contract to the customer.

The interest of the prospective customer finally having been elicited through the use of one or more of the herein described selling devices, the said agent of respondent then asks the privilege of inspecting family photographs. After careful inspection a photograph announced by the agent to be satisfactory, is selected by him. This photograph, with which the agent departs when the contract is closed, is to be used, it is stated, merely for the purpose of checking details in the oil painting to be furnished free to said customer, except for the incidental item of $3.98 to cover cost of materials.

In due course a second and different agent of said respondent calls to exhibit a sketch, outline, or proof of the oil painting to be finished for the customer; to inquire about coloring details; to collect, or to endeavor to collect, in advance of the completion and delivery of the painting, for the purported incidental cost of the materials to be used in painting the picture or portrait, amounting to $3.98 as aforesaid; and to persuade the customer to contract for a frame for the painting. Respondent's said agent exhibits to the customer a model, outline, or proof of the painting made on a peculiar-shaped convex surface, hexagonal in shape. Said agent then represents that it will be necessary for the picture, in order to be fully protected, to have a frame with convex unbreakable glass and that such frame and glass can be obtained only from the said respondent. Said frame and glass are priced to the customer at various exorbitant figures, and in the event the second visiting agent fails to sell a frame and glass, a third salesman, who calls to deliver the finished painting, makes a further effort to induce the customer to add the price of a frame and glass to his contract.

PAR. 6. The various statements and representations made by respondent directly and through his agents and representatives, in selling and offering for sale pictures in cities, towns, and communities of the respective States of the United States, were and are false, deceptive and misleading in the following, among other particulars:

The "paintings" so represented and sold by the respondent are not, and never have been, portrait paintings, oil paintings, or hand drawn, hand painted, or hand paintings, or water color paintings, or original paintings, or works of art, or any work of art produced through the art of drawing or drawn from life. They are, and have been, merely cheap photographic enlargements of photographs, tinted or colored by the use of pastel or crayon, water color or other powdered pigments sprayed upon the enlargement, in solution, through the use of an air brush and compressed air. Pictures or purported paintings such as those sold by respondent are not worth, and never have been worth, or had the value of $40 or $35, or any other value approximating these amounts. Pictures of this type have never been bought by prominent people for $1,000. Respondent's pictures do not possess, and they have never possessed or had the quality, characteristics or value of oil paintings or other types of genuine paintings attributed to them by representatives of the said respondent. They comprise a cheap, inferior product costing around $1.25 each. The sales prices represented for respondent's pictures by his sales representatives, were and are fictitious and greatly in excess of the prices at which such tinted or colored photographic enlargements, as such, were ever sold or were ever intended or contemplated to be sold. Respondent does not operate any art school and does not give work to unemployed artists and does not exhibit customer's paintings for the benefit of artists. Respondent has not conducted, and is not conducting, any contest for or in connection with national advertisers in which the winning picture has been, or will be selected and used for advertising purposes, nor is any child's mother in connection with such alleged contest to receive a grand prize, or the child's parents to receive any royalty from any national advertiser alleged to be using the picture. Respondent has not painted, and does not paint, miniatures in oil or otherwise for $3.98 in connection with any special sale being conducted, or otherwise. The sum of $3.98 does not represent, and has never represented, the actual cost of materials used by respondent in making a "painting," but on the contrary represents and constitutes an initial, substantial profit to respondent on the type and character of work done by him. Pictures or "paintings" made by respondent for customers are different from and greatly inferior in quality, workmanship, and character to alleged samples thereof exhibited by respondent's agents in endeavoring to and obtaining contracts for such pictures or "paintings." Frames delivered by respondent in connection with the sale of the said pictures or "paintings" are of cheap, inferior quality and the prices asked for said frames are exorbitant and far above the value thereof. Respondent has not introduced, and is not introducing, any new or special type of pictures or "paintings." Respondent is not offering, and has not offered to any customer any special price or genuine reduction in price in the case of any "painting" or frame therefor. Respondent has not opened, nor intended opening, any branch studios in any city, town or community, and does not select, and has not selected, a few special exhibitors of his products in any city, town, or community. The prices quoted by respondent's said agents to customers and prospective customers are not special or reduced prices in any instance, but on the contrary are either prices ordinarily quoted, or prices grossly in excess of the real and actual value of respondent's products as sold by him in commerce.

PAR. 7. There are among the competitors of respondent, as described hereinbefore, corporations, partnerships, firms, and persons who are engaged in the sale of tinted or colored enlargements of photographs and of frames therefor, who do not employ and use practices similar to those set out herein, but who truthfully represent their products and honestly vend the same. There are also, among the competitors of respondent, Frank McKinnon, other corporations, partnerships, firms, and persons engaged in the business of painting genuine portraits, who truthfully represent their products as being paintings.

PAR. 8. The use of the aforesaid false and misleading representations and practices on the part of the respondent and his agents in the sale and offering for sale of purported paintings has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to cause members of the purchasing public to form the mistaken and erroneous beliefs that respondent's said colored or tinted photographic enlargements are paintings produced by one of the methods described in paragraph 2, hereof; that said pictures have a value of $35 to $40 or some similar sum; that pictures of the same type have sold for $1,000 or some similar sum; that said pictures have the same quality, value and characteristics as paintings produced by the methods described in paragraph 2 hereof; and that the various other representations made by the respondent and his agents as detailed in paragraph 5 hereof, including the representation that the purchaser will receive the picture free or at a substantially reduced price on account of being a winner in a drawing contest, are true. Acting in such erroneous beliefs, induced by the various misrepresentations herein detailed, many of said members of the public have purchased the colored photographic enlargements, and frames therefor, sold by the respondent. The aforesaid representations and practices on the part of respondent

ent have and have had the capacity and tendency to divert to respondent the trade of competitors engaged in selling in interstate commerce colored photographs and photographic enlargements and frames therefor, which latter product are truthfully advertised and represented, and thereby substantial injury has been done, and is being done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Frank McKinnon, an individual trading under the names Eastern Art Company and United Art Association are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer filed herein on October 9, 1936, by respondent admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the fact and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the said respondent, Frank McKinnon, individually, and trading under the names Eastern Art Company and United Art Association, or under any other trade name, or through any corporate or other device, his servants, employees, or agents, individual or corporate, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of colored or tinted photographic enlargements having a photographic base for a likeness, and of frames therefor, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That such pictures are "oil paintings," "portrait paintings," "water color paintings," "original paintings," "hand paintings," "paintings," or "hand drawn"; and are produced by hand without the aid of photography;

2. That the sum of $3.98, or any other sum, represents only the actual cost of the materials used by respondent in making one of his pictures through his accustomed process, when said sum represents other than the actual cost of production;

3. That customers by means of the so-called draw, or drawing, or voting contest, by drawing a "lucky" blank, coupon or certificate, or on account of any other device or pretext such as prize contests or introductory advertising offers, have thereby obtained a distinct financial advantage, as a result of which they will be entitled to receive free one of two "paintings," or will receive a substantial discount or reduction in price in the case of an order for one "painting";

4. That pictures and frames have selling prices or values which were and are fictitious and greatly in excess of the prices at which such or similar products are usually sold and were intended to be sold, and greatly in excess of the values of such or similar products.

5. In any manner, or through any means or device, or through failure to disclose the size and shape of the pictures sold at the time the order is taken, that the pictures furnished by him are of such size and shape, that frames therefor can be procured from any source, when in fact said pictures have such peculiar size and shape that frames therefor can be obtained only from respondent.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
PHILIP WELSH, TRADING AS THE WELSH FOUNDATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
 OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2485. Complaint, July 1, 1935—Decision, Apr. 9, 1937

Where an individual engaged in the publication, sale and distribution in interstate commerce of books and booklets known as and sold under the name "The 7 Essentials of Health," to wit; as designated and dealt with by him in the seven booklets, in which he detailed his theories and ideas as to correct mode of living, with respect to the subject matter of the different pamphlets, fresh air, natural foods, water, sunshine, exercise, and occupation, rest and mental attitude; and in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution in commerce among the various States of books, booklets, pamphlets, magazines, and other publications dealing with problems of health and hygiene and other related subjects, and who do not in any manner misrepresent the benefits to be obtained from following the mode of living or rules of health and hygiene or treatments therein set forth; in advertising his said publication in magazines circulated throughout the States, and through circulars, dodgers, leaflets, pamphlets, form letters, and other printed matter distributed among prospective purchasers by mail and through other means—

- (a) Represented that the following and using of the theories, ideas, rules, directions, and instructions announced and stated in his said publication would prevent and cure all bodily ailments and diseases and cure or be beneficial in the treatment of a large number of specified ailments, diseases, and conditions, including, among many others, anemia, arthritis, high blood pressure, kidney trouble, low blood pressure, rheumatism, sexual disorders, and women's ailments, and that following instructions in said publication would "make the blood so pure and the entire digestive tract and colon so clean that disease CANNOT maintain hold in the body * * *," and result in the body itself becoming immune thereto, and would enable one to "get at and strengthen all the internal organs, revitalize them and bring them back to normal function," and to learn a simple, inexpensive, practical, and entirely natural way to attain unusual health; and
- (b) Represented that all sickness is caused by overlooking one of the essentials named in said publication, and that following mode of living outlined therein is simplest and most effective way of dealing with health problems, and that health cannot be restored by cutting out parts of the body, and that adoption of his said teachings, as stated in publication in question, will cause disease and premature death to disappear from the earth;

Facts being that the following and using of the theories, ideas, rules, directions and instructions of said individual, as stated in publication in question, in regard to health, hygiene, mode of living, and related matters therein referred to, will not prevent and cure all bodily ailments and diseases regardless of their cause, origin and nature, or cure or be of any substantial benefit in the treatment of the ailments, diseases, and conditions for which such publication is represented as of value by said individual, as hereinbefore set forth, all sickness is not caused by overlooking one of the seven "essentials" of health indicated in such publication, following mode of living outlined therein is not simplest and most effective way of dealing with health problems, and aforesaid various representations, as hereinbefore set forth, were otherwise false, and representations and implications thereof, in connection with offer and sale of publication in question, were grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading;

With effect of misleading and deceiving many persons and causing them erroneously to believe that the purchase of said publication and following and use of the theories, ideas, rules, directions, and instructions of said individual, as therein set forth, would prevent and cure all bodily ailments and diseases regardless of their cause, origin, or nature, and cure or be beneficial in the treatment of those set out, that all sickness was caused by overlooking one of the essentials indicated, and that the various other statements, representations and implications hereinbefore set forth were true, and of causing many persons, because of such erroneous beliefs, to purchase publication in question, and thereby unlawfully, unfairly and substantially divert trade to said individual from his competitors in interstate commerce who do not misrepresent their products; to their injury and that of the public:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. Edw. W. Thomerson for the Commission.

Mr. Martin E. Geibel, of Los Angeles, Calif. and Rowan & Tesch, of Milwaukee, Wis., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Philip Welsh, doing business under the name and style of The Welsh Foundation, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. That said respondent, Philip Welsh, doing business under the name and style of The Welsh Foundation, is now and has been engaged for more than five years last past in the sale and distribution of certain booklets known and described as "The 7 Essentials of Health." Said respondent, in conducting his said business, has his office and principal place of business at Pacific Palisades, in the State of California. Respondent, in the course and conduct of his said business, causes his said booklets, when sold by him, to be transported in interstate commerce from his said place of business in California to, into and through States of the United States, other than California, to various and numerous persons in such other States to whom they are or have been sold.

PAR. 2. That, during the time above mentioned, other individuals, firms, and corporations in various States of the United States, are and have been engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of books and pamphlets on health and subjects connected therewith, and such other individuals, firms, and corporations have caused, and do now cause their said books and pamphlets, when sold by them, to be transported from various States of the United States to, into and through States other than the origin of the shipment thereof. Said respondent has been, during the aforesaid time, in competition in interstate commerce in the sale of his said booklets with such other individuals, firms, and corporations.

PAR. 3. That respondent in his advertisements inserted in magazines and other publications circulated between and among various States of the United States and distributed to the general public in such States, and in his advertising literature circulated between and among the various States of the United States and distributed to members of the public therein, makes various and sundry statements in regard to his said booklets and the theories advanced and the directions and instructions contained therein which are inaccurate, misleading, and exaggerated. Among such statements are the following:

Do you know that if you overlook the "7 Essentials" you cannot have lasting health?

If you are not enjoying your share of health it is a sure sign that you are overlooking one or more of the fundamental requirements of health.

* * * the simplest and most effective way of dealing with your problems.

There is only one way to attain internal cleanliness and that is Nature's way—that way involves the application of the "7 Essentials of Health."

Health cannot be gotten by cutting out parts of the body.

These "7 Essentials" make the blood so pure and the entire digestive tract and colon so clean that disease CANNOT maintain hold in the body. The body at once becomes IMMUNE TO DISEASE and any diseased matter present is thrown out through various channels of elimination.

If you are sick, rundown and ailing, it is because you have violated Nature's Laws—you have overlooked the "7 Essentials of Health."

The 7 Essentials of Health is a practical simplified program of living that leaves no room for disease in the body.

It strikes at all the causes of ill health.

It shows you how to get at and strengthen all the internal organs, revitalize them and bring them back to normal functions.

The basic knowledge contained in these "7 Essentials" will help you turn sickness into health. * * *

PAR. 4. That respondent, in his advertising matter, circulated as aforesaid, makes many statements which represent or imply that the following of the instructions as to mode of living contained in his said booklets will prevent or cure all bodily ailments and diseases, regardless of their cause, origin or nature. Such representations are also made by respondent by means of reproducing testimonial letters from users of his system. Among such representations are the following:

There is a natural way to overcome your ailment.

Thru the printed works on "The 7 Essentials of Health", thousands of health seekers have learned a simple, inexpensive, practical and entirely Natural way to attain unusual health.

If you are interested in this new plan, mail the coupon below . . . it may save you many years of needless suffering.

Patients whose entire health had been restored sent their friends to Dr. Welsh in increasing numbers—NOT for dental work alone but for stomach ailments, nervous and gland disorders, blood disorders, eye, nose, throat and lung diseases, constipation, rheumatism, diabetes and EVERY KNOWN DISEASE OF THE HUMAN BODY.

If mankind would adopt your teachings, disease and premature death would disappear from the earth.

You will learn how to combat sickness without drugs and surgery.

You will learn how to revitalize every part of the body.

* * * I had the services of the most renowned doctors in the profession, but they could not relieve me of my chronic and stubborn ailments. I really believed my case was hopeless. A friend of mine induced me to send for your course. My condition improved as soon as I started on your course and now I feel better than I ever felt in my life. My family and friends say you have performed a miracle.

* * * among cases which have been brought back to health after they were pronounced "hopeless".

Although I have adopted your course only one week, I have already felt definite improvement in my TUBERCULAR condition * * *.

Among the diseases and ailments which can be cured by respondent's methods, as represented by the means aforesaid, are the following: Constipation, tooth decay, chronic catarrh, sinus trouble, colds, weak lungs, pneumonia, prostate enlargement, kidney disorders, liver disorders, stomach disorders, decay of the body, poor eyesight and diseases of the eye, falling hair and baldness, nervous troubles, gland disorders, blood diseases, rheumatism, diabetes, tuberculosis, diseases of the nose and throat, ulcer of the leg, headaches, abscesses of the breast, sagging of the abdominal organs, pyorrhea, burning pains in the feet, heartburn, cancer, Bright's disease, arthritis, backaches, ear disorders, disturbed sleep, intestinal gas, bad breath, piles, colitis, high blood pressure, pains in the limbs, insomnia, skin disease, fits, bronchitis, and despondency.

PAR. 5. That, in truth and in fact, the instructions as to mode of life contained in respondent's booklets are not such as to prevent or cure all or most human ailments and diseases. Many diseases, including most of those named in the preceding paragraph herein, cannot be so prevented or cured. There are many diseases, including some of those named by respondent, that cannot be appreciably helped by respondent's methods or cannot be helped at all thereby. Many diseases cannot be successfully treated without medication or surgery or both. His instructions and methods do not constitute a panacea. Following his methods will not assure health or absence of disease. The directions as to living given by respondent do not embrace all the rules of living which contribute to good health and a sound body nor are they unique in that others do not know of them or have not advocated the use of one or more or all of them. Many of his instructions, as for instance those advocating fresh air, sunlight and exercise in the open air, are mere repetitions of facts of common knowledge.

PAR. 6. That the representations of respondent, as aforesaid, have had and do have the tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead and deceive members of the public into the belief that respondent's booklets contain instructions and secrets of life and mode of living that will prevent and cure all diseases and ailments of the human body and especially those that are named in his advertising literature as hereinbefore stated; that good health cannot be achieved without following all of his rules and methods of life as outlined in his booklets; that all medical and surgical methods of treating disease can be eliminated and dispensed with as a result of following respondent's methods and that everyone following his directions can attain perfect health and be free of disease thereby, when, in truth and in fact, such are not the facts. That said representations of respondent have had and do have the tendency and capacity to induce members of the public to answer respondent's advertisements and to buy his said booklets because of the erroneous beliefs engendered, as above set forth, and to divert trade to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in interstate commerce of books, pamphlets and courses of instruction on healthful living, diet, exercise and other methods of promoting good health and sound bodies.

PAR. 7. The above acts and things done by respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and the competitors of respondent in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on July 1, 1935, issued, and on July 6, 1935, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent Philip Welsh, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by Edw. W. Thomerson, attorney for the Commission, before W. W. Sheppard, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Martin E. Geibel, attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceedings regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Philip Welsh, is in individual trading under the name and style of The Welsh Foundation, with a place of business in the city of Pacific Palisades, in the State of California. Respondent is now, and for the past several years has been, engaged in the business of publishing, and selling and distributing in interstate commerce books and booklets known as, and sold under the name, "The 7 Essentials of Health." Respondent sells said books and booklets to purchasers located in many of the States of the United States other than the State of California, and in the District of Columbia, and when such sales are made, causes said books and booklets to be transported from his place of business in Pacific Palisades, Calif., to the purchasers thereof.

PAR. 2. Other individuals, firms, and corporations sell and distribute in commerce among and between the various States of the United States books, booklets, pamphlets, magazines, and other publications dealing with the problems of health, hygiene, and subjects connected therewith and do not in any manner misrepresent the benefits to be obtained from following the mode of living, or rules of health and hygiene, or the treatments therein set forth.

Respondent is now, and for the past several years has been, in substantial competition in such commerce, with such other individuals, firms and corporations, in selling and distributing said books and booklets.

PAR. 3. Prior to the year 1934 the publication "The 7 Essentials of Health" was in one volume and sold as one book, but since that year has been divided into seven booklets or pamphlets, each one of which covers what is designated by the respondent as one of the "essentials" of health, and is described as Lesson No. 1, 2, etc. These seven booklets are sold as a unit and now sell for the sum of $5.00. The respondent formerly sold "The 7 Essentials of Health" for the sum of $25.00.

The "seven essentials" are designated by the respondent as follows, and each of the seven booklets deals with one of these subjects:

1. Fresh Air,
2. Natural Foods,
3. Water,
4. Sunshine,
5. Exercise and Occupation,
6. Rest,
7. Mental Attitude.

In each of the booklets the respondent states in detail his theories and ideas as to the mode of living which should be pursued with regard to the subject matter of the particular pamphlet. The pamphlets in general deal with mental and physical hygiene.

PAR. 4. Respondent advertises said publication in magazines circulated throughout the United States, and through circulars, dodgers, leaflets, pamphlets, form letters, and other printed matter distributed among prospective purchasers by mail and through other means.

In said advertising matter so used by the respondent during the five years last past, the respondent makes many statements and claims as to the benefits a purchaser will obtain from purchasing said publication and following the theories, ideas, rules, directions, and instructions therein contained.

Among and typical of the statements and representations used and circulated by the respondent in selling said publication are the following:

Do you know that if you overlook the "7 Essentials" you cannot have lasting health?

If you are not enjoying your share of health it is a sure sign that you are overlooking one or more of the fundamental requirements of health.

There is only one way to attain internal cleanliness and that is Nature's way—that way involves the application of the "7 Essentials of Health."

Health cannot be gotten by cutting out parts of the body.

These "7 Essentials" make the blood so pure and the entire digestive tract and colon so clean that disease CANNOT maintain hold in the body. The body at once becomes IMMUNE TO DISEASE and any diseased matter present is thrown out through various channels of elimination.

If you are sick, rundown, and ailing, it is because you have violated Nature's Laws—you have overlooked the "7 Essentials of Health."

The "7 Essentials of Health" is a practical simplified program of living that leaves no room for disease in the body.

It strikes at all the causes of ill health.

It shows you how to get at and strengthen all the internal organs, revitalize them and bring them back to normal function.

The basic knowledge contained in these "7 Essentials" will help you turn sickness into health * * *

There is a natural way to overcome your ailment.

Thru the printed works on "The 7 Essentials of Health," thousands of health seekers have learned a simple, inexpensive, practical and entirely Natural way to attain unusual health.

Many other statements and representations of similar import and meaning are used and circulated by the respondent as aforesaid.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of his business, by the means and in the manner above set out, the respondent represents and implies that the following and using of the theories, ideas, rules, directions, and instructions announced in said publication "The 7 Essentials of Health" will prevent and cure all bodily ailments and diseases, regardless of their cause, origin, and nature; and will cure, or are beneficial in the treatment of the following ailments, diseases, and conditions: adenoids, ague (chills and fever), anemia, arthritis, asthma, blood disorders, bronchitis, Bright's disease, constipation, cancer, colds, colitis, catarrh, diarrhoea, ear disorders, eczema, eye disorders, female discharges, foot troubles, gall stones, halitosis, hay fever, headaches, hemorrhoids, high blood pressure, indigestion, influenza, insomnia, kidney trouble, leucorrhea, low blood pressure, malaria, masturbation, mastoids, neuralgia, neuritis, nervousness, overweight, pneumonia, pyorrhea, piles, rheumatism, senility, sexual disorders, sinus trouble, skin disease, tonsillitis, tooth decay, tuberculosis, tumor, ulcers of stomach, ulcers of intestines, underweight, varicose veins, venereal diseases, yellow jaundice.

Respondent also represents:

1. That all sickness is caused by overlooking one of the seven "essentials" of health indicated in the respondent's publication;
2. That following the mode of living stated in the publication is the simplest and most effective way of dealing with health problems;

3. That health cannot be restored by "cutting out parts of the body";

4. That following the instructions given in said publication will "make the blood so pure and the digestive tract and colon so clean that disease cannot maintain a hold in the body" and renders one immune to disease and strikes out the cause of all ill health;

5. That following said instructions will enable one to get at and strengthen all the internal organs, revitalize them and bring them back to normal functions and will help turn sickness into health and enable one to learn a simple, inexpensive, practical and entirely natural way to attain unusual health;

6. That if respondent's teachings were adopted disease and premature death would disappear from the earth.

PAR. 6. The following and using of the theories, ideas, rules, directions and instructions of the respondent as stated in said publication "The 7 Essentials of Health," in regard to health, hygiene, mode of living, and the related matters therein referred to, will not prevent and cure all bodily ailments and diseases, regardless of their cause, origin, and nature, and will not cure, nor be of any substantial benefit in the treatment of the ailments, diseases, and conditions for which the respondent represents that it is of value, as hereinabove stated.

All sickness is not caused by overlooking one of the seven "essentials" of health indicated in the respondent's publication; following the mode of living stated in the publication is not the simplest and most effective way of dealing with health problems; health can be restored, in many instances, by cutting out parts of the body; following the instructions given in said publication will not make the blood so pure and the digestive tract and colon so clean that disease cannot maintain a hold in the body, and will not render one immune to disease or strike out the cause of all ill health; following said instructions will not enable one to get at and strengthen all the internal organs or revitalize them or bring them back to normal functions and will not help turn sickness into health nor will it enable one to learn a simple, inexpensive, practical, and entirely natural way to attain unusual health; and the adoption of the respondent's teachings would not cause disease and premature death to disappear from the earth.

The representations and implications used by the respondent in connection with the offering for sale and selling of said publication "The 7 Essentials of Health," as hereinabove set out, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading, and have the tendency and capacity to, and do, mislead and deceive many persons and cause them erroneously to believe that the purchase of said publication, and the following and using of the theories, ideas, rules, directions, and instructions of the respondent, as stated in said publication, will prevent and cure all bodily ailments and diseases, regardless of their cause, origin, and nature, and will cure or be beneficial in the treatment of the ailments, diseases, and conditions hereinabove set out; and that all sickness is caused by overlooking one of the "essentials" indicated in the respondent's publication; that the "mode of living" stated in the publication is the simplest and most effective way of dealing with health problems; that health cannot be restored by cutting out parts of the body; that following the instructions in said publication will make the blood so pure, the digestive tract and colon so clean that disease cannot maintain a hold in the body, and renders one immune to disease and strikes out the cause of all ill health; that following said instructions will enable one to get at and strengthen all the internal organs, revitalize them and bring them back to normal functions, and will help turn sickness into health and enable one to learn a simple, inexpensive, practical, and entirely natural way to attain unusual health; and that the adoption of the respondent's teachings will cause diseases and premature death to disappear from the earth.

Said representations and implications so used by the respondent as aforesaid cause many such persons, because of such erroneous belief, to purchase said publication "The 7 Essentials of Health," thereby unlawfully, unfairly, and substantially diverting trade to the respondent from his competitors in interstate commerce who do not misrepresent their products, to their injury and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Philip Welsh, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of the respondent, testimony and evidence taken before W. W. Sheppard, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, briefs filed herein by Edw. W. Thomerson, counsel for the Commission, and by Martin E. Geibel, counsel for respondent, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Philip Welsh, his representatives, agents, and employees in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce of the publication now known as, and sold under the name, "The 7 Essentials of Health," or in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce of any publication regarding the same or similar subject matters, and containing the same or similar text, and announcing and stating the theories, ideas, rules, directions, and instructions found in the publication now known as, and sold under the name, "The 7 Essentials of Health," do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or by implication:

1. That the following and using of the theories, ideas, rules, directions, and instructions announced and stated in said publication will prevent and cure all bodily ailments and diseases, and will cure or be beneficial in the treatment of the following ailments, diseases, and conditions: adenoids, ague (chills and fever), anemia, arthritis, asthma, blood disorders, bronchitis, Bright's disease, constipation, cancer, colds, colitis, catarrh, diarrhoea, ear disorders, eczema, eye disorders, female discharges, foot troubles, gall stones, halitosis, hay fever, headaches, hemorrhoids, high blood pressure, indigestion, influenza, insomnia, kidney trouble, leucorrhoea, low blood pressure, malaria, masturbation, mastoids, neuralgia, neuritis, nervousness, overweight, pneumonia, pyorrhoea, piles, rheumatism, senility, sexual disorders, sinus trouble, skin diseases, tonsilitis, tooth decay, tuberculosis, tumor, ulcers of stomach, ulcers of intestines, underweight, varicose veins, venereal diseases, and yellow jaundice;

2. That all sickness is caused by overlooking one of the "essentials" named in said publication;

3. That following the mode of living outlined in said publication is the simplest and most effective way of dealing with health problems;

4. That health cannot be restored by "cutting out parts of the body";

Order

24 F. T. C.

5. That following the instructions in said publication will "make the blood so pure and the digestive tract and colon so clean that disease cannot maintain a hold in the body", and the body itself becomes immune to disease;

6. That following said instructions will enable one to "get at and strengthen all internal organs, revitalize them and bring them back to normal functions", and will enable one to learn a simple, inexpensive, practical and entirely natural way to attain unusual health;

7. That the adoption of respondent's teachings, as stated in said publication, will cause disease and premature death to disappear from the earth.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission, a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914, AND OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 16, 1933¹

Docket 2322. Complaint, Mar. 12, 1935—Decision, Apr. 10, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of air seal type, ferreous metal burial vaults, and in the sale thereof to jobbers and funeral directors and undertakers, in substantial competition with those engaged in the sale and distribution of metal, stone, concrete, cement, and other burial vaults in commerce between and among the various States—

- (a) Represented, through certificates of warranty and through magazines, booklets, circulars, and other advertising media having wide circulation among its customers and prospective customers in the several States, prior to, but not since, year 1932, that its said vaults were rust-resisting and waterproof and verminproof and had the capacity, for unstated, but indefinite, period of time, to resist corrosion and exclude water and other substances and vermin from entrance from the grave into the casket, and that its said vaults afforded perfect protection; and
- (b) Made use of warranties or guarantees, in connection with sale and offer of said vaults, under which, prior to, but not since, the year 1932, it undertook, irrespective of location or conditions in any plot of a cemetery where original vault was buried, and regardless of care or lack of care with which same was originally placed in the grave, to furnish a new vault without cost, if contents of original were damaged by water or other elements admitted from the grave because of failure of vault due to defective material or workmanship;

Facts being that, while its said vaults (1) were made by it with great care, by skilled workmen, of specially processed and considerably more costly metals of highest grade and quality obtainable in domestic market, and, by their very nature, exclusive of air, moisture, vermin, and water until the natural process of rust and corrosion, to which they were resistant but which they could not prevent, had advanced to stage of producing tiny holes or pits permitting penetration, (2) were equal to standard metal vaults made by responsible and reputable members of the industry in question, and were an established part of the funeral supply industry and a lawful subject for sale, purchase and transportation in interstate commerce, and (3) at time of sealing were capable of sustaining weight of earth incident to burial and protecting remains from accelerated decay due to entrance of moisture, air, water, and vermin and other deleterious agents for period of years, depending upon underground and climatic conditions in particular locality, and below set forth conjunction of circumstances, no ferreous metal, buried, has absolute or predictable rate of corrosion, which varies with locality, particular underground conditions, and qualities and chemical content of different soils, all ferreous metal burial vaults will rust and corrode after burial, irrespective of type of construction, corrosive properties of soil and other conditions so vary in different sections that, while given metal vault, buried, would resist penetration for more than one hundred years in some sections, such resistance would not exceed more than eight or ten in highly corrosive soils, ideal conjunction of conditions, which frequently does not obtain, must exist for air-seal principle to function as intended, and, due to climatic, geographical, chemical and mineralogical conditions not subject to its control, no prediction could be made by anyone as to the period during which such vaults would continue to protect casket and contents, as above set forth;

With capacity to mislead purchasers of said products, and with capacity and tendency to induce public to purchase and use same in the erroneous belief that the aforesaid various statements and representations as to resistance of metals involved to rust and corrosion, etc., and as to airtight and other qualities of said products, and protection afforded, were true, and to divert trade unfairly to it from its said competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. E. J. Hornibrook for the Commission.

Mr. Herman L. Weisman, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Acting in the public interest and pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission charges that The Champion Company, a corporation hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is now using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and in violation of an Act of Congress approved June 16, 1933, known and designated as the "National Industrial Recovery Act," and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, states its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, The Champion Company, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its factory and principal place of business located in the city of Springfield, in said State. It is now, and for several years last past has been engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling metal grave vaults used to encase coffins in the burial of the dead, to purchasers thereof, many of whom reside outside of the State of Ohio, and when orders are received therefor they are filled by respondent by shipping the same from the said city of Springfield, State of Ohio, into and through other States of the United States to the respective places of business or residences of such purchasers.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of said business respondent is in competition with other individuals, copartnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and transportation of metal, stone, concrete, cement, and other grave vaults between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondent sells and ships said grave vaults as aforesaid to jobbers, funeral directors, and undertakers, the last two of which sell the same to ultimate purchasers thereof for use in the burial of their dead.

PAR. 4. (A) In magazines having a wide interstate circulation, and in booklets, circulars, pamphlets, letters, and in and through the use of photographs, testimonials, and in other advertising media, all of which are circulated among its customers and prospective customers residing in the several States of the United States, and which respondent's said customers use and are authorized by respondent to use in the sale, and in the promotion of the sale of said vaults to said ultimate purchasers, the following and similar false and misleading claims, statements, and representations as to respondent's said vaults are made:

That its said vaults when buried under ground are waterproof and airtight, free from corrosion or rust, and will remain so for a period of more than fifty (50) years; that the metal of which they are made is impervious to corrosion.

(B) Respondent issues with each vault for delivery to the ultimate purchaser thereof, and they are so delivered, a written, purported warranty which provides in substance that The Champion Company warrants that the vault above-mentioned has been tested and inspected by skilled workmen and found to be free from all defects in materials and workmanship, and to be airtight and waterproof; that, when properly enclosed it will protect the casket and its contents from all outside elements. The Champion Company hereby agrees that if within fifty (50) years from the date of interment the contents of the above vault are damaged by vermin, water, or other elements admitted from the outside, that it will replace said vault free of charge, but it does not warrant against damage to the casket and its contents due to dehydration of the remains.

PAR. 5. The statements and representations described in subdivision (A) of the preceding paragraph are false and misleading in that respondent's said grave vaults are not always airtight and waterproof when buried under ground; that said grave vaults in many instances will not remain waterproof and airtight when buried under ground for a period of fifty (50) years; that said grave vaults when buried under ground are not impervious to corrosion or to rust; that the metal from which said vaults are made, when buried under ground is not impervious to rust or corrosion. Respondent's said vaults are made of materials which will corrode and rust; there is a vast difference in the corrosive properties of soils throughout the United States; in some soils respondent's said vaults will corrode and pit in a period of from three (3) to ten (10) years and in others from ten (10) to twenty (20) years; in many soils respondent's said vaults will corrode and pit in a period of less than fifty (50) years, so as to let water into them; in many instances they will corrode or rust so as to cave in or collapse. Respondent's said vaults made with the materials now used have never been tested as to their corroding for a period of fifty (50) years or more, nor has the metal of which they are made been so tested; respondent's said vaults when buried under ground will, and often do permit water and air to enter them. Either air or water entering respondent's vaults when buried under ground promote and cause disintegration of the coffin and body encased therein. Water often enters the graves of the dead. The mechanism provided by respondent for sealing said vaults will not at all times prevent the entrance of water into said vaults with resulting damage to the coffin and body placed therein.

The statements and representations described in subdivision (B) of paragraph 4 hereof are false, misleading and deceptive in that the terms "waterproof" and "airtight" as used by respondent as aforesaid mean to the ultimate purchasers thereof a watertight, airtight vault, a vault which will not permit water or air to enter the same, and that will endure as such under burial conditions for a period of fifty (50) years or more. The respondent's said vaults are not waterproof or airtight as the terms are understood by the ultimate purchasers thereof. Water or air may seep into or enter these said vaults through the joints, holes, fastenings, or flanges thereof or through pit holes due to corrosion or due to corrosion or bending of such vaults.

These said purported warranties contain a clause in which respondent offers to replace without cost to the purchaser any such vault failing to meet the warranty as to being waterproof or airtight. The exhumation of bodies after burial is so rare as to make these certificates or warranties worthless to the purchasers of these vaults for the reason that no opportunity is offered them to ascertain whether such vaults are or have been airtight or waterproof. These said purported warranties are not warranties but are merely sales persuaders under the terms of which respondent will rarely, if ever, be called upon to replace the said vaults. It is false and misleading for respondent to call them warranties or to issue them at all.

PAR. 6. Each and all of the false and misleading representations used by respondent as set forth and referred to in paragraph 4 hereof have and have had the capacity and tendency to induce the public to purchase and use respondent's said grave vaults in the belief that they are true and have and have had the capacity and tendency to divert trade from said competitors of respondent.

PAR. 7. The acts and practices of respondent above set forth are all to the prejudice of the public and to respondent's said competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Count 2

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its factory and principal place of business located in the city of Springfield, in said State. Respondent is now and for several years last past has been engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing metal grave vaults used to encase coffins in the burial of the dead to purchasers thereof located at points in the State of Ohio and at points in various other States of the United States, and causes said products when so sold to be transported from its said principal place of business in the city of Springfield, Ohio, to the purchasers thereof in the State of Ohio, and to other purchasers thereof in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective places of business, and there is now and has been for several years last past a course of trade and commerce by the said respondent in said products in the State of Ohio and between and among the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. As grounds for this paragraph of this complaint, the Federal Trade Commission reiterates, adopts, and relies upon all matters and things set out in paragraphs 2 to 7, inclusive, of count 1 hereof to the same extent as though each and all of the allegations thereof were set out at length and in full in this paragraph.

PAR. 3. On November 4, 1933, under and pursuant to the provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act, the President of the United States made, issued, and approved a Code of Fair Competition for the Funeral Supply Industry, which became effective on the tenth day thereafter. The respondent herein was a party to and signatory of such Code of Fair Competition, and such Code is now in full force and effect as to this respondent.

The said National Industrial Recovery Act, Section (3), Paragraph (B) provides:

If the President shall have approved any such Code, the provisions of such Code shall be the standards of Fair Competition for such trade or industry, or supervision thereof. Any violation of such standards in transaction in or affecting interstate or foreign commerce shall be deemed an unfair method of competition of commerce within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended; but nothing in this title shall be construed to impair the powers of the Federal Trade Commission under such Act, as amended.

In Article IX, under the heading of "Trade Practice," of said Code appears the following:

1. The following practices constitute unfair methods of competition and are prohibited: To resort to or indulge in practices which are prejudicial to the public interest such as

Misbranding,
Misrepresentation in branding,
Labeling, Selling, and Advertising.

(W) Nothing in this Code shall limit the effect of any adjudication by the courts or holdings by the Federal Trade Commission on complaint, finding and order, that any practice or method is unfair providing that such adjudication herewith is not inconsistent of any provision of the Act or of this Code.

Notwithstanding the said provisions of said Code of Fair Competition respondent has continued to and does, use said methods of competition hereinabove alleged and described, and has resorted to or indulged in the practice of misrepresentation in branding, labeling, selling, and advertising its said vaults in the manner hereinabove set forth.

PAR. 4. The above alleged methods, acts, and practices of the respondent are and have been in violation of the standards of fair competition as set forth in said Code of Fair Competition for the said Funeral Supply Industry of the United States. Such violation of such standards in the aforesaid transactions in interstate commerce and in other transactions which affect interstate commerce in the manner set forth above are in violation of Section (3) of the National Industrial Recovery Act and they are unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on the 12th day of March 1935, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Champion Company, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, a stipulation as to the facts was agreed upon by and between W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, and respondent, by which it was agreed that, subject to the approval of the Federal Trade Commission, the statement of facts so agreed upon should be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto. It was further agreed that the said Commission might proceed upon such statement of facts, including inferences drawn from said stipulated facts, to issue its report stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Said stipulation as to the facts has been duly filed in the office of the Commission, and approved by it. Thereafter the proceedings came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto and the statement of facts as agreed upon in lieu of testimony, briefs and argument having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, the Champion Company, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its factory and principal place of business located in the city of Springfield in said State. It is now, and for the past fifty years has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling metal grave vaults used to encase coffins in the burial of the dead, to purchasers thereof, many of whom reside outside of the State of Ohio. When orders are received therefor they are filled by respondent by shipping the vaults from the said city of Springfield, State of Ohio, into and through other States of the

24 F. T. C.

United States to the respective places of business or residences of such purchasers. These vaults are called the "Champion Burial Vaults." Respondent has built up a very substantial business in this product.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in substantial competition with other individuals, copartnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution of metal, stone, concrete, cement, and other burial vaults in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondent sells and ships said grave vaults as aforesaid to jobbers, funeral directors, and undertakers, the last two of which sell the same to ultimate purchasers thereof for use in the burial of their dead.

PAR. 4. A corpse, either embalmed or not embalmed is in the process of decay and disintegration at the time of its burial. The process of embalming is the method of injecting certain fluids into the corpse, for the purpose of delaying such decay and disintegration only for a temporary period of time, not permanently. The function of a metal burial vault is further to delay such process of decay and disintegration by preventing acceleration of such process through the entrance of water and other deleterious substances from the grave into the casket.

PAR. 5. The burial vaults manufactured by the Champion Company are made with great care by skilled workmen, of United States Standard 12 gauge metals. They are useful, proper and suitable receptacles for the interment of the dead; and are equal to the standard metal vaults manufactured by the reputable and responsible members of the metal vault industry. Such metal vaults are an established part of the funeral supply industry and may be lawfully sold, bought, and transported in interstate commerce.

PAR. 6. Ferrous metals called Armco Ingot Iron and Copper Bearing Steel are used by respondent in the manufacture of its said burial vaults. These metals are specially processed and rolled from the highest grade and quality of metals which can be obtained by respondent in the domestic market for the manufacture of its burial vaults. Their cost is considerably higher than the cost of ordinary commercial steel. They are fabricated under the best, modern, scientifically controlled steel-making processes which reduce impurities and tend to increase their durability in underground service. Their manufacturers are of recognized responsibility and integrity and make rigid inspection and tests of each sheet of said metal before shipment to the respondent. These metals, by their very nature, will exclude air, moisture, vermin and water until the natural process of rust and corrosion, which these metals will resist but cannot prevent, has advanced to the stage of producing tiny holes or pits which will permit penetration of said metals.

PAR. 7. There is a vast difference in the corrosive properties of soils found in the cemeteries in the various parts of the United States and also a great difference in the surface and sub-surface drainage conditions in various sections of the country.

PAR. 8. All burial vaults made of ferreous metals will rust and corrode after burial underground. No ferreous metal, buried underground, has an absolute or predictable rate of corrosion. Such rate will vary with the locality, with particular underground conditions and with the qualities and chemical content of different soils.

PAR. 9. There is no material yet known or devised, adaptable for construction into a receptacle useful in the burial of the dead, which when placed underground would not in time deteriorate and cease to resist penetration of air, moisture, water, or vermin. The rate of deterioration would be slow in some soils and more rapid in others, depending upon the climatic conditions of the locality and the chemical and mineral composition and content of the soil in a particular place.

PAR. 10. The process of deterioration above referred to would affect every type of metal vault irrespective of whether its type of construction involved closing upon the so-called air-sealing or diving-bell principle, or depended upon mechanical locks or clamps. No principle of mechanics or physics, no process of construction and joiner of metals and no method for sealing metal burial vaults are available to enable any manufacturer thereof to warrant or predict that such vaults when placed underground would endure as airtight, verminproof and waterproof for any fixed or stated period of time.

PAR. 11. In many sections of the United States, the corrosive properties of the soil and other conditions are such that a 12 United States Standard guage metal vault placed underground would resist penetration for a period of more than one hundred years; in some of the more corrosive soils in the United States a similar vault would resist such penetration by corrosion for only fifty years, while in still other highly corrosive soils penetration would be accomplished within eight to ten years.

PAR. 12. The Champion Burial Vault is what is known in the trade as an air-seal vault. It consists of two parts: (1) a pan (or base), and (2) a hood (dome or top) and operates on the principle of a diving bell. The confined air in the inverted airtight dome is supposed to resist the entrance of water rising from below. The top and sides of the hood are made of one piece of iron. The pan is also made of one piece of iron. The entire base resembles an inverted pan. Small raised portions, or bosses, hold the bottom of the casket a fraction of an inch above the top of the pan. The bottom rim or flange of the hood (dome or top) rests on the outside flange of the pan, the width of the metal from the grave floor. This type of vault is not airtight or waterproof until sealed by water to the level of the highest point on the rim of the inverted dome which rests on the flange of the pan. Water rising from the bottom in the grave forces the air from the cavity under the base through holes at each corner of the pan, into the hood. As the pressure of the outside water increases, the resistance of the compressed air increases, and, in theory the vault is sealed against the further entrance of water to the extent that it will not reach the casket within. The mechanism provided by respondent for sealing said vaults will not at all times prevent the entrance of water into said vaults with resulting damage to the coffin and body placed therein. In addition, in order for them to remain waterproof for any considerable length of time, they must be buried and remain buried under ideal conditions, which are:

1. An airtight hood,
2. A level base,
3. The air space underneath the pan must not be occupied by dirt or other materials that will reduce the amount of air to be forced into the dome.
4. There must be no appreciable change of temperature in the grave from that obtaining when the vault is first buried.
5. There must be no appreciable changes in atmospheric pressure.

These said "ideal" conditions do not obtain in a large number of cases of burial where said vaults are used.

PAR. 13. Respondent's metal vaults, at the time of their sale, are capable of sustaining and will sustain the weight of earth incident to burial.

PAR. 14. Respondent's metal vaults at the time of their sale are capable of protecting and will protect the remains within the casket from accelerated decay and decomposition due to the entrance from the grave into the casket of moisture, water, vermin, or other deleterious agents for a period of years depending upon the underground and climatic conditions in the locality where any such vault is used and the conditions mentioned in paragraph 12 above.

PAR. 15. No prediction can be made by anybody as to the period within which respondent's vaults will continue after burial to protect the casket and its contents from accelerated decay and decomposition because climatic, geographic, chemical and mineralogical conditions not subject to respondent's control determine the duration of such period.

PAR. 16. Instances of disinterments are rare when compared with the total number of burials, but disinterments are not unusual occurrences. Changes in a cemetery, or removal of a section of a cemetery or even of an entire cemetery necessitates disinterments followed by reburial in some other cemetery. Disinterments are often brought about by the wishes of surviving relatives to change to better or differently located burial plots or to some different plot or cemetery where other members of the same family are buried. Such disinterments are followed by reburial. Irrespective of the actual state of decay and disintegration of the remains within the casket when disinterment of the vault takes place, surviving relatives concerned in the reburial have a proper interest as to whether the condition of the original vault makes reburial thereof practical or whether such receptacle needs to be replaced.

PAR. 17. At the time when the complaint herein (dated March 12, 1935) was issued and since on or about May 1, 1932, respondent offered to issue and from time to time did issue, incident to the sale of its burial vaults, a warranty offering under stated conditions to furnish a new vault, without cost, irrespective of the location of or conditions in any plot or cemetery where the original vault was buried and regardless of the care or lack of care with which the same was originally placed in the grave; said warranty reciting that:

The Champion Company warrants that the vault, above mentioned, is built by skilled workmen, has been tested by being submerged in water, inspected, and found to be free from defects in material or workmanship.

The Champion Company will replace this Champion Burial Vault, without cost, if its contents are damaged by water or other elements admitted from the grave because of the failure of the vault due to defective material or workmanship, but damage to the casket or contents caused by dehydration of the remains is excepted.

PAR. 18. Respondent has a legitimate interest in making known to the undertakers and dealers in funeral supplies who purchase its burial vaults for resale and to the ultimate purchasers of said vaults, its willingness, without cost, to furnish a new vault under the conditions stated in such warranty.

Such warranty is of value to the recipients thereof, any one of whom may some time after the original burial, find it necessary to arrange for reburial, after disinterment, in some other plot or cemetery.

PAR. 19. Respondent has made and issued said certificates of warranty in good faith and is, and at all times has been, financially able, ready and willing to comply fully with, and perform the full terms of, its certificate of warranty.

PAR. 20. Prior to 1932, but not since that year, including the period since the filing of the complaint herein, respondent did represent in certificates of warranty, substantially different from the certificate above referred to, and in magazines, booklets, circulars, and other advertising media, having a wide interstate circulation among its customers and prospective customers residing in the several States of the United States, in connection with the sale and promotion of the sale of its said burial vaults, in substance, that its said vaults were rust-resisting, waterproof and verminproof and had the capacity for an unstated but indefinite period of time to resist corrosion, exclude water and other substances and vermin from entrance from the grave into the casket and that its said vaults afforded "perfect protection."

Respondent in 1932, and prior to the issuance of the complaint herein dated March 12, 1935, has voluntarily abandoned, and in the usual course of business ceased to use, and it does not now make, issue or use, the above representations or statements or any of them, either in certificates of warranty or in any advertising media or in any other manner.

PAR. 21. Respondent's use of representations to the effect that its burial vaults would, under all underground conditions, remain waterproof, rust-resisting, and verminproof, had the capacity to mislead the purchasers of said vaults. Because of the great variation in the corrosive properties of soils in different sections of the country and in the subterranean water-level conditions and the surface drainage conditions, and also because of the conditions set forth in paragraph 12 hereof, any universal representation as to the endurance qualities of said vaults in underground service is inaccurate and misleading.

PAR. 22. The following statements and representations made by the respondent, its agents, employees and representatives, in connection with the offering for sale or selling in interstate commerce of the types of ferrous metal burial vaults, above described, in certificates of warranty and in advertising, to the effect that:

1. The metal of which respondent's vaults are made is able for any fixed or stated period of time to resist rust and corrosion or the effects thereof when placed underground;
2. The said vaults will remain airtight, verminproof or waterproof for any fixed or stated period of time after being placed underground;
3. Said vaults afford perfect protection;
4. Or any other representations of like import;

5. And the use of certificates of warranty such as described in paragraph 20 hereof in aid of the sale of said vaults; are untrue, deceptive and misleading and have, and have had, the capacity and tendency to induce the public to purchase and use respondent's vaults in the erroneous belief that said statements and representations are true, and have and have had the tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade to the respondent from its said competitors.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, under the conditions described in the foregoing findings, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors; they are unfair methods of competition in commerce and constitute violations of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, and the stipulated facts filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That respondent, Champion Company, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of ferrous metal burial vaults in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, forthwith cease and desist from:

1. The use of representations in certificates of warranty or guaranty, in advertising, or in any other manner, to the effect that:

- (a) The metal of which respondent's vaults are made is able for any fixed or stated period of time to resist rust and corrosion or the effects thereof when placed underground;
- (b) The said vaults will remain airtight, verminproof or water-proof for any fixed or stated period of time after being placed underground;
- (c) Said vaults afford perfect protection.

2. And from so making other statements and representations of like import.

Order

24 F. T. C.

3. And from using certificates of "Warranty" or "Guaranty" in connection with the sale, or offering for sale of such vaults, unless it clearly appears therein that such certificates refer to the care, skill, mechanism, and materials used in the construction of said vaults, and to tests made to determine whether they leak, and not to their durability as to remaining airtight, verminproof, or waterproof when used for burial purposes.

It is further ordered, That respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

ANNA R. BARLETTA, TRADING AS BARLETTA MANUFACTURING AND PACKING COMPANY, AND HERCULES A. BARLETTA

Docket 2907. Complaint, Aug. 21, 1936—Decision, Apr. 10, 1937

Where two individuals engaged in manufacturing, compounding, selling, and distributing a variety of flavoring extracts, in substantial competition with others engaged in the sale and distribution of such products—

Represented, through labels affixed to the bottles of their said products, and containing Italian words and coat of arms, and through counter display cards furnished to purchasers thereof, upon which display cards were likewise contained such words, that their said extracts were made, compounded and packaged by the Modern Italian Laboratory at Milan, Italy, and were imported into the United States, and that they had won a gold medal at an exposition held in Florence, Italy, in 1934 on account of excellence of their said products, and they were distributors of Italian-made extracts, facts being that, while samples compounded and made up by them in the United States and sent to exposition in Florence, Italy, in year in question were there displayed and awarded certificate of merit, their said extracts, labeled as aforesaid, were not made, prepared, compounded, or packed in Italy by any company, nor imported into the United States, but were made by said individuals at their place of business in New York City, and they were not distributors of extracts of Italian origin;

With effect of misleading large number of Italian-Americans among the purchasing public, who distinctly prefer, as superior to such products produced in this country, flavoring extracts produced in Italy, into belief that in buying such domestic products, labeled and described as above set forth, they were purchasing the preferred imported extracts of Italian origin, and with capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasing public into the belief that such extracts were prepared, compounded and packaged in Italy and imported into the United States, and to induce such public, acting in such erroneous belief, to buy their said products and thereby unfairly divert trade to them from competitors who rightly and truthfully represent their merchandise and do not, in any wise, falsely represent the same; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Anna R. Barletta, an individual trading and doing business under the firm name of Barletta Manufacturing and Packing Company, and Hercules A. Barletta, hereinafter referred to as the respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Said respondents, Anna R. Barletta, an individual, trading and doing business under the firm name and style of Barletta Manufacturing and Packing Company, and Hercules A. Barletta, husband of said Anna R. Barletta who has, or claims to have, some interest in said business the exact nature of which is to the Commission unknown, but who is in active charge of said business, have their office and principal place of business at 2100-2102 East 177th Street, in the Borough of Bronx and city and State of New York. Respondents are now and, for more than one year last past, have been engaged in the business of manufacturing, compounding, selling, and distributing a variety of flavoring extracts. Respondents sell and distribute said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, causing said products, when sold, to be shipped from their place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in a State or States of the United States other than the State of New York.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business aforesaid, respondents are now, and for more than one year last past, have been in substantial competition with other partnerships and with other corporations, individuals, and firms engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing extracts in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, as aforesaid, the respondents manufacture, sell and distribute a large variety of flavoring extracts. To the bottles which contain said flavoring

Complaint

There is also furnished with said carton a display sign or card containing the following language:

Italian Flavoring Extracts

Barletta Mfg. & Packing Co.

the Italian words on said sign meaning that the alleged "Italian flavoring extracts" had won the Gold Medal at an exposition in Florence in 1934.

In their said place of business the respondents display prominently in a glass frame a diploma on which are pictured manufacturing, agricultural and transportation scenes and symbolical figures depicting commerce and trades. The language on said diploma is as follows:

Esposizione Mostra Campionaria
Diploma
FIRENZE 1934—II
de CROCE AL MERITO E MADAGLIO DI ORO
conferido Barleta Manufacturing & Packing Co.
NEW YORK CITY—
Estratti finissimi per liquori, non alcoolici, sciroppi ed imitazione estratto di Vaniglia and followed by the several signatures of officers of the exposition. The translation of said language is as follows:

COMMERCIAL EXPOSITION
DIPLOMA
FLORENCE 1934—XII of the Cross of Merit and Gold Medal conferred upon Barletta Manufacturing & Packing Co., New York City—Finest Extracts for non-alcoholic liquors, syrups of imitation extract of Vanilla.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact said flavoring extracts are not prepared, compounded and packaged by a modern Italian laboratory in Naples or Milan, Italy; they are not imported into the United States by the respondents and distributed by them. Said extracts were not exhibited at any Italian exposition, and no medals or other distinctions were awarded to them. On the contrary, said flavoring extracts are prepared, compounded and packaged by the respondents in the State of New York. The said diploma was not awarded to the respondents because of the excellence of their products; but, on the contrary, said exposition was a charitable undertaking for the purpose of aiding a national association of families of soldiers killed in the Great War, and the products exhibited at said exposition were restricted solely to those produced within the limits of the province of Florence. Said diploma is in fact spurious in that it does not represent a bona fide award, but was bought by respondents through an alleged official of said exposition who had no authority to sell the same.

PAR. 5. There are among the purchasing public many Italian-Americans who show a preference for goods produced abroad, under the belief that they are superior to those produced in this country, said belief prevailing particularly in extracts and the like. These purchasers are led to believe that they are in fact buying an imported extract because of the fact that said labels and display cartons, cards, and diploma are printed in the Italian language and contain express representations that said flavoring extracts were manufactured in Italy and imported to this country.

There are among respondent's competitors many who sell both the domestic and imported products, and who, in the course and conduct of their business, honestly and truthfully represent their merchandise.

PAR. 6. The above and foregoing representations, as shown by the labels, display advertising and otherwise, used by respondents, as described in paragraph 3, have the capacity and tendency to, and do mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the belief that the said flavoring extracts so labeled and represented are prepared, compounded and packaged abroad, and imported into the United States, and have the capacity and tendency to, and do induce the said purchasing public, acting in such erroneous belief, to purchase respondents' product, thereby diverting trade to the respondents from those of their competitors who do not misrepresent and falsely label their products; and in this manner respondents do substantial injury to competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 7. The above acts and things done or caused to be done by the respondents, were and are each and all to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

Findings

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on the 21st day of August 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondent Anna R. Barletta, an individual, trading as Barletta Manufacturing and Packing Company, and Hercules A. Barletta, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the said complaint were introduced by Astor Hogg, attorney for the Commission, before W. W. Sheppard, a trial examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Joseph M. Ficco, attorney for the respondents. The said testimony and other evidence was duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Anna R. Barletta is an individual trading and doing business as Barletta Manufacturing and Packing Company, and Hercules A. Barletta is the husband of said Anna R. Barletta, and is one of the operators of the business of the concern, having charge of the management of said business and directing its sales policy. Their office and principal place of business is located at 2100-2102 East 177th Street, in the Borough of Bronx, city and State of New York. For several years last past respondents have been engaged in the business of manufacturing, compounding, selling and distributing a variety of flavoring extracts. They sell and distribute said products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and ship their products when sold from their place of business in the city of New York to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York. Respondents are now, and for more than one year last past have been in substantial competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing flavoring extracts in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. Respondents, in offering for sale and selling their flavoring extracts in interstate commerce, affixed and affix to the bottles containing such extracts, labels which bear an Italian coat of arms and the following wording:

Estratti Finissimi
 Prodotti Importati
 Strega
 Laboratorio Moderno

Findings

24 F. T. C.

Respondents furnished counter display cards to the purchasers of their flavoring extracts for use in displaying the same to the purchasing public. Upon said cards the following expressions appear in large and conspicuous lettering:

Estratti	Finissimi	Importati
Premiata Con Medaglia D'Oro
Laboratorio Moderno Italiano Napoli, Milano, Italia
Distributore:
Barletta Mfg. & Packing Co.,
New York, N. Y.

The English translation of the foregoing Italian wording is as follows:

Finest	Imported	Extracts
Premium with Gold Medal
Modern Italian Laboratory—Naples, Milan, Italy
Distributors:
Barletta Mfg. & Packing Co.,
New York, N. Y.

PAR. 3. In and by such representations made by the respondents upon the labels affixed to the bottles of their flavoring extracts and on the display cards furnished as aforesaid, they represented to members of the purchasing public that the said flavoring extracts were manufactured, compounded and packaged by the Modern Italian Laboratory at Milan, Italy, and were imported into the United States, and that respondents had won a gold medal at an Exposition held in Florence, Italy, in 1934, on account of the excellence of their extracts, and that they were distributors of Italian made extracts.

PAR. 4. As a matter of fact said flavoring extracts so labeled and described were not manufactured, prepared, compounded or packed in Italy by any company, and are not and were not imported into the United States. Respondents are not distributors of extracts of Italian origin. On the contrary said flavoring extracts were compounded and made up wholly in the United States, and none of the extracts sold by respondents are of Italian origin. The evidence shows that in the year 1934 samples of respondents' extracts were displayed at an Exposition held in Florence, Italy, and that as a result thereof the officials of the said Exposition awarded respondents a Certificate of Merit, but the samples so exhibited were compounded and made up in the United States and sent by respondents from the United States to such Exposition. All of the flavoring extracts sold by respondents are manufactured by them at their place of business in New York City.

PAR. 5. There are a large number of Italian-Americans among the purchasing public in the United States who have a distinct preference for flavoring extracts produced in Italy, under the belief that such extracts are superior to those produced in this country. These purchasers are led to believe because of the statements contained on the labels, cartons, and other advertising literature of respondents, and the fact that such representations are in the Italian language, that they are buying imported extracts of Italian origin for which they have a preference. To label a domestic extract as one of Italian origin causes such extract to have added sales value, and enables dealers in extracts so labeled to sell same more readily than would otherwise be the case.

PAR. 6. The above and foregoing representations have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the belief that the said flavoring extracts are and were prepared, compounded, and packaged in Italy and imported into the United States, and have the capacity and tendency to induce the purchasing public acting under such erroneous belief to purchase respondents' products, thereby unfairly diverting trade to the respondents from their competitors who rightfully and truthfully represent their merchandise and who do not in any wise falsely represent their products; and in this manner respondents do substantial injury to competition in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Anna R. Barletta and Hercules A. Barletta are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and briefs filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondents, Anna R. Barletta and Hercules A. Barletta, individually and trading as Barletta Manufacturing and Packing Company, or trading under any other name or names, their representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of flavoring extracts or compounds in interstate commerce and in the District of Columbia, do cease and desist from:

Representing, directly or indirectly, through the use of any foreign language, symbol, or picturization, or through any other means or device, or in any manner, that flavoring extracts compounded or manufactured in the United States are manufactured or produced in Italy or in any other foreign country and imported into the United States.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914, AND OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED JUNE 16, 1933¹

Docket 2325. Complaint, Mar. 12, 1935—Decision, Apr. 12, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of air-seal type, ferreous metal burial vaults, and in the sale thereof to jobbers and funeral directors and undertakers, in substantial competition with those engaged in the sale and distribution of metal, stone, concrete, cement, and other burial vaults in commerce between and among the various States—

(a) Represented, through certificates of warranty and through magazines, booklets, circulars, and other advertising media having wide circulation among its customers and prospective customers in the several States, prior to, but not since, year 1932, that its said vaults were rust-resisting and waterproof and verminproof and had the capacity to resist corrosion, exclude water and other substances and vermin from entrance from the grave into the casket, and that its said vaults afforded perfect protection; and

(b) Made use of warranties or guaranties, in connection with sale and offer of said vaults, under which, prior to, but not since, the year 1932, it undertook, irrespective of location or conditions in any plot of a cemetery where original vault was buried, and regardless of care or lack of care with which same was originally placed in the grave, to furnish a new vault without cost to the purchaser "upon proof of claim that this vault failed to give protection";

Facts being that, while (1) its said vaults were made by it with great care, by skilled workmen, of specially processed and considerably more costly metals of highest grade and quality obtainable in domestic market, and, by their very nature, exclusive of air, moisture, vermin, and water until the natural process of rust and corrosion, to which they were resistant, but which they could not prevent, had advanced to stage of producing tiny holes or pits permitting penetration, (2) were equal to standard metal vaults made by responsible and reputable members of the industry in question, and were an established part of the funeral supply industry and a lawful subject for sale, purchase, and transportation in interstate commerce, and (3), at time of sealing, were capable of sustaining weight of earth incident to burial and protecting remains from accelerated decay due to entrance of moisture, air, water, and vermin and other deleterious agents for period of years, depending upon underground and climatic conditions in particular locality, and below set forth conjunction of circumstances, no ferreous metal, buried, has absolute or predictable rate of corrosion, which varies with locality, particular underground conditions, and qualities and chemical content of different soils, all ferreous metal burial vaults will rust and corrode after burial, irrespective of type of construction, corrosive properties of soil, and other conditions so vary in different sections that, while given metal vault, buried, would resist penetration for more than one hundred years in some sections, such resistance would not exceed more than eight or ten in highly corrosive soils, ideal conjunction of conditions, which frequently does not obtain, must exist for air-seal principle to function as intended, and, due to climatic, geographical, chemical, and mineralogical conditions not subject to its control, no prediction could be made by anyone as to the period during which such vaults would continue to protect casket and contents, as above set forth;

With capacity to mislead purchasers of said products, and with capacity and tendency to induce public to purchase and use same in the erroneous belief that the aforesaid various statements and representations as to resistance of metals involved to rust and corrosion, etc., and as to air-tight and other qualities of said products, and protection afforded, were true, and to divert trade unfairly to it from its said competitors:

Held, That such acts and practices, under the circumstances set forth, were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Herman L. Weisman, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Acting in the public interest and pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission charges that the Perfection Burial Vault Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is now using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and in violation of an Act of Congress approved June 16, 1933, known and designated as the "National Industrial Recovery Act", and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, states its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPHS 1. The respondent, Perfection Burial Vault Company, is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its factory and principal place of business located in the city of Galion in said State. It is now, and for several years last past, has been engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling metal grave vaults used to encase a coffin in the burial of the dead, to purchasers thereof, many of whom reside outside the State of Ohio, and when orders are received therefor, they are filled by respondent by shipping the same from the said city of Galion, State of Ohio, into and through other States of the United States to the respective places of business or residences of such purchasers.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business, respondent is in competition with other individuals, copartnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and transportation of metal, stone, concrete, cement, and other grave vaults between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondent sells and ships said grave vaults, as aforesaid, to jobbers, funeral directors, and undertakers, the last two of which sell the same to ultimate purchasers thereof for use in the burial of their dead.

PAR. 4. Respondent issues with each vault for delivery to ultimate purchasers thereof and they are so delivered, a written purported warranty which provides in substance:

Perfection Burial Vault Company

Fifty Year (50) Warranty Certificate No ----

The Perfection Steel Body Company, manufacturer of Perfection Steel Burial Vaults, hereby warrants that:

1. This vault is made of 12 gauge metal, has been constructed by skilled workmen, has been tested by being submerged under pressure, and upon careful inspection was found to be free from any defects in material and workmanship, and to be waterproof and airtight.

2. When properly closed, it will protect the casket and its contents against entrance of water from external sources for a period of fifty years, and the underground service and protection to the contents of this vault will not be impaired by rust or corrosion for at least fifty years.

3. Upon proof of claim that this vault within fifty years from the date of interment failed to give this protection against the effects of rust, or corrosion and the entrance of water from external sources, the manufacturer will replace it without cost to the purchaser.

This agreement is a valid warranty of protection and replacement as applied to vault ----- interred ----- day of ----- 19----, from the date of said interment as countersigned by the funeral director below.

In witness whereof the corporate seal and signature of the President, duly authorized by the Board of Directors are affixed.

Countersigned The Perfection Burial Vault Company,

Funeral Director

Division of the Perfection Steel Body Company,

Galion, Crawford County, Ohio.

II. COHEN, President.

PAR. 5. The statements and representations described in the preceding paragraph are false and misleading in that respondent's said grave vaults will not remain waterproof and airtight for a period of fifty years; that in many instances said vaults are not waterproof and airtight or either at the time of sale to the ultimate purchasers thereof; that in many instances when closed as directed it will not protect the casket and its contents against entrance of water from external sources for a period of fifty years; that the underground service and protection to the contents of said vaults will often become impaired by rust and corrosion in many soils of the United States within a period of fifty years; that respondent's said vaults are made of metals which will corrode; there is a vast difference in the corrosive properties of soils throughout the United States, in some soils respondent's said vaults will corrode and pit in a period of from three to ten years and in others from ten to twenty years; whether respondent's said vaults or the materials of which they are made will last under burial conditions in any soil for a period of fifty years has never been determined; in many soils respondent's vaults will corrode and pit so as to let water into them; in many soils they will corrode and rust so as to cave-in or collapse; respondent's said vaults when buried underground are not airtight and waterproof and will, and often do, permit air and water to enter therein. Either air or water entering respondent's vault, when buried underground, promote and cause disintegration of the coffin and body encased therein. Water often enters the graves of the dead, the mechanism provided by respondent for sealing their said vaults will not at all times prevent the entrance of water into the same.

Complaint

The terms "waterproof" and "airtight" as used by respondent as aforesaid, mean to the ultimate purchaser thereof a watertight, airtight vault, a vault which will not permit water or air to enter the same and which will endure as such under burial conditions. The respondent's said vaults are not waterproof or airtight as the terms are understood by ultimate purchasers thereof. Water or air may seep into or enter the said vaults through the joints, holes, fastenings, or flanges thereof, or through pit holes due to rust or corrosion, or due to collapse or bending of the vaults. One hole the size of a pin appearing in the hood of said vaults will destroy the sealing thereof and permit water, if there is water in the grave, to enter the same. The exhumation of bodies after burial is so rare as to make these certificates of warranty worthless to a vast majority of purchasers of these vaults for the reason that no opportunity is afforded them in which to ascertain whether such vaults are or have been airtight or waterproof, or whether same will corrode, pit, or rust. These said purported warranties are not warranties, but are merely sales persuaders under the terms of which respondent will rarely, if ever, be called upon to replace said vaults in instances where the same are entirely defective, not waterproof or airtight. It is false and misleading for respondent to call them warranties or to issue them at all.

PAR. 6. Each and all of the said false and misleading statements and representations used by respondent as set out in paragraph 4 herein have and have had the capacity and tendency to induce the public to purchase and use said respondent's said grave vaults in the belief that they are true, and have and have had the tendency and capacity to divert trade from said competitors of respondent.

PAR. 7. The acts and practices of respondent above set forth are all to the prejudice of the public and to respondent's said competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Count 2

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its factory and principal place of business located in the city of Galion, in said State. Respondent is now and for several years last past, has been engaged in the business of manufacturing, selling, and distributing metal grave vaults, used to encase coffins in the burial of the dead, to purchasers thereof, located at points in the State of Ohio, and at points in various other States of the United States; and causes said products when so sold to be transported from its principal place of business in the city of Galion, State of Ohio, to the purchasers thereof in the State of Ohio and to other purchasers thereof in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia at their respective places of business, and there is now and has been for several years last past a course of trade and commerce by the said respondent in said products in the State of Ohio and between and among the States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. As grounds for this paragraph of this complaint, the Federal Trade Commission reiterates, adopts, and relies upon all matters and things set out in paragraphs 2 to 7, inclusive, of count 1 hereof to the same extent as though each and all of the allegations thereof were set out at length and in full in this paragraph.

PAR. 3. On November 4, 1933, under and pursuant to the provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act, the President of the United States made, issued, and approved a Code of Fair Competition for the Funeral Supply Industry, which became effective on the tenth day thereafter. The respondent herein was a party to and signatory of such Code of Fair Competition, and such Code is now in full force and effect as to this respondent.

The said National Industrial Recovery Act, Section (3), Paragraph (B), provides:

If the President shall have approved any such Code, the provisions of such Code shall be the standards of fair competition for such trade or industry, or supervision thereof. Any violation of such standards in transaction in or affecting interstate or foreign commerce shall be deemed an unfair method of competition in commerce within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended; but nothing in this title shall be construed to impair the powers of the Federal Trade Commission under such Act, as amended.

In Article IX, under the heading of "Trade Practice" of said Code, appears the following:

1. The following practices constitute unfair methods of competition and are prohibited:

To resort to or indulge in practices which are prejudicial to the public interest such as

Misbranding,

Misrepresentation in branding,

Labeling, Selling, and Advertising.

(W) Nothing in this Code shall limit the effect of any adjudication by the courts or holdings by the Federal Trade Commission on complaint, finding and order, that any practice or method is unfair providing that such adjudication herewith is not inconsistent of any provision of the Act or of this Code.

Notwithstanding the said provisions of said Code of Fair Competition, respondent has continued to and does, use said methods of competition hereinabove alleged and described, and has resorted to or indulged in the practices of misrepresentations in branding, labeling, selling, and advertising its said vaults in the manner hereinabove set forth.

PAR. 4. The above alleged methods, acts and practices of the respondent are and have been in violation of the standards of fair competition as set forth in said Code of Fair Competition for the said Funeral Supply Industry of the United States. Such violation of such standards in the aforesaid transactions in interstate commerce and in other transactions which affect interstate commerce in the manner set forth above are in violation of Section (3) of the National Industrial Recovery Act and they are unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

sion, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on the 12th day of March 1935, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Perfection Steel Body Company, a corporation, trading as Perfection Burial Vault Company, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, a stipulation as to the facts was agreed upon by and between W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, and respondent, by which it was agreed that, subject to the approval of the Federal Trade Commission, the statement of facts so agreed upon should be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto. It was further agreed that the said Commission might proceed upon such statement of facts, including inferences drawn from said stipulated facts, to issue its report, stating its findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding, without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Said stipulation as to the facts has been duly filed in the office of the Commission and approved by it. Thereafter, the proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, and the statement of facts as agreed upon in lieu of testimony, briefs, and arguments having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent named above as Perfection Burial Vault Company, is in truth the Perfection Steel Body Company, a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio. The lawful trade name of respondent is Perfection Burial Vault Company. Respondent's factory and principal place of business is located in the city of Galion in said State. It is now, and for several years last past has been engaged, among other things, in the business of manufacturing and selling metal grave vaults used to encase coffins in the burial of the dead, to purchasers thereof, many of whom reside outside of the State of Ohio. When orders are received therefor, they are filled by respondent by shipping the vaults from the said city of Galion, State of Ohio, into and through other States of the United States to the respective places of business or residences of such purchasers. Respondent calls its said vaults the "Perfection Steel Burial Vaults." Respondent has built up a very substantial business in this product.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business respondent is in substantial competition with other individuals, copartnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and transportation of metal, stone, concrete, cement, and other grave vaults, in commerce between and among various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondent sells and ships said grave vaults, as aforesaid, to jobbers, funeral directors, and undertakers, the last two of which sell the same to ultimate purchasers thereof for use in the burial of their dead.

PAR. 4. A corpse, either embalmed or not embalmed, is in the process of decay and disintegration at the time of its burial. The process of embalming is the method of injecting certain fluids into the corpse, for the purpose of delaying such decay and disintegration only for a temporary period of time, not permanently. The function of a metal burial vault is further to delay such process of decay and disintegration by preventing acceleration of such process through the entrance of water and other deleterious substances from the grave into the casket.

PAR. 5. The burial vaults manufactured by Perfection Burial Vault Company are made with great care by skilled workmen, of United States Standard 12 gauge metal. They are useful, proper and suitable receptacles for the interment of the dead; and are equal to the standard metal vaults manufactured by the reputable and responsible members of the metal vault industry. Such metal vaults are an established part of the funeral supply industry and may be lawfully sold, bought, and transported in interstate commerce.

PAR. 6. Ferreous metals called Armco Ingot iron and copper bearing steel are used by respondent in the manufacture of its said burial vaults. These metals are specially processed and rolled from the highest grade and quality of metals which can be obtained by respondent in the domestic market for the manufacture of its burial vaults. Their cost is considerably higher than the cost of ordinary commercial steel. They are fabricated under the best, modern, scientifically controlled steel-making processes which reduce impurities and tend to increase their durability in underground service. Their manufacturers are of recognized responsibility and integrity and make rigid inspection and tests of each sheet of said metal before shipment to the respondent. These metals, by their very nature, will exclude air, moisture, vermin, and water until the natural process of rust and corrosion, which these metals will resist but can not prevent, has advanced to the stage of producing tiny holes or pits which will permit penetration of said metals.

PAR. 7. There is a vast difference in the corrosive properties of soils found in the cemeteries in the various parts of the United States and also a great difference in the surface and subsurface drainage conditions in various sections of the country.

PAR. 8. All burial vaults made of ferrous metals will rust and corrode after burial underground. No ferrous metal, buried underground, has an absolute or predictable rate of corrosion. Such rate will vary with the locality, with particular underground conditions, and with the qualities and chemical content of different soils.

PAR. 9. There is no material yet known or devised, adaptable for construction into a receptacle useful in the burial of the dead, which when placed underground, would not in time deteriorate and cease to resist penetration of air, moisture, water, or vermin. The rate of deterioration would be slow in some soils and more rapid in others, depending upon the climatic conditions of the locality and the chemical and mineral composition and content of the soil in a particular place.

PAR. 10. The process of deterioration above referred to would affect every type of metal vault irrespective of whether its type of construction involved closing upon the so-called air-sealing or diving-bell principle, or depended upon mechanical locks or clamps. No principle of mechanics or physics, no process of construction and joiner of metals, and no method for sealing metal burial vaults are available to enable any manufacturer thereof to warrant or predict that such vaults, when placed underground, would endure as airtight, vermin proof and waterproof for any fixed or stated period of time.

PAR. 11. In many sections of the United States, the corrosive properties of the soil and other conditions are such that a United States Standard 12 gauge metal vault placed underground would resist penetration for a period of more than one hundred years; in some of the more corrosive soils in the United States a similar vault would resist such penetration by corrosion for only fifty years, while in still other highly corrosive soils penetration would be accomplished within eight to ten years.

PAR. 12. The Perfection Burial Vault is what is known in the trade as an air-seal vault. It consists of two parts (1) a pan (or base) and (2) a hood (dome or top) and operates on the principle of a diving bell. The confined air in the inverted airtight dome is supposed to resist the entrance of water rising from below. The top and sides of the hood are made of one piece of iron. The pan is also made of one piece of iron. The entire base resembles an inverted pan. Small raised portions, or bosses hold the bottom of the casket a fraction of an inch above the top of the pan. The bottom rim or flange of the hood (dome or top) rests on the outside flange of the pan, the width of the metal from the grave floor. This type of vault is not airtight or waterproof until sealed by water to the level of the highest point on the rim of the inverted dome which rests on the flange of the pan. Water rising from the bottom in the grave forces the air from the cavity under the base through holes at each corner of the pan, into the hood. As the pressure of the outside water increases, the resistance of the compressed air increases, and, in theory the vault is sealed against the further entrance of water to the extent that it will not reach the casket within. The mechanism provided by respondent for sealing said vaults will not at all times prevent the entrance of water into said vaults, with resulting damage to the coffin and body placed therein. In addition, in order for them to remain waterproof for any considerable length of time, they must be buried and remain buried under ideal conditions, which are:

1. An airtight hood,
 2. A level base,
 3. The air space underneath the pan must not be occupied by dirt or other materials that will reduce the amount of air to be forced into the dome,
 4. There must be no appreciable change of temperature in the grave from that obtaining when the vault is first buried,
 5. There must be no appreciable changes in atmospheric pressure.
- These said "ideal" conditions do not obtain in a large number of cases of burial where said vaults are used.

PAR. 13. Respondent's metal vaults, at the time of their sale, are capable of sustaining and will sustain the weight of earth incident to burial.

PAR. 14. Respondent's metal vaults at the time of their sale are capable of protecting and will protect the remains within the casket from accelerated decay and decomposition due to the entrance from the grave into the casket of moisture, water, vermin, or other deleterious agents for a period of years depending upon the underground and climatic conditions in the locality where any such vault is used and the conditions mentioned in paragraph 12 above.

PAR. 15. No prediction can be made by anybody as to the period within which respondent's vaults will continue after burial to protect the casket and its contents from accelerated decay and decomposition, because climatic, geographic, chemical, and mineralogical conditions, not subject to respondent's control, determine the duration of such period.

PAR. 16. Instances of disinterments are rare when compared with the total number of burials, but disinterments are not unusual occurrences. Changes in a cemetery, or removal of a section of a cemetery or even of an entire cemetery necessitates disinterments followed by reburial in some other cemetery. Disinterments are often brought about by the wishes of surviving relatives to change to better or differently located burial plots or to some different plot or cemetery where other members of the same family are buried. Such disinterments are followed by reburial. Irrespective of the actual state of decay and disintegration of the remains within the casket when disinterment of the vault takes place, surviving relatives concerned in the reburial have a proper interest as to whether the conditions of the original vault makes reburial thereof practical or whether such receptacle needs to be replaced.

PAR. 17. At the time when the complaint herein (dated March 12, 1935) was issued and since about May 1, 1932, respondent offered to issue, and from time to time did issue, incident to the sale of its burial vaults, a warranty, offering under stated conditions, to furnish a new vault without cost, irrespective of the location of or conditions in any plot or cemetery where the original vault was buried, and regardless of the care or lack of care with which the same was originally placed in the grave; said warranty reciting that:

1. This Vault is made of 12 gauge metal, has been constructed by skilled workmen, has been tested by being submerged under pressure, and upon careful inspection was found to be free from any defects in material and workmanship.

2. Upon proof of claim that this Vault failed to give protection, the manufacturer will replace it without cost to the purchaser.

PAR. 18. Respondent has a legitimate interest in making known to the undertakers and dealers in funeral supplies who purchase its burial vaults for resale and to the ultimate purchasers of said vaults, its willingness, without cost, to furnish a new vault under the conditions stated in such warranty.

Such warranty is of value to the recipients thereof, any one of whom may some time after original burial find it necessary to arrange for reburial, after disinterment, in some other plot or cemetery.

PAR. 19. Respondent has made and issued said certificates of warranty in good faith and is, and at all times has been, financially able, ready, and willing to comply fully with, and perform the full terms of, its certificates of warranty.

Findings

24 F. T. C.

PAR. 20. Prior to 1932, but not since that year, including the period since the filing of the complaint herein, respondent did represent in certificates of warranty, substantially different from the certificate above referred to, and in magazines, booklets, circulars, and other advertising media, having a wide interstate circulation among its customers and prospective customers residing in the several States of the United States, in connection with the sale and promotion of the sale of its said burial vaults, in substance, that its said vaults were rust-resisting, waterproof and verminproof and had the capacity to resist corrosion, exclude water and other substances, and vermin from entrance from the grave into the casket.

Respondent, in 1932, and prior to the issuance of the complaint herein, dated March 12, 1935, has voluntarily abandoned, and in the usual course of business ceased to use, and it does not now make, issue, or use, the above representations or statements, or any of them, either in certificates of warranty or in any advertising media or in any other manner.

PAR. 21. Respondent's use of representations to the effect that its burial vaults would, under all underground conditions, remain waterproof, rust-resisting and verminproof, had the capacity to mislead the purchasers of said vaults. Because of the great variation in the corrosive properties of soils in different sections of the country and in the subterranean water-level conditions and the surface drainage conditions, and also because of the conditions set forth in paragraph 12 hereof, any universal representation as to the endurance qualities of said vaults in underground service is inaccurate and misleading.

PAR. 22. The following statements and representations made by the respondent, its agents, employees and representatives, in connection with the offering for sale or selling in interstate commerce the types of ferrous metal burial vaults, above described, in certificates of warranty and in advertising, to the effect that:

1. The metal of which respondent's vaults are made is able, for a stated period of fifty years, or for any fixed or stated period of time, to resist rust and corrosion or the effects thereof when placed underground;

2. The said vaults will remain airtight, verminproof, or waterproof for any fixed or stated period of time after being placed underground;

3. Or any other representation of like import;

4. And the use of certificates of warranty such as described in paragraph 20 hereof in aid of the sale of said vaults, are untrue, deceptive, and misleading, and have and have had the capacity and tendency to induce the public to purchase and use respondent's vaults under the erroneous belief that said statements and representations are true and have and have had the tendency and capacity to unfairly divert trade to respondent from its competitors.

1013

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent under the conditions described in the foregoing findings, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors. They are unfair methods of competition in commerce and constitute violations of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, and the stipulated facts filed herein, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That respondent, Perfection Steel Body Company, a corporation, trading as Perfection Burial Vault Company, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of ferrous metal burial vaults in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, forthwith cease and desist from:

1. The use of representations in certificates of warranty or guaranty in advertising, or in any other manner, to the effect that:

- (a) The metal of which respondent's vaults are made is able for a stated period of 50 years, or for any fixed or stated period of time, to resist rust and corrosion, or the effects thereof, when placed underground.
- (b) The said vaults will remain airtight, verminproof, or waterproof for any fixed or stated period of 50 years, or for any fixed or stated period of time, after being placed underground.
- (c) Or any other representation, of like import.

Order

24 F. T. C.

2. And from using certificates of "Warranty" or "Guaranty" in connection with the sale, or offering for sale of such vaults, unless it clearly appears therein that such certificates refer to the care, skill, mechanism, and materials used in the construction of said vaults, and to tests made to determine whether they leak, and not to their durability as to remaining airtight, verminproof, or waterproof when used for burial purposes.

It is further ordered, That respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

PAUL GREENBERG, DOING BUSINESS AS BEVERLY PRODUCTS COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2644. Complaint, Dec. 5, 1935—Decision, Apr. 14, 1937

Where an individual engaged in the sale and distribution among the various States of certain medicinal preparations known and described, respectively, as "Beverly Femin Tablets" and "Beverly Menses Tablets," in substantial competition with others engaged in sale and distribution among the various States and in the District of Columbia of various preparations similar in kind, and of preparations intended for and adapted to the purposes and uses for which his said products were adapted, and including among his said competitors those who do not make such false and misleading representations as made by said individual as hereinbelow set forth, but truthfully and accurately state the purposes for which their said products may be used and the effects thereof; in advertising his said preparations in newspapers and magazines circulated to the purchasing public in various parts of the United States, and, chiefly, through circular letters and other advertising material distributed to purchasing public in the various States by mail or otherwise—

- (a) Represented that said "Beverly Femin Tablets" preparation constituted an effective, potent, and powerful antiseptic and germicide for use by women in preventing and destroying germ life causative of female and sexual diseases, and for use in promoting feminine hygiene by reason of such properties, and was a cure, remedy, or competent and adequate treatment for leucorrhoea and cervicitis, and could be used safely and without fear of harmful results, and, by innuendo and suggestion, that said preparation was a contraceptive which gave absolute protection and could be depended upon for such purpose without limitation, and that one "Prof. John R. Baker, M. A., Ph. D., of Oxford University" had established the fact, through investigations as to the antiseptic powers of feminine hygiene preparations on the market, that said tablets represented the furthest advance in vaginal therapy, and, through statements attributed to them by purported quotations, that physicians had endorsed and recommended such tablets, facts being said preparation was not an effective, potent, and powerful germicide under conditions of use when employed by women to prevent and destroy germ life, nor a proper or effective treatment for aforesaid diseases, and could not be used safely and without fear of harmful results as a germicide, due to fact that infection, preventable through use of an effective germicide, might result by reason of said preparation's ineffective and limited action in such respect, and said preparation was not a dependable contraceptive under all conditions or in all cases, and did not afford positive protection as such, in view of the nature of the circumstances attending the use thereof, and representations and intimations that it might be depended upon absolutely in such respect were inaccurate, greatly overdrawn and misleading; and

(b) Represented, as aforesaid, that his said preparation "Beverly Menses Tablets" was a cure, remedy, or competent and adequate treatment for diseases peculiar to women, and especially for delayed, painful, and suppressed menstruation, and that its action in such respects was certain, and that it was harmless and produced no distressing after-effects, and, by innuendo and suggestion, that said preparation was an abortifacient and could be absolutely depended upon for such purpose, facts being said medicine was not a cure, remedy, or competent and adequate treatment for such diseases generally, or for delayed, painful, or suppressed menstruation, use thereof might be harmful and produce distressing after-effects, it was not an abortifacient and could not be depended upon for such purpose, and was of no effect in many diseased and abnormal conditions of the feminine organs, nor effective in the treatment of the underlying causes of many female troubles and diseases, and his said representations in regard thereto were inaccurate and much too broad and inclusive to express true therapeutic effects thereof;

With tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the public as to the properties and therapeutic effects of said medicines in the particulars hereinbefore set forth, and to cause and induce them to buy and use the same because of the erroneous belief thus engendered, and to divert trade to him from competitors engaged in sale of preparations of the same or similar kind or adapted to and used for the legitimate purposes for which he recommended his said products as aforesaid, and with result, through suggestions and innuendos above set forth, of supplying merely added inducements for purchase and use of said products, and giving added sales appeal, to the disadvantage of similar preparations not thus represented:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John J. Keenan and Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiners.

Mr. Harry D. Michael for the Commission.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Paul Greenberg, doing business under the name and style of Beverly Products Company, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. That said respondent, Paul Greenberg, doing business under the name and style of Beverly Products Company, is now and has been engaged for more than one year last past in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of certain preparations designed and intended for the use of women and represented as having certain therapeutic, medicinal, or antiseptic and germicidal functions, which said preparations are known and described, respectively, as Beverly Femin Tablets and Beverly Menses Tablets, the last named being in two forms called "Standard" and "Triple X Formula," respectively. The office of respondent, doing business as aforesaid, and principal place of business is and has been located in the city of Springfield, in the State of Massachusetts. Said respondent, in the course and conduct of his said business, causes the said preparations sold by him to be transported in interstate commerce from his said place of business in Massachusetts to, into, and through States of the United States other than Massachusetts to various and numerous persons in such other States to whom such preparations are or have been sold.

PAR. 2. That, during the time above mentioned, other individuals, firms, and corporations in various States of the United States are and have been engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of preparations similar in kind to those of respondent or intended for and adapted to the ostensible uses for which respondent's said preparations are recommended as hereinafter set out. Such other individuals, firms, and corporations have caused and do now cause their said preparations when sold by them, to be transported from the various States of the United States where they are located, to, into and through States other than the State of origin of the shipment thereof. Said respondent has been, during the aforesaid time, in competition in interstate commerce in the sale of his said preparations with such other individuals, firms, and corporations.

PAR. 3. That respondent, in connection with the sale of his said preparations as aforesaid, has made use of advertisements inserted in newspapers and other publications circulated to the purchasing public in various parts of the United States. He also has advertised and does now advertise his said preparations by means of circular letters and other advertising material which he causes to be distributed to the purchasing public in various States of the United States by mail or otherwise.

PAR. 4. By the means aforesaid respondent has represented or does represent that said preparation known as Beverly Femin Tablets is an effective, potent, and powerful antiseptic and germicide for use by women in preventing and destroying germ life, causative of female and sexual diseases, and for use in promoting feminine hygiene. It has been or is represented by respondent or implied from representations made by him that said preparation is a cure, remedy, or competent and adequate treatment for leucorrhœa and cervicitis. It is further so represented that said preparation can be used safely and without fear of harmful results.

In truth and in fact, said preparation is not an effective, potent, and powerful antiseptic or germicide, particularly under the conditions of use, for the purposes recommended. It does not have such germicidal properties as to destroy the germs causative of venereal diseases nor does it constitute a proper or effective treatment for such diseases or for leucorrhœa or cervicitis. Moreover, said preparation cannot be used safely and without fear of harmful results because of its ineffective and limited action as a germicide, the use of which, in cases of exposure, results in infection that might be prevented by an effective germicide.

By the means aforesaid, respondent, by innuendo and suggestion, makes representations which imply that said preparation is a contraceptive, that it gives absolute protection against pregnancy and that it can be depended upon for such purpose without limitation. In truth and in fact, said preparation is not a dependable contraceptive under all conditions or in all cases nor does it afford positive protection against pregnancy. The use of said preparation cannot be depended upon to destroy all of the spermatozoa that may be present in the female organ after copulation.

By the means aforesaid, respondent also represents or implies that an investigation conducted by Prof. John R. Baker of Oxford University disclosed that Beverly Femin Tablets represented "the furthest advance in vaginal therapy" when, in truth and in fact, Prof. Baker made no investigation involving said preparation as such and did not mention Beverly Femin Tablets in his report.

By the means aforesaid, respondent represents that numerous doctors have recommended Beverly Femin Tablets in accordance with their statements supposedly quoted in respondent's literature when, in truth and in fact, respondent's preparation, Beverly Femin Tablets, was not mentioned in the statements of the doctors whose ostensible statements are quoted by respondent.

PAR. 5. That respondent, by the means aforesaid, represents that said preparation, Beverly Menses Tablets, is a cure, remedy or competent and adequate treatment for diseases peculiar to women and especially for delayed, painful, and suppressed menstruation; that its action is certain and that it is harmless and produces no distressing after-effects. That, in truth and in fact, said preparation is a mere temporary palliative and its use cannot be depended upon to relieve said conditions nor is it effective in cases of the kind produced by many abnormal conditions and diseases. Moreover, the use of said preparation is not harmless nor is it true to state that it produces no distressing after-effects but, on the other hand, its use may be harmful.

By the means aforesaid, respondent, by innuendo and suggestion, makes representations which imply that said preparation is an abortifacient and that it can be absolutely depended upon for that purpose and that it will produce such results when, in truth and in fact, such is not the case.

PAR. 6. That the representations of respondent as aforesaid have had and do have the tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the public in the particulars as aforesaid and to cause and induce them to buy and use respondent's said preparations because of the erroneous beliefs engendered as above set forth, and to divert trade to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale of preparations of the same or similar kind as those sold by respondent or of those adapted to and used for the purposes, or some of them for which respondent recommends his said preparations as aforesaid. There are, among the competitors of respondent, those who in no wise make the same or similar false and misleading representations as made by respondent as herein set out and who truthfully and accurately state the uses for which such preparations may be used and the effects thereof.

PAR. 7. The above acts and things done by respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and the competitors of respondent in interstate commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

24 F. T. C.

Robert S. Hall, examiners of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, respondent having failed to introduce testimony and other evidence in opposition to the allegations of the complaint; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and brief in support of the complaint, respondent having failed to file a brief, although given an opportunity so to do, and having failed to appear at the time and place set for oral argument after due notice thereof; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Paul Greenberg, doing business under the name and style of Beverly Products Company, was, at the time of issuance of the complaint herein, and for more than three years prior thereto, engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States of certain medicinal preparations known and described, respectively, as Beverly Femin Tablets and Beverly Menses Tablets. In the conduct of said business as aforesaid, respondent had his office and principal place of business in the city of Springfield, in the State of Massachusetts. His last office address in said city and State was 66 Vernon Street. Said respondent, in the course and conduct of his said business, caused the said preparations sold by him to be transported in commerce from his said place of business in Massachusetts to, into and through States of the United States, other than Massachusetts, to various and numerous persons in such other States to whom such preparations had been sold.

PAR. 2. During the time above mentioned, other individuals, firms, and corporations in various States of the United States are and have been engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia, of preparations similar in kind to said preparations so sold by respondent and of preparations intended for and adapted to the purposes and uses for which respondent's said preparations are adapted. Such other individuals, firms, and corporations have caused and do now cause their said preparations, when sold by them, to be transported from the various States of the United States, where they are located, to, into and through States other than the States of origin of the shipment thereof to the purchasers of the same in such other States. Respondent was, during the aforesaid time, in substantial competition, in the sale of his said preparations in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, with such other individuals, firms, and corporations.

PAR. 3. Respondent's usual method of business was to sell his said preparations by mail direct to members of the consuming public. At one time, respondent advertised his said preparations in newspapers and magazines circulated to the purchasing public in various parts of the United States. His chief means of promoting the sale of said preparations was by means of circular letters and other advertising material which he caused to be distributed to the purchasing public in various States of the United States by mail or otherwise.

PAR. 4. By means of one or both of the means of advertising aforesaid, respondent represented that said preparation known as Beverly Femin Tablets is an effective, potent, and powerful antiseptic and germicide for use by women in preventing and destroying germ life causative of female and sexual diseases, and for use in promoting feminine hygiene by reason of such properties; that it is a cure, remedy or competent and adequate treatment for leucorrhoea and cervicitis; and that it can be used safely and without fear of harmful results. Respondent, also, made representations in regard to said preparation, by the means aforesaid, which, by innuendo and suggestion, implied that said preparation is a contraceptive, that it gives absolute protection against pregnancy and that it can be depended upon for such purpose without limitation.

Examples of such representations, as aforesaid, are the following:

Femin Tablets are designed to give Dependable Antiseptic Safeguarding in feminine hygiene.

Women all over America have learned that they can absolutely rely on Femin's active ingredient for dependable ethical antiseptic germ-destroying power. * * * They realize that a product they can fully trust may cost a little more, but that it is fully worth the price.

* * * germ-destroying foam (from Beverly Femin Tablet) * * *

* * * a rather dry foam remains in the vagina (after using Beverly Femin Tablets) for many hours to absolutely safeguard against any further infiltrations of inherent, infectious germ-laden discharges and secretions.

* * * they (women) are not slow in understanding why they may at last have no further concern about the efficiency and safety of their method in intimate feminine hygiene when using Beverly Femin Tablets.

* * * extremely potent * * *

* * * an effervescent germ-destroying foam (from Beverly Femin Tablets) which expands, spreads, pushes the terrific, yet absolutely harmless germ-destroying ingredients into every tiny fold and crevice,—to attack and kill every vestige (vestige) of germ life. * * *

This foam (from Beverly Femin Tablets) can be left in for as long as eight hours, to continue its antiseptic mission, * * *

Women * * * are not slow in understanding why they may at last have no further concern about the efficiency and safety of their method in intimate feminine hygiene when using Beverly Femin Tablets!

Femin Tablets are designed to give DEPENDABLE ANTISEPTIC SAFEGUARDING in feminine hygiene.

It was further represented by respondent, by the means aforesaid, that one "Prof. John R. Baker, M. A., Ph. D., of Oxford University" carried on investigations as to the antiseptic powers of feminine hygiene preparations on the market and that he thus "established the fact that Beverly Femin Tablets represent the furthest advance in vaginal therapy; * * *." Also, that physicians had endorsed and recommended Beverly Femin Tablets by the statements attributed to them in purportedly quoted statements. The following is an example of such representations:

Dr. Walther, A University Professor, says: "have used Beverly Femin Tablets and after thorough clinical tests can say that it is a superior product, * * *."

PAR. 5. By means of one or both of the means of advertising aforesaid, respondent represented that his said preparation, "Beverly Menses Tablets" is a cure, remedy, or competent and adequate treatment for diseases peculiar to women, and especially for delayed, painful and suppressed menstruation, and that its action in such respects is certain, and that it is harmless and produces no distressing after effects. It was further represented by respondent, by the means aforesaid, by innuendo and suggestion that said preparation is an abortifacient and that it can be absolutely depended upon for that purpose.

PAR. 6. The formula of Beverly Menses Tablets (Triple X) is as follows:

Ex. Cotton Root.....	1 gr.
Ergotin, Bonjean, P. T.....	1 gr.
Ferrous Sulph. Exsic.....	1 gr.
Ext. Black Hellebore.....	1 gr.
Aloe, Purified.....	1 gr.
Oil Savin.....	¼ min.

The Beverly Femin Tablets are composed of two percent "Panto-sept" with a base of tartaric acid and sodium bicarbonate.

PAR. 7. In truth and in fact, said preparation, "Beverly Femin Tablets," is not an effective, potent, and powerful germicide under the conditions of use when used by women for the purpose of preventing and destroying germ life. Neither is said preparation a proper or effective treatment for sexual diseases or for leucorrhoea or for cervicitis. Moreover, said preparation cannot be used safely and without fear of harmful results, when used as a germicide, because of its ineffective and limited action in such respect and the fact that, in cases of exposure, infection might result that could have been prevented by the use of an effective germicide. Said preparation is not a dependable contraceptive under all conditions or in all cases, nor does it afford positive protection against pregnancy. On account of the structure of the female organ and the difficulty of reaching all parts of the surfaces of the folds thereof, a preparation such as this, under the conditions of use, cannot be depended upon to come in contact with all of such surfaces and to destroy all of the spermatozoa that may be present. Representations and intimations that said preparation may be absolutely depended upon in such respect are therefore inaccurate, greatly overdrawn and misleading.

In truth and in fact, Prof. John R. Baker of Oxford University never mentioned "Beverly Femin Tablets" nor used it as such in conducting investigations and experiments, nor did the doctors who were represented by respondent as having endorsed said preparation ever use "Beverly Femin Tablets" as such, nor did they mention said preparation by name in any of their purported endorsements.

PAR. 8. In truth and in fact, said medicine, "Beverly Menses Tablets," is not a cure, remedy, or competent and adequate treatment for female diseases generally or for delayed, painful, or suppressed menstruation. Its use may be harmful and it may produce distressing after effects. It is not an abortifacient, nor can it be depended upon to bring about the resumption of menstruation after conception has taken place. Said preparation is of no effect in many diseased and abnormal conditions of the female organs, nor is it effective in the treatment of the underlying causes of many female troubles and diseases. The representations of respondent in regard thereto are not accurate and are much too broad and inclusive to express the true therapeutic effects of said medicine.

PAR. 9. The representations of respondent as aforesaid have had and do have the tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the public as to the properties and therapeutic effects of said medicines in the particulars as herein set forth and to cause and induce them to buy and use said preparations because of the erroneous beliefs engendered as above set forth, and to divert trade to respondent from competitors engaged in the sale of preparations of the same or similar kind as those sold by respondent or adapted to and used for the legitimate purposes for which respondent recommends his said preparations as aforesaid. The representations by suggestion and innuendo as to uses of respondent's preparations as a contraceptive and as an abortifacient, respectively, merely serve as added inducements for their purchase and use and give an added sales appeal to the disadvantage of similar preparations not so represented. There are among the competitors of respondent those who do not make the same or similar false and misleading representations as made by respondent as herein set out but who truthfully and accurately state the purposes for which their preparations may be used and the effects thereof.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, Paul Greenberg, doing business under the name and style of Beverly Products Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Paul Greenberg, doing business under the name and style of Beverly Products Company, trading under his own name, or under said trade name, or under any other trade name or names, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of Beverly Femin Tablets and Beverly Menses Tablets, respectively, or of any medicines of the same formulae designated and described by any other means, or of any medicines of substantially the same formulae designated and described by the aforesaid names, or by any other names in interstate commerce, or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or by implication, or by innuendo or suggestion, or by use of the statements of others:

1. That said preparation "Beverly Femin Tablets" is an effective, potent, and powerful germicide under the conditions of use for feminine hygiene; or that it is effective in the treatment of sexual diseases, leucorrhoea or cervicitis; or that it can be used safely and without fear of harmful results so far as the prevention of infection is concerned; or that it can be absolutely dependent upon or relied upon for results; or that it is a positive or dependable contraceptive under all conditions, or in all cases; or that said preparation has been tested or endorsed by physicians or other persons when no such endorsements have been given, or no such tests have been made of the specific preparation.

2. That said "Beverly Menses Tablets" is a cure, remedy, or competent and adequate treatment for female diseases generally or for delayed, painful, or suppressed menstruation; or that it is beneficial in any or all of such conditions regardless of the cause thereof; or that it is an abortifacient, or that it is harmless and produces no distressing after effects.

It is further ordered, That respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
MAPLE CITY CANDY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2916. Complaint, Aug. 28, 1936—Decision, Apr. 17, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture and sale of candy, including certain assortments which were so packed and assembled as to involve use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to consumers thereof, and which consisted of a number of candy bars and a box of candy, together with push card, for sale under a plan and in accordance with said card's explanatory legend, pursuant to which purchaser received, for 5¢ paid, one, two, three, or four bars of candy, in accordance with particular number pushed by chance therefrom, and purchaser of last disk was entitled to receive, without charge, in addition to bars secured, aforesaid box of candy—

Sold, to wholesalers and jobbers for display and resale to purchasing public by their retailer-vendees, in accordance with aforesaid plan, such assortments and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its said product in accordance with such plan, contrary to public policy, long recognized by the common law and criminal statute, and to an established public policy of the United States Government, and in competition with many who, unwilling to offer and sell candy so packed and assembled or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public as to involve a game of chance, or to adopt and use any method involving such a game of chance or sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method contrary to public policy, refrain therefrom;

With result that many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy were attracted by said method and manner of packing said product and by element of chance involved in sale thereof as above set forth, and thereby induced to purchase such candy, thus packed and sold by it, in preference to that offered and sold by said competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, and with tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to it trade from its competitors as aforesaid, exclude from such trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such or an equivalent practice or method as unlawful, lessen competition therein, and tend to create a monopoly thereof in it and such other distributors as use same or an equivalent method, deprive purchasing public of benefit of free competition in trade involved, and eliminate from said trade all actual, and exclude therefrom all potential, competitors who do not adopt and use such or an equivalent method:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Maple City Candy Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Maple City Candy Company, is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Indiana, with its principal office and place of business located at 405 Tyler Street, La Porte, Ind. Respondent is now, and for six months last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers and jobbers located at points in the various States of the United States, and causes and has caused its said products, when so sold, to be transported from its principal place of business in La Porte, Ind., to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business; and there is now, and has been for six months last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers and jobbers an assortment of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof.

Said assortment manufactured and distributed by respondent is composed of a number of candy bars and a box of candy, together with a device commonly called a push card. Candy contained in said assortment is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The push card has a number of partially perforated discs, and when a push is made and the disc separated from the card, a number is disclosed. Sales are 5¢ each and the card bears statements informing customers and prospective customers that certain specified numbers entitle the customer to one bar of candy, that certain other specified numbers entitle the customer to two bars of candy, that certain other specified numbers entitle the customer to three bars, and that certain other specified numbers entitle the customer to four bars of candy. The purchaser of the last disc on said push card is entitled to receive, and is to be given free of charge, in addition to one of said bars of candy, the box of candy heretofore referred to. The numbers on the discs or pushes are effectively concealed from the purchaser and prospective purchaser until a selection has been made and the disc separated from the card. The number of bars of candy which a customer receives for the price of 5¢ is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondent sells its assortment, resell said assortment to retail dealers, and said retail dealers expose said assortment for sale and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its product in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth, and said sales plan has the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said product in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a box of candy.

The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy; and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with the respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy, and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent, in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said methods by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors, who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. Many of said competitors of respondent are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 7. The aforementioned method, acts and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, as hereinabove alleged. Said method, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

other intervening procedure, the Commission might issue and serve upon it findings as to the facts and conclusion and an order to cease and desist from the violations of law charged in the complaint.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto; and the Commissioner, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Maple City Candy Company, is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of Indiana, with its principal office and place of business located at 405 Tyler Street, La Porte, Ind. Respondent is now, and for six months last past has been, engaged in the manufacture of candies and in the sale and distribution thereof to wholesale dealers and jobbers located at points in the various States of the United States. Respondent causes and has caused its said products when sold to be transported from its principal place of business in La Porte, Ind., to purchasers thereof in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for six months last past, a course of trade and commerce by said respondent in such candy between and among the States of the United States. In the course and conduct of said business, respondent is in competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals engaged in the manufacture of candy and in the sale and distribution thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent sells and has sold to wholesale dealers and jobbers an assortment of candy so packed and assembled as to involve the use of a lottery scheme when sold and distributed to the consumers thereof. Said assortment manufactured and distributed by respondent is composed of a number of candy bars and a box of candy, together with a device commonly called a push card. Candy contained in said assortment is distributed to purchasers in the following manner:

The pushcard has a number of partially perforated discs, and when a push is made and the disc separated from the card a number is disclosed. Sales are 5¢ each, and the card bears statements informing customers and prospective customers that certain specified numbers entitle the customer to one bar of candy; that certain other specified numbers entitle the customer to two bars of candy; that certain other specified numbers entitle the customer to three bars; and that certain other specified numbers entitle the customer to four bars of candy. The purchaser of the last disc on said pushcard is entitled to receive, and is to be given free of charge, in addition to one of said bars of candy, the box of candy heretofore referred to. The numbers on the discs or pushes are effectively concealed from the purchaser and prospective purchaser until a selection has been made and the disc separated from the card. The number of bars of candy which a customer receives for the price of 5¢ is thus determined wholly by lot or chance.

PAR. 3. The wholesale dealers and jobbers to whom respondent sells its assortment resell said assortment to retail dealers, and said retail dealers expose said assortment for sale and sell said candy to the purchasing public in accordance with the aforesaid sales plan. Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its product in accordance with the sales plan hereinabove set forth. Said sales plan has the capacity and tendency of inducing purchasers thereof to purchase respondent's said product in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by its competitors.

PAR. 4. The sale of said candy to the purchasing public in the manner above alleged involves a game of chance or the sale of a chance to procure a box of candy, or additional bars of candy.

The use by respondent of said method in the sale of candy, and the sale of candy by and through the use thereof and by the aid of said method, is a practice of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy, and is contrary to an established public policy of the Government of the United States. The use by respondent of said method has the tendency unduly to hinder competition or create monopoly in this, to wit: that the use thereof has the tendency and capacity to exclude from the branch of the candy trade involved in this proceeding competitors who do not adopt and use the same method or an equivalent or similar method involving the same or an equivalent or similar element of chance or lottery scheme.

Many persons, firms, and corporations who make and sell candy in competition with respondent, as above alleged, are unwilling to offer for sale or sell candy so packed and assembled as above alleged, or otherwise arranged and packed for sale to the purchasing public so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

PAR. 5. Many dealers in and ultimate purchasers of candy are attracted by respondent's said method and manner of packing said candy and by the element of chance involved in the sale thereof in the manner above described, and are thereby induced to purchase said candy so packed and sold by respondent in preference to candy offered for sale and sold by said competitors of respondent who do not use the same or equivalent methods. The use of said method by respondent has the tendency and capacity, because of said game of chance, to divert to respondent trade and custom from its said competitors who do not use the same or an equivalent method; to exclude from said candy trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or an equivalent method because the same is unlawful; to lessen competition in said candy trade and to tend to create a monopoly of said candy trade in respondent and such other distributors of candy as use the same or an equivalent method; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefit of free competition in said candy trade. The use of said method by the respondent has the tendency and capacity to eliminate from said candy trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said method or an equivalent method.

PAR. 6. Many of said competitors of respondent are unwilling to adopt and use said method or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win something by chance, or any other method that is contrary to public policy.

PAR. 7. The Commission further finds that the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of assortments of candy so packed and assembled as to enable retail dealers, without alteration, addition, or rearrangement, to resell the same to the consuming public by lot or chance, is contrary to public policy.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Maple City Candy Company, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer of respondent, in which answer respondent admits all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and states that it waives hearing on the charges set forth in said complaint and consents that, without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon it findings as to the facts and conclusion and an order to cease and desist from the violations of law charged in the complaint; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That respondent, Maple City Candy Company, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce of candy, do cease and desist from:

1. Selling and distributing to wholesale dealers and jobbers for resale to retail dealers candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made, or are designed to be made, by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

2. Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers assortments of candy which are used, or which are designed to be used, without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy contained in said assortments to the public.

3. Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers a device commonly called a "pushcard," either with assortments of candy or separately, for use, or which is designed to be used, in the sale and distribution of said candy to the purchasing public.

It is further ordered, That the respondent herein shall, within 30 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

MEMORANDUM

The Commission, as of April 20, 1937, made substantially similar findings and order in the case of WINIFRED SORENSON AND EDWARD BEALES, TRADING AS SORENSON-BEALES CANDY COMPANY, Docket 3056, in which complaint issued as of Feb. 12, 1937, and in which said respondents, as found, sold to their wholesale dealer and jobber customers two push card assortments for resale by said wholesalers' and jobbers' retail dealer-vendees by game of chance, as set forth in the principal case, namely (a) plan under which purchaser received, in addition to the bar of candy for his 5¢, additional or larger

IN THE MATTER OF

ZION HOLY SPIRITUAL MISSION, AND EUSTACE N. FRENCH, DOING BUSINESS THROUGH ZION HOLY SPIRITUAL MISSION AND UNDER TRADE NAME OF ZION HOLY SPIRITUAL MISSION LABORATORIES

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2963. Complaint, Oct. 31, 1936—Decision, Apr. 21, 1937

Where a corporation and an individual, who did business through it and under a trade name including corporate name of the other and word "Laboratories," engaged in sale of medicines under trade name "Bry-O-Lyn"—

Represented, in labels upon their said products and other advertising matter published and distributed in the various States, that they operated a laboratory or laboratories in which the medicines offered for sale and sold by them were manufactured, and that said medicines were made by them, facts being that they did not own any such laboratory or laboratories or any interest in any manufacturing establishment from which their products were obtained, but medicines offered and sold by them under the aforesaid trade name were made and compounded by pharmaceutical laboratories in which they had no interest whatsoever, and were sold to them in regular course of trade;

With tendency and capacity to deceive and mislead substantial portions of purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and with result that consuming public, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs, thus engendered, was persuaded to purchase a substantial volume of its said products, and trade was unfairly diverted to them from competitors engaged in selling commodities of the same kind and nature, and who truthfully advertise and represent the character, quality and source of their said products; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Zion Holy Spiritual Mission, an Illinois corporation, and Eustace N. French, an individual, doing business through the Zion Holy Spiritual Mission and under the trade name of Zion Holy Spiritual Mission Laboratories, Chicago, Ill., hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondents, Zion Holy Spiritual Mission, a corporation organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, and Eustace N. French, an individual doing business through the Zion Holy Spiritual Mission and under the trade name of Zion Holy Mission Laboratories, and having a place of business at 3338 South State Street, Chicago, Ill., are now, and for several years last past have been, engaged in the sale and distribution of correspondence courses in spiritual development, magic and mysticism, success seals, good luck coins, talismen, books, and medicines, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the course of sale and distribution of the aforesaid articles cause the same to be transported into and through the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. The respondents, in the sale and distribution of the aforesaid products, have been and are in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution, in interstate commerce, of similar and like products and articles and of products and articles to be used for the same and similar purposes.

PAR. 3. In the course of sale of the aforesaid articles and products, the respondents cause statements and representations to be made in advertisements, pamphlets, circulars, and other printed matter, which said advertisements or printed matter are published or distributed in the various States of the United States, to the following effect, gist, or meaning:

1. That respondent, Eustace N. French, is an ordained minister of the Spiritualist church;

2. That respondent, Eustace N. French, is a graduate of a Theological Seminary of the Spiritualist Church;

3. That respondent, Eustace N. French, has received a degree or degrees from the Theological Seminary entitling him to use the titles "Doctor" or "Reverend Doctor," as a prefix to his name or signature, or to use the initials "B. D." or "D. D." after his name or signature;

4. That respondents maintain and operate a laboratory or laboratories in which the aforesaid products or articles are manufactured, produced, or developed;

5. That the respondents' correspondence courses will give complete instructions in Magical Spiritual Arts and Science and are complete courses in religious, educational, and spiritual development based on the Bible;

6. That respondents' courses will equip students to give readings, healings, blessings, and spiritual advice, and will enable its students to make and use spiritual lucky goods, such as holy oils, incense, talismen, seals, herbs, remedies, etc.;

7. That respondents will give legal protection to graduates in these courses to work in any State they desire and will make its students independent by giving them a life trade or business;

8. That students of respondents' courses will begin making money immediately upon beginning the course and will earn many times the price of the course before they have finished the same;

9. That respondents' correspondence courses will enable one to have good friends, make money, and be wise;

10. That respondents' "success seals" will enable one to obtain what he wants, to be successful in love and marriage, to win in all games, to conquer enemies, and to have power and influence over all things;

11. That respondents' "success seals" are products of the Orient;

12. That respondents' "success seals" are reproduced on genuine imported parchment paper made from the skin of lambs and are based on the 6th and 7th Books of Moses:

13. That respondents' "Book of Power" will unfold the mystic records of all the secrets of the ages and enable one to know the particular day and hour to do anything he desires, gain control of and bend the will of enemies, regain lost love, bring happiness to broken homes, regain youth and vigor, understand motives, of people around him and determine machinations of their minds, to choose words according to ancient holy methods of the Old Cuthian and Chaldean forms, to chant one's desires in the silent tongue so that one may be reached anywhere, to make people walk in their sleep and do one's bidding;

14. That respondents are the first to reveal the secrets of the "Book of Powers"; that the regular price of the said "Book of Power" is $2.00, but that the special coupon accompanying said representation will entitle one to said book for an additional dollar;

15. That respondents' book "The Truth About Candles" discloses the secrets of the candle, other startling facts, and will make one master of his own destiny and make dreams come true; that the regular price of respondents' book "The Truth About Candles" is $3.00, but that the special coupon accompanying said representation will entitle one to said book for an additional $2.00;

Complaint

24 F. T. C.

16. That knowledge gained from respondents' book "How to Make Your Dreams Come True" will make dreams come true and enable one to dream winning numbers, etc.; that the regular price of respondents' book "How to Make Your Dreams Come True" is $2.00, but that the special coupon accompanying said representation will entitle one to said book for an additional dollar;

17. That respondents' publication "The Ten Lost Books of Moses" is the key to knowledge and will disclose "The Mystery of Sinai—Things Never Told Before" and is the Fountain of Wisdom and the Way to All Power;

18. That respondents' Bry-O-Lyn is an effective remedy for chronic constipation and indigestion and is a product of the laboratory or laboratories of respondents.

PAR. 4. All of the representations and statements made by the respondents in the manner indicated in paragraph 3 hereof are false and untrue and have no foundation in fact. Respondent Eustace N. French is not an ordained minister of the Spiritualist Church, is not a graduate of a Theological Seminary of said Church, and has received no degree or degrees from any Theological Seminary entitling him to use the titles hereinabove indicated. Respondents do not maintain or operate any laboratory in which any of their products are manufactured or produced. Respondents' various courses of instruction and books do not give complete instructions in magical spiritual arts, are not complete courses in educational, religious and spiritual development, and do not equip the purchasers thereof with the powers to accomplish the many results claimed from a purchase of said courses of instruction or books. Respondents' "Success Seals" will not accomplish the results claimed and are not products of the Orient. The knowledge gained from a study of the various books sold by the respondents will not enable the purchasers thereof to acquire the powers claimed and the regular price of said books is not as claimed by the respondents. The regular price of said books is, in truth and in fact, the price at which they are sold under the respondents' so-called "special sale price." Respondents' "Bry-O-Lyn" is not an effective remedy for chronic constipation and indigestion and is not made in laboratories of respondents, but is, in truth and in fact, made and compounded by pharmaceutical laboratories and sold to the respondents in the regular course of trade.

PAR. 5. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondents, as hereinabove set out, in their advertising in newspapers and otherwise, in offering for sale and in selling their several products was, and is calculated to, and had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. As a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced, as aforesaid, the consuming public has purchased a substantial volume of respondents' several products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondents from competitors engaged in selling products and articles of the same kind and nature in commerce, as hereinabove set out, and who truthfully advertise and represent the character and quality of their said products. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been, and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce, as hereinabove set out.

PAR. 6. The aforementioned methods, acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts, and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

tion thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Zion Holy Spiritual Mission, is a corporation organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois. The respondent, Eustace N. French, is an individual doing business through the Zion Holy Spiritual Mission and under the trade name of Zion Holy Spiritual Mission Laboratories. All of the aforesaid respondents have their principal place of business located at 3338 South State Street, Chicago, Ill., and are now and for several years last past have been engaged in the sale of medicines under the trade name, "BRY-O-LYN." The respondents cause their medicines when sold to be transported from their place of business in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of Illinois.

PAR. 2. There are other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States of similar and like medicines, or medicines to be used for the same and similar purposes, and with such individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations the respondents have been and are in competition in such commerce.

PAR. 3. In the course of sale of the aforesaid products, the respondents cause statements and representations to be made upon labels placed on products and other advertising matter which are published and distributed in the various States of the United States to the effect that the respondents operate a laboratory or laboratories in which the medicines offered for sale and sold are manufactured, and that the medicines are manufactured by respondents.

PAR. 4. The respondents do not own, operate, or maintain a laboratory or laboratories in which the medicines are manufactured nor do they own any interest in any manufacturing establishment from which the products are obtained. The medicines offered for sale and sold by respondents under the trade name, "BRY-O-LYN", are made and compounded by pharmaceutical laboratories in which the respondents have no interest whatsoever and are sold to the respondents in the regular course of trade.

The representations and statements made by respondents to the effect and meaning of those set forth in paragraph 3 above are calculated to and have the tendency and capacity to deceive and mislead substantial portions of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true. As a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs so induced, the consuming public is persuaded to purchase a substantial volume of respondents' products with the attendant result that trade is unfairly diverted to respondents from competitors engaged in selling commodities of the same kind and nature in commerce as hereinbefore set out, who truthfully advertise and represent the character, quality and source of their said products. Substantial injury is thereby done by respondents to competition in commerce as hereinabove set forth.

Order

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Zion Holy Spiritual Mission and Eustace N. French, doing business under the trade name, Zion Holy Spiritual Mission Laboratories, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents, Zion Holy Spiritual Mission, a corporation, and its officers, and Eustace N. French, doing business through the Zion Holy Spiritual Mission and under the trade name, Zion Holy Spiritual Mission Laboratories, or under any other trade name, their respective representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of their medicine products in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Order

24 F. T. C.

Representing, through the use of the words "Laboratories" and "Manufacturers" or any other word or words of similar import and effect, alone or in conjunction with other words, or through any other means, device, or in any manner, that they compound, make, or manufacture said medicine products until and unless they actually own and operate or directly and absolutely control a laboratory or plant wherein such products are made.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF OLSON RUG COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2976. Complaint, Nov. 9, 1936—Decision, Apr. 21, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture, distribution, and sale of rugs—

Represented and implied, through advertisements in periodicals of general circulation, and through letters of solicitation, price lists, sample books, pamphlets, folders, and other advertising literature, and through its catalogs and order blanks, that the rugs sold by it were made from the identical materials sent in to it by each customer, together with other materials furnished by it, such as new wool, through such statements, among others, as “* * * you too will find it fascinating to send away a bundle of your worn carpets, rugs, clothing, and other woollens and get back beautiful deep piled rugs that will win the praise of your family and friends,” “Strange but true, one may send old carpets, rugs, or clothing and have them converted into new rugs of any color and design,” “By the magic which turns your old wool into new rugs— * * ,” “ * * woven from old wool which you collect and send in,” and “Please make the Olson rugs as ordered below”;

Facts being that old materials sent in to it by customers are not segregated and used in the manufacture of a rug to fill the specific order of the particular customers, but are commingled with other materials sent in by others and made into rugs to be carried in stock for sales to other purchasers, and it fills orders sent in with old materials with rugs already in stock and made from such materials previously sent in by other customers, or with rugs woven to special order of customers from old materials previously sent in by others, and does not make a practice of manufacturing rugs sent to its respective purchasers from the specific materials sent in by them;

With capacity and tendency to cause a portion of the purchasing public to form the erroneous and mistaken impression and belief that when they sent in old materials and ordered rugs from it said products would be made in part from specific materials sent in, and to cause them to purchase its said rugs on account of such belief, and with result that trade was thereby diverted to it from competitors, including those who make, distribute, and sell rugs made, in part at least, from specific materials sent in to them by customers, and those who do not make the rugs sold to customers from such materials sent in by the respective customers, but from other materials, and who have not made use of any statements or representations calculated to cause purchasers to form erroneous impression and belief that their respective products are made from materials other than those from which they are actually made; to the injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Olson Rug Company, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Olson Rug Company, is a corporation, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois with its principal office and place of business located at 2800 North Crawford Avenue, city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is now, and has been for a number of years, engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling rugs, in commerce as herein set out.

PAR. 2. Respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said rugs, when sold by it, to be transported from its office and principal place of business in the State of Illinois to the respective purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. For more than one year last past, the respondent has maintained a constant current of trade in the rugs manufactured, distributed, and sold by it, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is now, and has been for many years, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling rugs, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course of the operation of said business, and for the purpose of inducing customers and prospective customers to purchase said rugs, respondent has, from time to time, caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers, magazines, and periodicals of general circulation throughout the United States and has printed and circulated throughout the several States to said customers and prospective customers, through the United States mails and otherwise, letters of solicitation, price-lists, sample books, pamphlets, folders, and other advertising literature, in which it has caused its corporate name, Olson Rug Company, to be prominently and conspicuously displayed, together with such statements as the following:

Send your materials just as they are. You may order any rug pictured in this book, regardless of the colors in your old materials. It does not matter whether the material you send is all old carpets or rugs or a part of it is clothing. Don't hesitate to send even badly worn materials. There is more good material in them than you can imagine.

I am sure you too will find it fascinating to send away a bundle of your worn carpets, rugs, clothing and other woolens and get back beautiful deep piled rugs that will win the praise of your family and friends.

Within a week, we will weave Olson rugs in any of the fashionable, new plain or two-tone colors, or exquisite oriental or early American patterns shown in this book regardless of the color of your materials.

Though all illustrations in this book are reproduced from actual color photographs by the finest printing process known, I guarantee that the rugs we make for you will be even richer in character.

In its catalogue, respondent has also made use of statements attributed to editorial writers for various magazines. Through the use of these statements in its catalogue, it vouches for the correctness of the statements claimed to have been made by such editors. These statements are as follows:

Strange but true, one may send old carpets, rugs or clothing and have them converted into new rugs of any color and design.

By the magic which turns your old wool into new rugs—this Persian type rug comes from the looms of the Olson Rug Company.

Think of being able to use your old carpets and materials to create a rug like this.

For it (the rug) is one of those amazing manufactured products woven from old wool which you collect and send in.

On its order blanks, is the following language:

Gentlemen: Please make the Olson rugs as ordered below.

All of said statements, together with other similar statements purport to be descriptive of respondent's business and the product manufactured and sold by it. In the various catalogues, circulars, and pamphlets distributed as aforesaid by the respondent, there appear numerous statements, including those hereinabove set out, wherein the respondent represents, either directly or through implication, that the rugs which it sells are made on the special order of the customer and are made from the identical materials sent in to it by each customer, together with other materials, such as new wool furnished by it.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, when old materials are sent in to the respondent by customers, these identical materials are not segregated and used in the manufacture of a rug to fill the specific order of said customer, but are commingled with other materials sent in by other customers and made into rugs to be carried in stock for sales to other purchasers. When customers send in old materials and order rugs to be made for them, the respondent supplies said customer with rugs already carried in stock which have been made from old materials previously sent in by other customers. The respondent does not make a practice of manufacturing the rugs which are sent to the respective purchasers from the specific materials sent in by said purchasers.

PAR. 6. Many of respondent's competitors, who manufacture, distribute, and sell rugs, truthfully represent the materials from which said rugs are made and when said competitors represent that the rugs sold by them will be made in part from the customers' own materials, they actually make said rugs in compliance with said representation.

PAR. 7. The false and misleading representations made by the respondent, as hereinabove set out, in the offering for sale and sale of its rugs were, and are, calculated to, and had, and now have, a capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that when they send in old materials and order rugs from the respondent, that said rugs will be made, in part, from the specific materials sent in, and into the purchase of respondent's rugs on account of the erroneous beliefs induced as aforesaid. As a result thereof, trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling rugs made from old materials, who truthfully advertise and represent the nature and character of their respective businesses and of their respective products. As a consequence thereof, substantial injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondent have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors as aforesaid, and constitute unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

mission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on November 9, 1936 issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Olson Rug Company, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer, briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Olson Rug Company, is a corporation, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois with its principal office and place of business located at 2800 North Crawford Avenue, city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent is now, and has been for a number of years, engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, and selling rugs, in commerce as herein set out.

PAR. 2. Respondent, being engaged in business as aforesaid, causes said rugs, when sold by it, to be transported from its office and principal place of business in the State of Illinois to the respective purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. For more than one year last past, the respondent has maintained a constant current of trade in the rugs manufactured, distributed, and sold by it, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent is now, and has been for many years, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling rugs, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Findings

24 F. T. C.

PAR. 4. In the course of the operation of said business, and for the purpose of inducing customers and prospective customers to purchase said rugs, respondent has, from time to time, caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers, magazines and periodicals of general circulation throughout the United States and has printed and circulated throughout the several States to said customers and prospective customers, through the United States mails and otherwise, letters of solicitation, price-lists, sample books, pamphlets, folders, and other advertising literature, in which it has caused its corporate name, Olson Rug Company, to be prominently and conspicuously displayed, together with such statements as the following:

Though all illustrations in this book are reproduced from actual color photographs by the finest printing process known, I guarantee that the rugs we make for you will be even richer in character.

In its catalogue, respondent has also made use of statements attributed to editorial writers for various magazines. Through the use of these statements in its catalogue, it vouches for the correctness of the statements claimed to have been made by such editors. These statements are as follows:

Strange but true, one may send old carpets, rugs or clothing and have them converted into new rugs of any color and design.

By the magic which turns your old wool into new rugs—this Persian type rug comes from the looms of the Olson Rug Company.

Think of being able to use your old carpets and materials to create a rug like this.

For it (the rug) is one of those amazing manufactured products woven from old wool which you collect and send in.

On its order blanks, is the following language:

Gentlemen: Please make the Olson rugs as ordered below.

All of said statements, together with other similar statements, purport to be descriptive of respondent's business and the product manufactured and sold by it. In the various catalogues, circulars, and pamphlets distributed, as aforesaid, by the respondent, there appear statements, including those hereinabove set out, which have the capacity and tendency to cause a portion of the purchasing public to form the mistaken belief that the rugs which the respondent sells are made from the identical materials sent in to it by each customer together with other materials, such as new wool, furnished by it.

PAR. 5. When old materials are sent in to the respondent by customers, these identical materials are not segregated and used in the manufacture of a rug to fill the specific order of said customers but are commingled with other materials sent in by other customers and made into rugs to be carried in stock for sales to other purchasers. When customers send in old materials and order rugs to be made from them, the respondent either supplies said customers with rugs already carried in stock which have been made from old materials previously sent in by other customers, or with rugs woven to the special order of said customers from old materials previously sent in by other customers. The respondent does not make a practice of manufacturing the rugs which are sent to its respective purchasers from the specific materials sent in by said customers.

PAR. 6. There are among respondent's competitors those who manufacture, distribute, and sell rugs made, in part at least, from the specific materials which have been sent in to them by customers. There are also among respondent's competitors others who do not manufacture the rugs which they sell to their customers from the specific materials sent in by the respective customers but manufacture said rugs from other materials. The aforesaid competitors have not made use of any statements or representations that have the capacity and tendency to cause purchasers to form the erroneous impression and belief that their respective products are made from materials other than those from which they are actually made.

PAR. 7. The use by the respondent of the statements and representations hereinabove set out, in the offering for sale and sale of its rugs had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to cause a portion of the purchasing public to form the erroneous and mistaken impression and belief that when they send in old materials and order rugs from the respondent that said rugs will be made, in part, from the specific materials sent in, and to cause them to purchase respondent's rugs on account of such belief. As a result thereof, trade has been diverted to the respondent from those competitors likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing rugs described in paragraph 6 hereof. As a consequence thereof, injury has been, and is now being, done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Order

24 F. T. C.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Olson Rug Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Olson Rug Company, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of rugs in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, directly or through implication, that said rugs will be made, in whole or in part, from the specific materials sent in to it by the respective customers ordering said rugs;

2. Using in its advertising, or in any other manner, language descriptive of its product which has the capacity and tendency to cause members of the purchasing public to form the impression or belief that in sending materials to the respondent and ordering rugs, they will receive rugs made, in whole or in part, from the identical materials sent in by each of them.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 90 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF PEDODYNE COMPANY, INC., ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
 OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3048. Complaint, Feb. 4, 1937—Decision, Apr. 21, 1937

Where a corporation and three individuals, officers and owners thereof and directors and in control of its sales policies and business operations, engaged in the sale and distribution, under name "Pedodyne," of a product sold and recommended as a bunion treatment; in widely advertising their said product in newspapers and periodicals of general circulation throughout the States, and in advertising folders, literature, circular letters and other advertising matter printed and circulated throughout the several States to customers and prospective customers—

- (a) Represented that said product would penetrate beneath the outer skin and give permanent results, and would banish, cure, or heal bunions and give perfect foot comfort and end torture or misery thereof and soothe and heal the instant used, through such statements, among others, as "BUNION TORTURE needless. Pain stops almost instantly. * * *." " * * * penetrates to the tender, inflamed, diseased tissue," etc., "You want PERMANENT results. You want ENTIRE FREEDOM and complete foot comfort. You want to BANISH the misery for good," etc.;
- (b) Represented that said "Pedodyne" was a scientific product and a recent discovery, or improvement of a scientific discovery, through such statements as "For many years the true nature of bunions was not understood. Now Science has conquered," and "PEDODYNE is Scientific"; and
- (c) Represented that competing products were of no value in treatment of bunions, through such statements as "Perhaps you have tried other methods—pads, plasters, appliances of one type or another—without satisfactory results. It is not surprising if you have failed to get the relief you sought," "How can you expect some little pad or appliance that does not penetrate beneath the outer skin to heal your bunion? I say that I do not believe that it can be done that way";

Facts being that, while product in question would, in numerous cases, temporarily relieve pain and torture caused from bunions and do so with reasonable promptness and, absent any bone deformity, aid in reducing the swelling and inflammation, it would not banish, cure or heal such ailments or conditions, but efficacy thereof was limited to temporary relief of pains and discomforts caused thereby, formula in question had been used for many years in treating such ailments and conditions and could not correctly be termed a recent discovery nor an improvement of a scientific discovery, product would not penetrate to the affected parts of the foot in cases of such conditions, and there were other products on the market sold and recommended for treatment of bunions, of which some were helpful in relieving pains caused thereby, and some in correction thereof; and

- (d) Represented to purchasing public, through circulars, letters, and literature issued and mailed to prospective purchasers, that they were making a "special offer" to particular person thus contacted, and that price quoted

24 F. T. C.

In the literature was a special one, facts being such "special offers" pointed out in their follow-up letters and literature were not thus limited, but were made indiscriminately to any prospective purchaser, and price quoted was the regular selling price of the product;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all said representations were true, and into buying a substantial volume of their said product on account of such beliefs, thus induced, and with result that trade was diverted to them from those likewise engaged in sale and distribution of products prepared, designed, intended and sold for substantially same purpose and use for which their said product was advertised and sold, and who truthfully advertised the same and the efficacy thereof; to the injury of competitors and commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Pedodyne Company, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business located in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent, George J. Katz, is president and general manager of Pedodyne Company, Inc. Respondent, Rose M. Katz, is vice president and treasurer of Pedodyne Company, Inc. Respondent, Robert L. Keats, also known as Robert L. Katz, is the secretary of Pedodyne Company, Inc. The individual respondents own all the stock of Pedodyne Company, Inc., and direct and control its sales policies and business operations. The respondents are now, and have been for several years past, engaged in the sale and distribution of a preparation for the treatment of bunions known as "Pedodyne." The respondents cause said product, when sold, to be shipped and transported in interstate commerce from their place of business located in the State of Illinois to purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. They now maintain, and have at all times mentioned herein maintained, a constant current of trade in said product in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business, are now, and at all times herein referred to have been, in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of other preparations and appliances, prepared, designed, manufactured, advertised, and sold as treatments for bunions, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. Respondents, in the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, and for the purpose of inducing individuals to purchase said bunion treatment, "Pedodyne," have caused advertisements to be inserted in newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals of general circulation throughout the United States, and have printed and circulated throughout the several States of the United States, through the United States mail and otherwise, to customers and prospective customers, certain advertising folders and literature, circular letters and other advertising matter, in all of which the respondents have caused the firm name and the name of the product to be prominently and conspicuously displayed and in which the following statements are made:

A. BUNION TORTURE needless. Pain stops almost instantly. The swelling and inflammation is so quickly reduced you can wear smaller, neater shoes with ease.

Now then, if you actually want to get rid of this misery, if you want to enjoy perfect foot ease, this is your opportunity.

The Most Torturing Bunions Surrender to Pedodyne.

If you can positively get rid of your bunion irritation and humiliation, do so by all means. Thousands say that PEDODYNE will do this for you, thereby increasing your happiness and your efficiency!

PEDODYNE is a real friend to every person who has bunions—just starting or of longer standing.

You want PERMANENT results. You want ENTIRE FREEDOM and complete foot comfort. You want to BANISH the misery for good.

For many years the true nature of bunions was not understood. Now Science has conquered.

PEDODYNE is Scientific.

As soon as PEDODYNE comes in contact with the bunion it quickly softens the hard, dead outer epidermis and penetrates to the tender, inflamed, diseased tissue and bursal sac. * *

Complaint

24 F. T. C.

B. Permitted to go untreated, or relieved through clumsy appliances or by slitting your shoes to "relieve the pressure", your bunion may cause serious foot disorders.

Perhaps you have tried other methods—pads, plasters, appliances of one type or another—without satisfactory results. It is not surprising if you have failed to get the relief you sought.

How can you expect some little pad or appliance that does not penetrate beneath the outer skin to heal your bunion? I say that I do not believe that it can be done that way.

C. Respondents further state, by way of purporting to quote alleged testimonials, that:

My bunions are showing such rapid improvement that it seems almost a miracle.

I am very happy to inform you your Pedodyne treatment has acted like magic.

All of said statements, together with many other similar statements appearing in respondents' advertising and literature, purport to be descriptive of respondents' product "Pedodyne." In all of respondents' advertising matter and literature the respondents represent, through the statements herein set out and through other statements of like import and effect, that:

1. Pedodyne will end bunion torture;
2. Pedodyne will stop pain caused from bunions almost instantly;
3. Pedodyne will quickly reduce swelling and inflammation caused by bunions;
4. Pedodyne will rid the user of misery caused by bunions;
5. Pedodyne will give perfect foot comfort;
6. Pedodyne will soothe and heal the first instant it is used;
7. Pedodyne will give permanent results;
8. Pedodyne will banish, cure and heal bunions;
9. Pedodyne is superior to other bunion treatments;
10. Pedodyne is a scientific product, and that it is a recent discovery or an improvement of a scientific discovery;
11. Pedodyne is penetrative;
12. Other competing products are of no value in the treatment of bunions.

PAR. 4. The claims and representations made by the respondents with respect to the therapeutic value of the product, Pedodyne, are grossly exaggerated, false, and misleading. In truth and in fact respondents' product, Pedodyne, will not end bunion torture. It will not stop pain caused from bunions almost instantly. It will not quickly reduce swelling and inflammation. It will not rid the user of the pain and misery caused from bunions. It will not give perfect foot comfort. It will not soothe and heal the first instant it is used. It will not give permanent results. It will not banish, cure, or heal bunions. It will not, without danger, enable the user to wear smaller shoes. It will not penetrate, neither is it a new or improved scientific treatment. In addition, said claims and representations serve to falsely disparage bunion treatments prepared and marketed by respondents' competitors in that said statements falsely represent that the products sold by respondents' competitors are of no value as bunion treatments. In truth and in fact the products sold by respondents' competitors are of some value as bunion treatments in that they will relieve pain and assist in correcting the trouble caused by certain types of bunions.

PAR. 5. The respondents further represent to prospective purchasers, through a series of letters and literature, that the respondents are making special reduced prices to the prospect and that the offer is for a limited time only. The truth is that the respondents make the representations and concessions indiscriminately to prospective purchasers and the time of acceptance is without limitation.

PAR. 6. There are among respondents' competitors many who manufacture, distribute and sell to the purchasing public, appliances and treatments for bunions, who in no way misrepresent the quality, efficacy, or therapeutic value of their product and who do not falsely disparage the products manufactured and sold by their competitors; and who do not falsely represent that their products are being sold at special prices for limited periods of time when such is not the case.

PAR. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondents in designating and describing the product, "Pedodyne," and its effectiveness, as hereinabove set out, in offering for sale and selling said product were, and are, calculated to, and had, and now have, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said claims and representations are true, and into the further erroneous belief that the appliances and preparations devised, manufactured, and sold by respondents' competitors are inferior in quality and less effective than respondents' product. Further, as a direct consequence of said mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by the acts and representations as hereinabove set out, a substantial number of the consuming public has purchased a substantial amount of respondents' product with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondents from competitors likewise engaged in selling and distributing appliances and preparations for the treatment of bunions and who do not misrepresent the price, quality, and efficacy of their products. As a result of the unfair acts and false and misleading representations of the respondents, injury has been, and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The above and foregoing acts, practices and representations of the respondents have been and are all to the prejudice and injury of the public and respondents' competitors, and have been and are unfair methods of competition in commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on February 4, 1937, issued, and on February 5, 1937, served, its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Pedodyne Company, Inc., a corporation, and George J. Katz, Rose M. Katz, and Robert L. Keats, also known as Robert L. Katz individually and as officers of the Pedodyne Company, Inc., charging respondents with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by an order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substituted answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and the substituted answer, briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Pedodyne Company, Inc. is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal place of business located in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Respondent George J. Katz is president and general manager of Pedodyne, Inc. Respondent Rose M. Katz is vice president and treasurer of Pedodyne Company, Inc. Respondent Robert L. Keats, also known as Robert L. Katz, is secretary of Pedodyne Company, Inc. The individual respondents own all the capital stock of the respondent corporation and direct and control its sales policies and business operation.

The respondents have been engaged for several years in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia of a product designated "Pedodyne." The product designated "Pedodyne" is sold and recommended as a bunion treatment. Respondents caused said product, when sold, to be shipped from their place of business in Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof located at various points in the States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. Respondents do now and have for several years last past maintained a constant current of trade in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia in the product "Pedodyne."

There are likewise other corporations, firms, individuals, and partnerships engaged in selling and distributing in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia of other preparations and appliances sold and recommended as bunion treatments. Respondents are now and have been in active substantial competition with these other corporations, firms, individuals, and partnerships in the sale of their respective products.

PAR. 2. For the purpose of inducing the purchase of the product "Pedodyne" respondents have widely advertised said product in advertisements inserted in newspapers and magazines of general circulation throughout the United States. Respondents have also printed and circulated throughout the several States of the United States to customers and prospective customers advertising folders, literature, circular letters, and other advertising matter.

In all of the advertisements and advertising matter hereinabove mentioned the respondents have caused the corporate name and name of the product "Pedodyne" to be prominently and conspicuously displayed, together with such statements as:

BUNION TORTURE needless. Pain stops almost instantly. The swelling and inflammation is so quickly reduced you can wear smaller, neater shoes with ease.

Now then, if you actually want to get rid of this misery, if you want to enjoy perfect foot ease, this is your opportunity.

The Most Torturing Bunions Surrender to Pedodyne.

If you can positively get rid of your bunion irritation and humiliation, do so by all means. Thousands say that PEDODYNE will do this for you, thereby increasing your happiness and your efficiency!

PEDODYNE is a real friend to every person who has bunions—Just starting or of longer standing.

Findings

24 F. T. C.

You want PERMANENT results. You want ENTIRE FREEDOM and complete foot comfort. You want to BANISH the misery for good.

For many years the true nature of bunions was not understood. Now Science has conquered.

PEDODYNE is Scientific.

As soon as PEDODYNE comes in contact with the bunion it quickly softens the hard, dead outer epidermis and penetrates to the tender, inflamed, diseased tissue and bursal sac, * * *

Permitted to go untreated, or relieved through clumsy appliances or by slitting your shoes to "relieve the pressure", your bunion may cause serious foot disorders.

Perhaps you have tried other methods—pads, plasters, appliances of one type or another—without satisfactory results. It is not surprising if you have failed to get the relief you sought.

How can you expect some little pad or appliance that does not penetrate beneath the outer skin to heal your bunion? I say that I do not believe that it can be done that way.

My bunions are showing such rapid improvement that it seems almost a miracle.

I am very happy to inform you your Pedodyne treatment has acted like magic.

The statements above set out, together, with many similar statements appearing in respondents' advertising literature purport to be descriptive of respondents' product. Through these statements and other statements of like import and effect the respondents represent that (1) Pedodyne will end bunion torture; (2) Pedodyne will stop pain caused from bunions almost instantly; (3) Pedodyne will quickly reduce swelling and inflammation caused by bunions; (4) Pedodyne will rid the user of misery caused by bunions; (5) Pedodyne will give perfect foot comfort; (6) Pedodyne will soothe and heal the instant it is used; (7) Pedodyne will give permanent results; (8) Pedodyne will banish, cure and heal bunions; (9) Pedodyne is superior to other bunion treatments; (10) Pedodyne is a scientific product, and that it is a recent discovery or an improvement of a scientific discovery; (11) Pedodyne penetrates beneath the outer skin; and (12) Other competing products are of no value in the treatment of bunions.

PAR. 3. In truth and in fact it is generally understood and believed by the public that any enlargement of or on the metatarsophalangeal joint, whether bursitis or hallux valgus, is a bunion. The product designated "Pedodyne" will, in numerous cases, temporarily relieve the pain and torture caused from bunions and will do so with reasonable promptness, and where there is no bone deformity Pedodyne will aid in reducing the swelling and inflammation. The product Pedodyne will not banish, cure, or heal bunions, but its efficacy is limited to temporary relief of pains and discomforts caused by bunions. The Pedodyne formula has been used for many years in treating bunions and it cannot be correctly termed a recent discovery; neither is it an improvement of a scientific discovery. Pedodyne is not penetrative in a sense meaning it will penetrate to the affected parts of the foot in cases of bunions. There are other products on the market which are sold and recommended for use in treating bunions and some of said products are helpful in relieving pains caused by bunions and some are helpful in the correction of bunions.

PAR. 4. Further the respondents represent to the purchasing public by issuing and mailing to prospective purchasers circular letters and literature that the respondents are making a "special offer" to the particular person so contacted and that the price quoted in the literature is a special price.

In truth and in fact, the special offers pointed out in respondents' follow-up letters and literature are not limited to the one to whom the letter is addressed but such offers are made indiscriminately to any prospective purchaser and the price quoted is the regular selling price of said product.

PAR. 5. There are among respondents' competitors many who sell and distribute preparations and appliances as bunion treatments who do not misrepresent the quality or character of their respective product or its efficacy in treating bunions.

PAR. 6. The various statements and misrepresentations made by respondents in describing the product "Pedodyne" and the effectiveness of said product when used had, and now have, a capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true and into the purchase of a substantial volume of respondents' product on account of such beliefs induced by the respondents' representations as above set out. As a result thereof, trade has been diverted to respondents from corporations, firms, individuals, and partnerships likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing their products prepared, designed, intended, and sold for substantially the same purpose and use for which the respondents' product is advertised and sold, and who truthfully advertise their products and the efficacy of their products when used. As a consequence thereof, injury has been and is now being done by respondents to competitors in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer filed herein on March 26, 1937, by respondents admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Pedodyne Company, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and George J. Katz, Rose M. Katz, and Robert L. Keats, also known as Robert L. Katz, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of Pedodyne in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That Pedodyne will banish, cure or heal bunions or give perfect foot comfort;
2. That Pedodyne will end bunion torture or rid the user of the misery caused by bunions;
3. That Pedodyne acts with other than reasonable promptness;
4. That Pedodyne will give permanent results;
5. That Pedodyne is scientific in a sense meaning that Pedodyne is a recent discovery or a recent improvement of a scientific discovery;
6. That Pedodyne will penetrate beneath the outer skin;
7. That competing products are of no value in the treatment of bunions;
8. That a stated price is the regular price, where periodic reductions are offered in follow-up form letters; or that the price stated is a special offer to the particular person contacted, where the offer is made indiscriminately to any prospective purchaser.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

LOUIS KIPILMAN, DOING BUSINESS AS MAJESTIC
LABORATORIES

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3080. Complaint, Mar. 17, 1937—Decision, Apr. 21, 1937

Where an individual engaged in the manufacture of a pharmaceutical preparation known as "Kipzeme Ointment," intended and designed to remedy and cure leg sores, eczema, and other skin diseases and kindred ailments, and in the sale thereof in substantial competition with others engaged in the manufacture of like and similar products and sale thereof among the various States and in the District of Columbia, including those who truthfully advertise and represent the nature, merit, and therapeutic value of their respective products, and those who do not advertise or otherwise represent that such products have merit or therapeutic value which they do not have—

Represented and implied, in advertisements of said "Kipzeme Ointment," in various newspapers, periodicals, and publications and in other forms of printed matter, and by radio broadcast and in other ways, that preparation in question was a competent and adequate remedy for leg sores, running sores, aggravated cases of eczema, and other skin eruptions and kindred ailments, through such statements as "Leg sores all healed," "Druggist Makes Discovery for OPEN LEG SORES, OLD Leg Sores, . . . running sores, aggravated eczema. Send for KIPZEME * * *," facts being said preparation does not heal all such sores and is not a competent and adequate remedy in cases of aggravated eczema or in the case of old leg sores, running sores, and other skin conditions, and representations in question, as respects nature and effect of said product, are exaggerated, misleading, and deceptive, and preparation, in many cases, will not accomplish results claimed therefor;

With capacity to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers into erroneous belief that such representations were true and into purchase of substantial quantities of product in question, on account of such belief induced as aforesaid, and with result that trade was unfairly diverted to him from competitors who do not similarly advertise their respective products; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Complaint

24 F. T. C.

Kipilman, an individual doing business under the trade name Majestic Laboratories, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Louis Kipilman, is an individual, having his principal office and place of business located at 128-04—111th Avenue, in the city of Richmond Hill, Long Island, in the State of New York. Respondent for more than one year last past has been and still is, engaged in the manufacture of a pharmaceutical preparation, known as "Kipzeme Ointment" intended and designed to remedy and cure leg sores, eczema, and other skin diseases and kindred ailments, and in offering said product for sale, and selling the same, in commerce between the State of New York and the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. When said product is sold, respondent transports or causes the same to be transported from his place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof located in States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. There has been for more than one year last past, and still is, a constant current of trade and commerce in said product so manufactured by respondent, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been in substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships, corporations, and firms engaged in the manufacture of like and similar products and in the sale thereof between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling his pharmaceutical preparation known as "Kipzeme Ointment," and for the purpose of creating a demand upon the part of the consuming public for said product, now causes and for more than one year last past has caused advertisements to be issued, published, and circulated to and among the general public of the United States in various periodicals and publications and in other forms of printed matter, and by radio broadcasting and in other ways. In said ways and by said means respondent makes and has made to the general public many unfair, false, and misleading statements with reference to the alleged therapeutic value of said product and its effect upon the users thereof, a portion of which are as follows:

Complaint

Leg sores all healed.

Druggist Makes Discovery for OPEN LEG SORES, OLD Leg Sores, . . . running sores, aggravated eczema. Send for KIPZEME, the ointment discovery which helped me heal up my 20-year-old leg sores after everything else had failed.

Relieves Itching Immediately.

For Eczema, Open Leg Sores, . . . KIPZEME OINTMENT.

PAR. 3. The statements and representations set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, and others similar thereto, have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of respondent's product into the belief:

(a) That Kipzeme heals all leg sores;

(b) That Kipzeme Ointment heals open leg sores, old leg sores, running sores, aggravated eczema;

(c) That Kipzeme Ointment is an adequate remedy in the treatment of old, aggravated leg sores, skin eruptions, eczema, and kindred ailments.

In truth and in fact, "Kipzeme Ointment" does not heal all leg sores, nor is it an adequate remedy in cases of aggravated eczema, or in the healing of old leg sores, running sores and other skin conditions. In truth and in fact, the representations made by the respondent with respect to the nature and effect of his pharmaceutical preparation when used are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and untrue, as said preparation will not accomplish in all cases the results claimed for it.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of the respondent in commerce as herein described, manufacturers of like and similar products who truthfully advertise and represent the nature, merit, and therapeutic value of their respective products. There are also among such competitors of the respondent, manufacturers, sellers, and distributors of like and similar products who do not advertise and otherwise represent that such products have merit or therapeutic value which they do not have.

PAR. 5. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent have the capacity to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous beliefs described in paragraph 3 hereof and into the purchase of respondent's product in such beliefs. Thereby trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from those competitors referred to in paragraph 4 in interstate commerce as herein described. As a consequence thereof, substantial injury is done by respondent to competition in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on March 17, 1937 issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Louis Kipilman, an individual doing business under the trade name of Majestic Laboratories, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On March 24, 1937, the respondent filed his answer, in which answer he admitted all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and stated that he waived hearing on the charges set forth in the said complaint, and stated that, without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission might issue and serve upon him findings as to the facts and conclusion and an order to cease and desist from the violations of law charged in the complaint. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the answer thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Louis Kipilman, is an individual, having his principal office and place of business located at 128-04 111th Avenue, Richmond Hill, Long Island, N. Y. Respondent for more than one year last past has been and still is, engaged in the manufacture of a pharmaceutical preparation, known as "Kipzeme Ointment," intended and designed to remedy and cure leg sores, eczema, and other skin diseases and kindred ailments. He offers for sale and sells this product in commerce between the State of New York and the several States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. When said product is sold, respondent transports or causes the same to be transported from his place of business in the State of New York to purchasers located in States of the United States other than the State of New York, and in the District of Columbia. There has been for more than one year last past, and still is, a constant current of trade and commerce in said product so manufactured by respondent, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been in substantial competition with other individuals and with partnerships, corporations, and firms engaged in the manufacture of like and similar products and in the sale thereof between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as aforesaid, the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling his pharmaceutical preparation known as "Kipzeme Ointment," and for the purpose of creating a demand upon the part of the consuming public for said product, now causes and for more than one year last past has caused advertisements to be issued, published, and circulated to and among the general public of the United States in various newspapers, periodicals, and publications and in other forms of printed matter, and by radio broadcasting and in other ways. In said ways and by said means, respondent makes and has made to the general public many unfair, misleading, and deceptive statements with reference to the alleged therapeutic value of said product and its effect upon the users thereof. Among other statements and representations thus made by the respondent are the following:

Leg sores all healed.

Druggist Makes Discovery for OPEN LEG SORES, OLD Leg Sores, . . . running sores, aggravated eczema. Send for KIPZEME, the ointment discovery which helped me heal up my 20-year-old leg sores after everything else had failed.

Relieves itching immediately.

For Eczema, Open Leg Sores, . . . KIPZEME OINTMENT.

PAR. 3. The statements and representations set forth in paragraph 2 hereof, and others similar thereto, have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers of respondent's product into the belief that said preparation is a competent and adequate remedy for leg sores, running sores, aggravated cases of eczema, and other skin eruptions and kindred ailments.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact, "Kipzeme Ointment" does not heal all leg sores, nor is it a competent and adequate remedy in cases of aggravated eczema, or in the healing of old leg sores, running sores and other skin conditions. The representations made by the respondent with respect to the nature and effect of his pharmaceutical preparation when used are exaggerated, misleading, and deceptive. As a matter of fact, said preparation will not accomplish in many cases the results claimed for it.

PAR. 5. There are among the competitors of the respondent in commerce as herein described, manufacturers of like and similar products who truthfully advertise and represent the nature, merit, and therapeutic value of their respective products. There are also among such competitors of the respondent, manufacturers, sellers, and distributors of like and similar products who do not advertise and otherwise represent that such products have merit or therapeutic value which they do not have.

PAR. 6. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent have the capacity to mislead and deceive purchasers and prospective purchasers into the erroneous belief that said representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondent's product on account of such belief induced as aforesaid. Thereby trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from competitors who do not similarly advertise their respective products. As a consequence thereof, substantial injury is done by respondent to competition in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent Louis Kipilman, an individual doing business under the trade name of Majestic Laboratories, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer filed on March 24, 1937, by respondent admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Louis Kipilman, as an individual, and doing business under the trade name of Majestic Laboratories, or under any other trade name, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of a pharmaceutical preparation now designated as "Kipzeme Ointment" or of a product of substantially the same ingredients or therapeutic effect sold under the name "Kipzeme Ointment" or under any other name, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That said preparation heals open leg sores, old leg sores, all leg sores, running sores, and aggravated cases of eczema;

2. That said preparation is a competent and adequate remedy or treatment for aggravated leg sores, skin eruptions, eczema, and kindred ailments;

and from making any other representations of similar tenor or import.

And it is hereby further ordered, That the said respondent shall within 60 days from the date of the service upon him of this order file with this Commission a report in writing setting forth the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

I. B. KLEINERT RUBBER COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2852. Complaint, June 26, 1936—Decision, Apr. 24, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture of various types of water-proof garments for women and children, including baby pants sold under trade name "SOFTEX," and in sale thereof in competition with others engaged in sale of similar products or products for same and similar purposes who truthfully represented the same—

Caused representations and statements to be made in advertising matter circulated and distributed in the various States, to the effect that its said products were absolutely free from latex or any other form of gum rubber and were rubberless, facts being they were not thus free or rubberless, but contained rubber in waist bands and in leg openings;

With tendency to deceive and mislead substantial portions of purchasing public into erroneous belief that such representations were true, and with the result, as a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs thus induced, that consuming public was persuaded to purchase substantial volume of its products, and trade was unfairly diverted to it from competitors engaged in selling products of same kind and nature in commerce and who truthfully advertised and represented the character and quality thereof, and means of deceiving consuming public was also placed in the hands of the retail purchaser by it in the labeling of its products as aforesaid; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Robert S. Hall and Mr. John J. Keenan, trial examiners.

Mr. John Darsey for the Commission.

Nordlinger, Riegelman & Cooper, of New York City, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that I. B. Kleinert Rubber Company, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is now using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 485 Fifth Avenue, in the city of New York, in said State. It is now, and for some time past has been, engaged in the manufacture of various types of waterproof garments for women and children, among which said products is a baby pant, which it offers for sale and sells under the trade mark "Softex," which products the respondent sells and has sold and distributed in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, causing the same when sold to be shipped from its place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in a State or States other than the State of New York.

In the course and conduct of its business the respondent has been and is in substantial competition with various other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale of similar products or products to be used for the same and similar purposes, which competitors cause their products when sold to be transported to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, as described in paragraph 1, supra, the respondent causes its aforesaid products to be advertised by means of trade publications and in newspapers having circulation in the various States of the United States. It distributes circulars and leaflets pertaining to said products in and among the various States of the United States. It also furnishes mats and display cards for the use of, and which are used by, the trade located in the various States of the United States in advertising and selling the said products. In the course of offering for sale and sale of the baby pant under the trade mark "Softex" the respondent causes representations and statements to be made in such advertisements and advertising matter to the following effect, gist, or meaning:

But they are absolutely free from Latex or any other form of gum rubber. They're rubberless, and which products so advertised and represented the respondent sells in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, as aforesaid; when in truth and in fact said products have a waistband of an elastic fabric made from gum rubber, and also an elastic banding at the leg opening made of rubber, and therefore said products are not properly and correctly represented and referred to as "being absolutely free from Latex or any other form of gum rubber" or as "rubberless."

Findings

24 F. T. C.

PAR. 3. Under the foregoing facts and circumstances, the representations, statements, and terms used by respondent in its advertising matter, as set forth in paragraph 2 supra, are false and misleading and have the capacity and tendency to deceive and do deceive the ultimate purchasers and consumers into buying that which they do not intend to buy; and through and by virtue of the use of such representations, statements, and terms in its advertising matter, as aforesaid, the respondent has placed and is placing in the hands of its wholesaler and retailer purchasers the means of deceiving the ultimate purchasers and consumers. The aforesaid practices have the capacity and tendency to divert to respondent the trade of competitors engaged in selling in commerce between and among the various States of the United States products of the same kind and nature as those of respondent, which products are truthfully advertised and described, and thereby substantial injury is done by respondent to substantial competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. The acts and things above alleged to have been done and the false representations alleged to have been made by respondent are to the prejudice of the public and the competitors of respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on June 26, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, I. B. Kleinert Rubber Company, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by John Darsey, attorney for the Commission, before Robert S. Hall and John J. Keenan, examiners of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Harold Riegelman, attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in defense thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts, and its conclusion drawn therefrom;

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. I. B. Kleinert Rubber Company is a New York corporation with its principal place of business located at 485 Fifth Avenue in the city of New York in said State. It is engaged in the manufacture of various types of waterproof garments for women and children, among which products is a baby pant which sells under the trade name, "SOFTEX." When its products are sold, the respondent causes the same to be shipped from its place of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States.

There are other corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals engaged in the sale of similar products, or products to be used for the same and similar purposes, who truthfully represent their products and who cause the same when sold to be transported from their respective places of business to purchasers thereof located in the various other States of the United States, and with such corporations, partnerships, firms, and individuals the respondent is in competition.

PAR. 2. In connection with the promotion of sale and sale of its products as aforesaid, the respondent causes representations and statements to be made in advertising matter which is circulated and distributed in the various States of the United States to the effect that its products are absolutely free from latex or any other form of gum rubber and that they are rubberless.

The products offered for sale and sold by respondent in the manner set forth above are not absolutely free from latex or any other form of gum rubber and are not rubberless. The products contain rubber in the waist bands and in the leg openings.

PAR. 3. The representations and statements made by respondent to the effect and meaning of those set forth in paragraph 2 supra are calculated to and have the tendency to deceive and mislead substantial portions of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true. As a direct consequence of such mistaken and erroneous beliefs so induced, the consuming public is persuaded to purchase a substantial volume of respondent's products with the attendant result that trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from competitors engaged in selling products of the same kind and nature in commerce as hereinbefore set out, who truthfully advertise and represent the character and quality of their products. A means of deceiving the consuming public is also placed in the hands of the retailer-purchaser by respondent when its products are so labeled. Substantial injury is thereby done by respondent to competition in commerce as hereinabove set forth.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent I. B. Kleinert Rubber Company are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, I. B. Kleinert Rubber Company, its officers, representatives, agents and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its baby pant products in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

That said products are free from latex or any other form of gum rubber or that they are rubberless when said products have latex or some form of rubber in said products at waist or leg bands or openings or in any other capacity.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after the service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3066. Complaint, Feb. 25, 1937—Decision, Apr. 24, 1937

Where a corporation engaged as retailer of women's wares, such as furs, coats, dresses, and other items of wearing apparel, in shipping from its place of business to the purchasers thereof in other States articles of merchandise sold by it—

Made use of words "silk" or "satin" in soliciting sale of its products to purchasers in various States, through advertisements and advertising matter in newspapers circulating among the various States, through representing, designating, and referring to products thus offered as "satin and silk jersey dresses" or as "silk afternoon dresses," as case might be, notwithstanding fact dresses respectively thus described were not composed of silk, product of the cocoon of the silk worm, as long specifically and definitely understood in mind of purchasing public from words "silk" or "satin," as long associated in said mind with the long and highly esteemed silk fabrics, and preeminent quality thereof;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true and to cause them to buy such dresses on account of such erroneous belief, and to unfairly divert trade to it from competitors engaged in the sale of dresses and other women's wearing apparel, who do not misrepresent the kind of dresses offered, but truthfully advertise and represent the nature and kind thereof; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Russek's Fifth Avenue, Inc., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been, and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Complaint

24 F. T. C.

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Russek's Fifth Avenue, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located on 5th Avenue at 36th Street, in the city of New York in said State.

Respondent is now, and has been for several years last past, engaged in business as a retailer of women's wear, such as furs, coats, dresses, and other items of wearing apparel. It sells, and has sold and distributed, such articles of merchandise to members of the purchasing public located in various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. Respondent now causes, and during the time herein mentioned has caused, its articles of merchandise, when sold, to be shipped from its place of business in New York City to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a constant current of trade and commerce by the respondent in said articles of merchandise between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now and at all times herein mentioned has been in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of women's wearing apparel, including furs, coats, and dresses in commerce among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, the respondent, in soliciting the sale of and selling its products to purchasers located in the various States of the United States, caused advertisements and advertising matter to be inserted in newspapers having circulation in and among the various States of the United States, wherein certain of its dresses were represented, designated, and referred to as "satin and silk jersey dresses," while certain other dresses were represented, designated and referred to as "silk afternoon dresses." Such statements and representations served as representations on the part of respondent that such dresses, so advertised and offered for sale, were silk dresses.

The representations hereinbefore set forth, are grossly false and misleading in that said dresses so represented, designated and referred to as being silk and satin silk are not and were not composed of silk, the product of the coon of the silkworm, but were composed of a material, or materials, other than silk.

PAR. 3. The word "silk" for many years past, has had and still has, in the minds of the consuming public, a definite and specific meaning, to wit, the product of the cocoon of the silkworm. Silk fabrics for many years have held, and still hold great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fibre has long been woven into a variety of fabrics and a variety of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from different types of weaving. The term "satin" has been for a long time, and at the present time still is associated in the public mind with a fabric made from the cocoon of the silkworm, commonly known and understood by the public as silk.

PAR. 4. The use by respondent of the representations set forth herein has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and has misled and deceived a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true, and to cause them to purchase such dresses on account of such erroneous belief engendered as above set forth. There are, among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, individuals, partnerships and firms engaged in the sale of dresses and other women's wearing apparel who do not misrepresent the kind of dresses offered for sale, but who likewise advertise, sell and distribute their dresses among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. By the representations aforesaid trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from such competitors, and thereby substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to competition in commerce as herein set out.

PAR. 5. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent are all to the injury and prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

entered into a stipulation as to the facts with the Chief Counsel for the Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, by which it is agreed that the statement of facts therein contained may be taken as the facts in this proceeding, and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint and in opposition thereto; and that the Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts (including inferences which it may draw from the said stipulated facts) and its conclusion based thereon, and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs; which said stipulation has been approved by the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, and the said stipulation and statement of facts, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Russek's Fifth Avenue, Inc., is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York with its principal office and place of business located on Fifth Avenue at 36th Street in the city of New York in said State. Respondent is, and has been for several years last past, engaged in business as a retailer of women's wares such as furs, coats, dresses, and other items of wearing apparel. It sells and distributes such articles of merchandise to members of the purchasing public located in the various States of the United States. It causes, and has caused, its articles of merchandise when sold to be shipped from its place of business in New York City to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a constant current of trade and commerce by the respondent in said articles of merchandise between and among the various States of the United States. Respondent is now, and at all times herein mentioned has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the sale and distribution of women's apparel, including furs, coats, and dresses in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. Respondent in soliciting the sale of and selling its products to purchasers located in the various States of the United States, caused advertisements and advertising matter to be inserted in newspapers having circulation in and among the various States of the United States, wherein certain of its dresses were represented, designated, and referred to as "satin and silk jersey dresses," while certain other dresses were represented, designated, and referred to as "silk afternoon dresses." In and by such representations and statements, respondent represented that such dresses so advertised and offered for sale were silk dresses. Such statements and representations thus made are and were false and misleading in that said dresses so represented as being "silk" and "satin and silk" are not and were not composed of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm but were composed of materials other than silk.

PAR. 3. The word "silk" for many years last past has had and still has in the minds of the purchasing public a definite and specific meaning, to wit: the product of the cocoon of the silk worm. Silk fabrics for many years have held and still hold great public esteem and confidence for their preeminent qualities. Silk fibre has long been woven into a variety of fabrics, and a variety of distinctive terms have been applied to the fabrics resulting from different types of weaving. The term "satin" has been for a long time, and at the present time is associated in the public mind with a fabric made from the cocoon of the silk worm, commonly known and understood by the public as "silky."

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of the representations set forth herein have had and now have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations are true and to cause them to purchase such dresses on account of such erroneous belief brought about as above set forth. There are among the competitors of the respondent as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the sale of dresses and other women's wearing apparel, who do not misrepresent the kind of dresses offered for sale, but who truthfully advertise and represent the nature and kind of dresses sold by them. The representations made by respondent as aforesaid, have the capacity and tendency to unfairly divert trade to respondent from such competitors; thereby substantial injury is being done and has been done by the respondent to competition in commerce as herein set out.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Russek's Fifth Avenue, Inc., are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent Russek's Fifth Avenue, Inc., its officers, representatives, agents, and employees in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of its merchandise, dress goods and garments in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

(1) Using the word "silk" either alone or in conjunction with any word or words to describe or refer to the fabric of merchandise, dress goods, or garments not composed entirely of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm.

(2) From using the word "satin" either alone or in conjunction with any other word or words to describe or refer to the fabric merchandise, dress goods, or garments not made wholly from silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Russek's Fifth Avenue, Inc., shall within 30 days after service upon it of a copy of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

Docket 2886. Complaint, Aug. 3, 1936—Decision, Apr. 27, 1937

Where an individual engaged in the hatching, advertisement, sale and shipment of baby chicks by mail and express to purchasers in various States, in substantial competition with others similarly engaged; in advertising her said baby chicks in periodicals of national circulation and among farmers, more particularly—

- (a) Represented that same were hatched from the eggs of hens or old hens, and not pullets, through such statements as "Superior grade from old hens' eggs," "from all old hens' eggs," facts being not more than ten percent of the flocks from which she purchased eggs, gathered by trucks from the various farmers and poultry raisers for hatching and sale of chicks were composed entirely of old hens, and there was no practical way for a large hatchery to obtain or definitely select and separate the old hens' eggs, chicks from which, as meaning hens that have completed one or more laying seasons, are preferred by many purchasers as more likely to live than those from eggs of a young hen or pullet;
- (b) Represented that the eggs from which her said chicks were hatched had been "blood tested" for either eleven or twelve consecutive years, facts being that, while individual in question did make annual tests of the flocks from which she bought eggs for hatching, such testing did not and could not make any flock 100% free from the diseases or blood tested at the various times at which the eggs were obtained for hatching; and
- (c) Represented that she had at all times had chickens of various breeds or types available for immediate delivery, facts being she did not at all times have ample supply of various breeds and types, as represented, available for such delivery, and at times made substitutions of different breed or type from those specifically ordered, without obtaining purchaser's consent, or failed to make shipment or notify purchasers promptly of her inability to fill order or return money forwarded therewith, or failed to make shipment within time specified or a reasonable time thereafter or to notify purchasers of such unreasonable delay;

With result that purchasers were misled and injured by such misrepresentations and practices as respects such matters of major importance to purchaser as time of delivery and delivery of kind ordered, and a substantial portion of the purchasing public were misled and deceived into the erroneous belief that the said representations, as above set forth, were true, and, acting thereon, were induced to order and buy her said products, and trade was diverted to her from those of her competitors who do not misrepresent their products or engage in such practices; to the substantial injury of competitors in commerce and of the public:

COMPLAINT

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents Nolan Atz, Gusta Atz, and John Edward Atz, are individuals doing business at all times since on or about 1924, under the trade names Atz's Hatchery, Atz's Blue Mound Hatchery, and Atz's Mammoth Hatchery with their principal places of business located in Milltown and Huntingburg in the State of Indiana.

Respondents are now, and have been for several years last past, engaged in the business of hatching, selling, and distributing poultry, more particularly young chickens which are commonly known and referred to as "baby chicks." The business in which the respondent is engaged is commonly known as and is hereinafter referred to as the chick hatchery business. Respondents in the course and conduct of their business sell and distribute said "baby chicks" to members of the public and cause said "baby chicks" when sold to be transported from the State of Indiana, or the State of origin of the shipment, to purchasers thereof located at points in the various States of the United States other than the State of Indiana, or the State of origin of the shipment. There is now, and has been during all the times herein mentioned, a constant current of trade in commerce in products sold by respondents between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, respondents are now, and have been during all the times herein mentioned, engaged in substantial competition with various other individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in hatching, selling and offering for sale "baby chicks" to members of the general public in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Many purchasers of "baby chicks" believe that a "baby chick" hatched from the egg of an "old hen" is more likely to live than one hatched from a young hen, commonly known as a pullet; and the term or designation "old hen" refers to a hen that has completed one or more laying seasons. There is a preference among purchasers of "baby chicks" for "baby chicks" hatched from the eggs of "old hens."

In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid in soliciting the sale of and in selling their "baby chicks" in said commerce, respondents advertise and have advertised in periodicals having national circulation, more particularly among farmers. In said advertisements respondents falsely represent, among other things, that the "baby chicks" advertised and offered for sale by them are hatched from the eggs of "old hens."

When in truth and in fact not all the "baby chicks" advertised and offered for sale are hatched from the eggs of "old hens" but many are hatched from the eggs of young hens or pullets with no definite determination of percentage of either.

PAR. 4. To purchasers of "baby chicks" the term "blood tested" means and refers to poultry flocks that have been tested for certain diseases common to poultry and from which flocks the diseased poultry have been eliminated, and it is believed by such purchasers that "baby chicks" hatched from the eggs of flocks that have been "blood tested" for a period of several years are less likely to be infected with said diseases than are those from flocks that have not been "blood tested" over such period of time. There is a preference among such purchasers for "baby chicks" hatched from the eggs of poultry flocks that have been "blood tested" for a period of several years.

In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, in soliciting the sale of and in selling their "baby chicks" in interstate commerce respondents, by the means and in the manner above alleged, falsely represent, among other things, that flocks producing the eggs from which respondents' chicks are hatched have been "blood tested" for either 11 or 12 consecutive years.

When in truth and in fact the flocks producing the eggs from which respondents' chicks are hatched have not been "blood tested" for a period of either 11 or 12 consecutive years.

Complaint

24 F. T. C.

PAR. 5. There are various breeds and types of chickens, each having its own characteristic and value to purchasers of "baby chicks."

In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, in soliciting the sale of and in selling their "baby chicks" in said commerce, respondents, by the means and in the manner above alleged, falsely represent that they have chickens of various breeds or types available for immediate delivery.

When in truth and in fact said respondents do not have the various breeds and types of chickens as represented, available for immediate delivery; and upon receipt of orders for specific breeds or types from purchasers, substitute a different breed or type of "baby chick" from those specifically ordered without first obtaining the consent of the purchasers for such substitution.

PAR. 6. The time at which delivery of "baby chicks" is made is of major importance to the purchaser, for the business is of a seasonal and hazardous nature and unless delivery is made as specified in the contract of purchase the "baby chicks" are worthless or of much less value to the purchaser than they are when delivered as specified. Because of these facts, "time of the delivery of baby chicks becomes of the essence" in every contract for the purchase and sale of "baby chicks."

In the course and conduct of their business respondents, by the means and in the manner above alleged, falsely represent, among other things, that their "chicks are hatched by the thousands daily for immediate delivery."

When in truth and in fact said respondents have not "baby chicks" of specific breed or types available for immediate delivery in all cases. In this connection, in many instances, the respondents do not make any shipment at all, nor do they notify the purchasers of their inability to fill the orders or return the purchase money forwarded with the orders. In other instances, shipment is not made within the time specified or within a reasonable time thereafter, and purchasers are not notified of this unreasonable delay, nor do the respondents offer to or return the purchase money paid.

PAR. 7. There are among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, those engaged in the business of producing, selling and offering for sale in said commerce "baby chicks" who do not in any way misrepresent their "baby chicks"; and who do not substitute a type of breed of chickens different from those ordered; and who do not delay or refuse shipment.

PAR. 8. The acts and practices of the respondents as above alleged in the course of selling and offering for sale their "baby chicks" in commerce as aforesaid, have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and have misled and deceived a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that the said representations are true and, acting on such erroneous belief, the said purchasing public has been induced to purchase and has purchased respondents' products, thereby diverting trade to the respondents from those of its competitors who do not misrepresent their products, whereby substantial injury is done to respondents' competitors in interstate commerce and to the injury of the public.

Findings

PAR. 9. The above and foregoing acts and practices have been and are all to the prejudice of the public and the respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

On August 11, 1936, respondent, Gusta Atz, filed an answer on behalf of herself and respondent, John Edward Atz. Thereafter testimony and evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by William T. Chantland, attorney for the Commission, before John W. Norwood, an examiner of the Com-

¹ "This matter coming on for consideration by the Commission upon the record and it appearing that the respondent, Nolan Atz, has entered into a stipulation of the facts and an agreement to cease and desist from certain enumerated practices, which stipulation and agreement, on the 27th day of October 1936, was approved by the Commission, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises:

"It is ordered, That the case against Nolan Atz, respondent, growing out of the complaint hereinbefore issued on August 3, 1936, be, and the same hereby is, closed as to the said Nolan Atz, respondent, without prejudice to the right of the Commission, should the facts so warrant, to reopen the same and resume prosecution of the complaint as to said Nolan Atz, respondent, in accordance with its regular procedure."

mission theretofore duly designated by it, and in defense of the allegations of the complaint by C. B. Hays, attorney for the respondent Gusta Atz; and said testimony and evidence was duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and evidence, and brief in support of the complaint, respondents having filed no brief; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Gusta Atz and Nolan Atz, since about 1924 and up to July 1, 1935, were associated in the business of hatching baby chicks and of advertising them for sale and selling and shipping same by mail and express to purchasers in various States of the United States from a hatchery and place of business at Milltown, Ind., and since November 1, 1935, also from a hatchery at Huntingburg, Ind. Said business is commonly known as the chick hatchery business. Since July 1, 1935, respondent, Gusta Atz, has personally owned and conducted said businesses except that for a part of the "off season" of 1935, the Milltown plant and business was turned over to her son, John Edward Atz, and his wife, to conduct on their own and make what they could out of it. The advertisements then used were prepared and the business policy controlled by respondent, Gusta Atz.

PAR. 2. At all times during said period there has been a constant current of trade in baby chicks sold by respondent, Gusta Atz, in commerce between and among various States of the United States. The volume at times in the late winter and early spring, in what is known as "the season," was such that it brought in receipts up to $1,000.00 per day. For 1934, the gross receipts for chicks shipped outside the State of Indiana was approximately 80% of $28,813.47. In 1936 the gross sales were $94,034.78 from Huntingburg and $71,525.73 from Milltown.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of her business, respondent, Gusta Atz, is now, and has been during all the times herein mentioned, engaged in substantial competition with various other individuals, firms, and corporations engaged in hatching, selling and offering for sale baby chicks to members of the general public in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Quite a number of such competitors are located throughout southern Indiana, in the vicinity of respondent's plants.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of her business as aforesaid in soliciting the sale of and in selling baby chicks in said commerce, respondent, Gusta Atz, advertises and has advertised in periodicals having national circulation, more particularly among farmers. In said advertisements she has represented, among other things, that the baby chicks advertised and offered for sale by her are hatched from the eggs of hens or old hens, meaning thereby birds of a prior season's hatch, and not pullets. In such advertisements respondent made, among others, the following representations as to the chicks offered for sale by her:

Superior grade from old hens' eggs;
 from all old hens' eggs;
 from hens' eggs; and these (baby chick) cockerels and pullets are from old hens' eggs and our special matings.

The baby chicks sold by respondent, Gusta Atz, following the making of such representation were not in fact all hatched from hens or old hens, in that not more than 10% of the flocks from which said respondent has purchased eggs which are gathered by trucks from the various farms and poultry raisers for hatching and sale of chicks were composed entirely of old hens, and there is no practical way for a large hatchery to obtain or definitely select and separate old hens' eggs from pullets' eggs.

Such advertising is an inducement to purchase chicks from said respondent, in that many purchasers of baby chicks believe that a baby chick hatched from the egg of an old hen is more likely to live than one hatched from a young hen, commonly known as a pullet; and the term or designation "hen" or "old hen" refers to a hen that has completed one or more laying seasons, and there is therefore a preference among purchasers of baby chicks for baby chicks hatched from the eggs of hens or old hens.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of her business as aforesaid, in soliciting the sale of and in selling baby chicks in interstate commerce respondent, Gusta Atz, represents in her advertising that flocks producing the eggs from which respondent's chicks are hatched have been "blood tested" for either 11 or 12 consecutive years.

Such advertising is an inducement to buy said respondent's chicks in that, to purchasers of baby chicks the term "blood tested" means and refers to poultry flocks that have been tested for certain diseases common to poultry and from which flocks the diseased poultry have been eliminated, and it is believed by such purchasers that baby chicks hatched from the eggs of flocks that have been blood tested for a period of several years are less likely to be infected with said diseases than are those from flocks that have not been blood tested over such period of time. Blood testing, as generally understood in the chick hatchery business and by poultry buyers, is made on each bird of a flock, and is for reactions to disclose the presence either of "B. W. D.", (bacillary white diarrhea) or fowl typhoid, which are two serious ailments to poultry.

Respondent, Gusta Atz, in fact did make annual tests of the flocks from which she bought eggs for hatching, but such testing did not and could not make any flock 100% free from the diseases or blood tested at the various times at which the eggs were obtained for hatching. Such blood testing is a beneficial and highly necessary practice, as is evidenced by the fact that on first tests of a new flock, the reactions would run around 20% to 25% of the number tested, whereas tests in flocks from blood tested parentage would show perhaps only 1% or 2% reactions. There, is therefore, a preference among such purchasers for baby chicks hatched from the eggs of poultry flocks that have been blood tested for a period of several years.

PAR. 6. In the course and conduct of her business as aforesaid, in soliciting the sale of and in selling baby chicks in said commerce, respondent, Gusta Atz, has represented that she has at all times had chickens of various breeds or types available for immediate delivery.

Such advertising is an inducement to buy said respondent's chicks, in that the time at which delivery of baby chicks is to be made is of major importance to the purchaser, for the business is of a seasonal and hazardous nature, and unless delivery is made of the kind ordered and at the time specified in the purchase order, the baby chicks are worthless or of much less value to the purchaser, than they are if delivered promptly as specified or promised. Thus time and accuracy as to specified breed and kinds and sex of the delivery of baby chicks is a strong inducement to those ordering baby chicks.

Respondent, Gusta Atz, did not at all times have an ample supply of the various breeds and types of chickens as represented, available for immediate delivery; and at times, upon receipt of orders for specific breeds or types from purchasers, substitutions of a different breed or type of baby chicks from those specifically ordered were made, without first obtaining the consent of the purchasers for such substitution. The result was the purchasers were misled to their injury by such misrepresentations and practices of respondent.

In other instances, said respondent did not make any shipment at all, or notify the purchasers promptly of her inability to fill the orders or return the purchase money forwarded with the orders. In still other instances, the shipment was not made within the time specified or within a reasonable time thereafter, and purchasers were not notified of this unreasonable delay. In other instances undue delay occurred before adjustments were made. These acts and practices resulted in injury to the purchasers.

PAR. 7. There are among the competitors of respondent, Gusta Atz, those engaged in the business of producing, selling, and offering for sale in commerce baby chicks who do not in any way misrepresent their product or its character and origin; and who do not substitute a type or breed of chickens different from those ordered; and who do not unduly delay or neglect to ship.

PAR. 8. The acts and practices of the respondent, Gusta Atz, alleged in the course of selling and offering for sale her baby chicks in commerce as aforesaid, have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and have misled and deceived a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that the said representations are true and, acting on such erroneous belief, the said purchasing public has been induced to purchase and has ordered and purchased said respondent's products, thereby diverting trade to said respondent from those of her competitors who do not misrepresent their products or engage in such practices, whereby substantial injury is done to respondent's competitors in interstate commerce, and to the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Gusta Atz, are to the prejudice of the public and of the respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission against respondents, Gusta Atz and John Edward Atz, and the answer of said respondents, testimony and other evidence taken before John W. Norwood, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of the said complaint and in opposition thereto, brief in support of the complaint, respondents' counsel having waived the filing of a brief, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent, Gusta

Order

24 F. T. C.

Atz, has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Gusta Atz, personally and trading as Atz's Hatchery, Atz's Blue Mount Hatchery, and Atz's Mammoth Hatchery, her representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of baby chicks in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist, directly and indirectly, from representing:

1. That baby chicks hatched from pullet eggs are hatched from hens' eggs or from old hens' eggs;

2. That baby chicks are from eggs of flocks 100% blood tested at the time the eggs are purchased for setting, when said eggs are from flocks over which she has not had continuous control and supervision since said flocks were tested;

3. That prompt delivery of baby chicks of the kind and quantity ordered is guaranteed, or can and will be made, when such is not the fact;

4. That prompt adjustments or refunds on complaints will be made, when such is not the fact, and when no advice is promptly given of inability, for any reason, properly and promptly to fill any order.

It is further ordered, That this proceeding as to John Edward Atz be, and the same is hereby, dismissed.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Gusta Atz, shall, within 60 days after service upon her of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which she has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2655. Complaint, Sept. 14, 1936¹—Decision, Apr. 28, 1937

Where the names, letters, and symbols "Marconi," "Victor," "R. C. A.," "Edison," "Bell," and representation of a bell, "Majestic," "Brunswick," and the letters "G. E." in a circle with scroll-like interior decorations, as names and designations of well-known and long-established individuals, companies, and corporations, and long used and extensively advertised by the various owners thereof, had come to be known and identified with the radio sets, radio parts, and like products of said owners, and constituted their standard brands and symbols when used as company, corporate and trade names, and, as well-known marks and brands on such products thus identified, had a fixed and stable value in the trade and industry generally, throughout the United States and foreign countries, upon which well-known brands, etc., purchasing public relied when thus used on radio sets, etc., and in said industries, as indicating high standard, reliable and genuine products, and use of such names, letters, and symbols influenced purchase thereof and increased sales, and said names, letters, and symbols, thus attached, had value to the thousands of dealers engaged in the sale and distribution of such standard brand products, and were valuable to the owners thereof, who had used and used and employed the same in commerce; and thereafter

- (1) Two corporations and three individuals, officers and agents thereof, engaged in manufacture of escutcheons and name plates upon which they etched or stamped names, marks, brands, and symbols for use on radio sets and radio parts, and in sale thereof to manufacturers and dealers in such products;
- (2) Two corporations and three individuals, in their individual capacity and as agents of said corporations, engaged in manufacture, assembly, and sale of radio sets upon which they placed and caused to be placed escutcheons and name plates purchased from the hereinabove described manufacturers and sellers thereof; and
- (3) Four corporations and two individuals engaged in sale and distribution of such products purchased from the hereinbefore described concerns and individuals and upon which there were affixed, as above set forth, escutcheons and name plates with names, marks, brands, and symbols etched or stamped thereon to designate the names, etc., of the makers and brand names of the said products; in furtherance of a scheme engaged in by such various manufacturers and dealers to deceive the public and compete unfairly with other manufacturers and dealers in such sets and parts, and escutcheons and name plates, through affixing such articles, bearing names, marks, brands and symbols of corporations and individuals well known and long established in the radio and similar industries, and without the authority or consent of the legal owners and users of such various names, etc., respectively, and as the case might be—

- (a) Sold, distributed, and furnished name plates and escutcheons for radio sets and similar products, bearing names, letters and symbols "Marconi," "Edison," "Bell," "Victor," "Majestic," "Brunswick," "R. C. A.," and "G. E." and colorable imitations or simulations thereof, to manufacturers and assemblers of and dealers in such products as hereinbefore described, and without consent of the lawful owners or licensees of such various names, etc.; and
- (b) Represented, through use of such names, marks, letters, or symbols, and such colorable simulations and imitations thereof as "Marconi-International," "Marconi Radio Corporation," "Edison-International," "Edison-Bell" with representation of a bell, "Edison Radio Stores, Inc.," "Victor International," "Majestic International," "Brunswick," letters "R. C. I.," "R. S. A.," and "E. B.," and without the permission of the lawful owners thereof, that the radio sets, parts and like devices, appliances or products made or assembled for or by, and sold by, said various corporate and individual manufacturers of and dealers in such said parts, etc., were made, assembled, sponsored, endorsed, and approved, or licensed by Thomas A. Edison or Thomas A. Edison, Inc., American Telephone & Telegraph Co., Western Electric Co., Marconi Wireless Telegraph Corporation of America, Radio Corporation of America, Victor Talking Machine Company, Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., Brunswick Radio Corporation, Grigsby-Grunow Company, Majestic Radio & Television Corporation, or General Electric Company, or by the agents, representatives, successors, or assigns of such various individuals and concerns;

With result that public was led to believe that products thus sold and marked and identified were those of the said well known respective companies or interests hereinabove set forth, and there was an appropriation by said manufacturers of escutcheons and name plates, and manufacturers and assemblers of and dealers in sets and parts as hereinbefore set forth, of the good will of the respective competitor companies and interests hereinbefore referred to, and an unfair diversion of business from such competitor companies to such name plate manufacturers, etc., and also such unfair diversion of business from other competitors who do not resort to such practice, and with the result, by reason of such wholly unauthorized use of names, brands, etc., of giving to the goods of aforesaid manufacturers, assemblers and dealers a salability which they would not otherwise have, and of giving to such manufacturers, etc., an advantage over their competitors who do not similarly misrepresent the true origin of their goods and conceal the same under a reputable but false source, and of deceiving the public buying products of said manufacturers, etc., into the false belief that such products originated with well known and reputable concerns, and with the further result of placing in the hands of others, to whom said products thus marked were sold, means whereby injury might be and was done to competitors dealing in the genuine, honestly marked goods:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that King Trading Corporation, Royal Radio Company, Inc., Metro Manufacturing Company, Inc., Metro Radio Corporation, Metro Sales Company, Inc., Pyramid Distributors, Inc.; and Murray Auerbach, Regina Gadol, George Levine, A. M. Frank, Max Scafford, and David Morrison individually, and as officers, directors, and agents of said several corporations; and Harvard Radio Tube Testing Stations of Pa., Inc., and Julius M. Schoenberg individually, and as president, director, and agent of said corporation; Ross Distributing Co., and Larry B. Ross individually, and as president, director, and agent of said corporation; Sun Radio and Service Supply Corporation, and Emanuel Rosensweig individually, and as president, director, and agent of said corporation; Schiller Brothers, Inc., and Louis S. Schiller individually, and as president, director, and agent of said corporation; Peter Robbins individually, and trading under the names Robbins Radio Company and Ambassador Radio Company; F. C. Scruggs individually, and trading under the name Call Radio Company; Metal Etching Corporation, and M. Hermann individually, and as president, director, and agent of said corporation; Etched Products Corporation, and Albert Nierenberg and Walter H. Miller individually, and as officers, directors, and agents of said corporation; Electro Chemical & Engraving Company, and F. E. Switzer, N. L. Jacobus, Robert Schlesinger, Julius Erdoes and L. S. Southwick individually, and as officers, directors, and agents of said corporation; Premier Metal Etching Company, and Herbert Pape, Carl J. Johnson, Ernest A. Rottach and Hugo Lehrfeld individually, and as officers, directors, and agents of said corporation; Crowe Nameplate and Manufacturing Company, and E. C. Coolidge and I. Robinson Smith individually, and as officers, directors, and agents of said corporation; American Emblem Company, and Paul B. Williams, Clarence S. C. Williams, James Eels, Fred B. King, and Edgar Denton, Jr. individually, and as officers, directors, and agents of said corporation have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its amended and supplemental complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. (a) Respondents King Trading Corporation, Royal Radio Company, Inc., Metro Manufacturing Company, Inc., Metro Radio Corporation, Metro Sales Company, Inc., and Pyramid Distributors, Inc., are corporations organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with their principal places of business at 51 Vesey Street, 168 Washington Street, 142 Liberty Street, 217 West 125th Street, and 122 Cypress Street in the city of New York in said State. The officers, directors, and agents of said companies who have participated in the practices herein alleged during all or part of the time here involved, are the following: Murray Auerbach, Regina Gadol, George Levine, A. M. Frank, Max Scafford, and David Morrison.

The said respondent corporations and the said respondent individuals individually, and as officers, directors, and agents of said corporations are, and have been for more than six years last past, engaged in manufacturing, assembling and selling radio sets, radio tubes, and like products. The business carried on by said respondent corporations and said respondent individuals is namely that of manufacturing and assembling radio sets, radio tubes, and like products and selling said products to dealers and the purchasing public, the profits from which enure to said individuals. Said respondents manufacture, sell and ship said radio sets, radio tubes, and like products to dealers and buyers among the purchasing public throughout the United States, and in the District of Columbia, and foreign countries in interstate and foreign commerce.

Other individuals, partnerships, and corporations who have been, and now are, involved in the subject matter of this complaint, are the following:

(b) Respondent Harvard Radio Tube Testing Stations of Pennsylvania, Inc., a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, domiciled and doing business at 208 North Broad Street in the city of Philadelphia in said State, and respondent Julius M. Schoenberg an individual, individually and as president, director, and agent of said company.

(c) Respondent Ross Distributing Company, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, domiciled and doing business at 2020 Chancellor Street in

(e) Respondent Schiller Brothers, Inc., a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the District of Columbia, domiciled and doing business at 922 F Street, N. W. in the city of Washington in said District of Columbia, and respondent Louis S. Schiller an individual, individually and as president, director, and agent of said company.

(f) Respondent Peter Robbins an individual, individually and trading under the names Robbins Radio Company and Ambassador Radio Company, domiciled and doing business at 940 F Street, N. W. in the city of Washington in the District of Columbia.

(g) Respondent F. C. Scruggs an individual, individually and trading under the name Call Radio Company, domiciled and doing business at 636 H Street, N. E. in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia.

(h) Respondent Metal Etching Corporation, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, domiciled and doing business at 1001 Essex Street in the city of Brooklyn in said State, and respondent M. Hermann an individual, individually and as president, director, and agent of said company.

(i) Respondent Etched Products Corporation, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, domiciled and doing business at 3901 Queens Boulevard in Long Island City in said State, and respondents Albert Nierenberg, and Walter H. Miller individuals, individually and as officers, directors, and agents of said company.

(j) Respondent Electro Chemical and Engraving Company, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with its principal office and place of business at 1100 Brook Avenue, in the Borough of the Bronx, city of New York in said State, and respondents F. E. Switzer, N. L. Jacobus, Robert Schlesinger, Julius Erdoes, and L. S. Southwick individuals, individually and as officers, directors, and agents of said company.

(k) Respondent Premier Metal Etching Company, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, domiciled and doing business at 2103 44th Avenue in the city of Long Island in said State, and respondents Herbert Pape, Carl J. Johnson, Ernest A. Rottach, and Hugo Lehrfeld individuals, individually and as officers, directors, and agents of said company.

(l) Respondent Crowe Nameplate and Manufacturing Company, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, domiciled and doing business at 1749 Grace Street in the city of Chicago in said State, and respondents E. C. Coolidge and I. Robinson Smith, individuals, individually and as officers, directors, and agents of said company.

(m) American Emblem Company a New York corporation with domicile at Rochester, N. Y., and a place of business at 22 East 40th Street in the city of New York in said State, and respondents Paul B. Williams, Clarence S. C. Williams, James Eels, Fred B. King, and Edgar Denton, Jr. (all domiciled in the city of Utica in said State), individuals, individually and as officers, directors, and agents of said corporation.

Said respondents hereinabove described under sub-paragraphs (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), and (g) of paragraph 1 are dealers in radio receiving sets, radio tubes, and like products. Said respondents during the course and conduct of their business sell and ship said radio sets, radio tubes, and like products to the purchasing public in interstate and foreign commerce from their several places of business in Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia through and into other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia, and foreign countries in interstate and foreign commerce.

Said respondents hereinabove described under sub-paragraphs (h), (i), (j), (k), (l), and (m) of paragraph 1 in the course and conduct of their business manufacture and sell nameplates and escutcheons for use and used upon radio sets to describe or designate the makers or brand names of said products. Said respondents during the course and conduct of their said several businesses, have and do manufacture for sale and sell and ship to respondent King Trading Corporation and the several other respondent corporations, associations, partnerships and individuals designated in paragraph 1 (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), and (g) escutcheons and nameplates to be used and used and sold by said respondents to dealers and others to be used on and in connection with radio sets, radio tubes, and like products as marks or brands to designate the names of the makers and brand names used by makers of said products.

PAR. 2. Respondent King Trading Corporation, and all of the several respondent corporations, associations, partnerships, and individuals described in paragraph 1 (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), and (g) are now and have been for several years last past engaged in manufacturing, assembling, selling, marketing, and distributing radio sets, radio tubes, and like products and in the course and conduct of their said several businesses respondents have caused and now cause said radio sets, radio tubes, and like products when sold to be transported by them from their several respective places of business into and through the various States of the United States, the District of Columbia and in foreign commerce to the purchasers thereof in such other States, in the District of Columbia and foreign countries in substantial competition with other corporations, partnerships, and persons engaged in the sale and transportation of radio sets, radio tubes, and like products in interstate and foreign commerce.

PAR. 3. For the purpose of selling said radio sets, radio tubes, and like products and to induce the public to buy said products, respondent King Trading Corporation and the several other respondent corporations, associations, partnerships, and individuals set out and described in paragraph 1 (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i), (j), (k), (l), and (m) cooperating among themselves and together with one another, have been for several years last past and are now, engaged in a scheme to deceive the public and to compete unfairly with other manufacturers and dealers in radio sets, radio tubes, and like products who are in competition with respondents in interstate and foreign commerce. In furtherance of said scheme respondents have adopted, made, used and sold and now make, use, sell and ship in interstate and foreign commerce to distributors, dealers, and others radio sets, radio tubes, and like products, and escutcheons and nameplates (to be used on radio sets, radio tubes, and like products) bearing the names, marks, brands, and symbols of corporations and individuals well-known and long established in the radio and like industries, which names, marks, brands, and symbols were adopted and used and are now being used by respondents and others without authority or consent from the legal owners and users of said names, marks, brands, and symbols.

Among the names, marks, brands, and symbols so made, adopted and used by respondents are the following:

Marconi, Marconi International, Marconi Radio Corporation; Edison, Edison International, Edison-Bell, Edison with a representation of a bell, Edison Radio Stores, Inc.; Bell, Bell with a representation of a bell; Victor, Victor International; Majestic, Majestic International, Majestic Radio Corporation; Brunswick (Brunswick a colorable imitation of the name Brunswick); RCA and (RCI, RSA colorable imitations of the letters RCA); the letters EB (a colorable imitation of the letters GE) standing alone or stamped upon the representation of a bell, and the names Marconi, Edison, Bell, Victor, Majestic, Brunswick or Bronswick standing alone or in conjunction with other words, names, and devices.

Said respondents, set out and described in paragraph 1 (h), (i), (j), (k), (l), and (m), without authority or consent of the legal owners of said names, marks, brands, and symbols make, use, advertise, sell, and ship in interstate and foreign commerce said nameplates and escutcheons so marked and stamped with said well-known and long established names, marks, brands, and symbols as hereinabove set out, and said respondents, King Trading Corporation and the other respondents, set out and described in paragraph 1 (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), and (g), advertise said nameplates and escutcheons, and radio sets and like products upon which said nameplates and escutcheons so marked, stamped, and branded with said well-known and long established names, marks, brands, and symbols of others as hereinabove set out, without authority or consent of the owners thereof, in catalogues, newspapers, and other periodicals circulated in interstate and foreign commerce, and sell and ship said nameplates and escutcheons, and radio sets and like products so marked from their respective places of business to purchasers thereof, located in States other than the State of origin of said shipments and in the District of Columbia and foreign countries in interstate and foreign commerce. All of which said acts and things are committed and done in pursuance and as a part of said scheme entered into, agreed upon, and participated in by King Trading Corporation, its officers, directors, and agents and each and all of the respondents hereinabove designated in paragraph 1 (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i), (j), (k), (l), and (m).

PAR. 4. The use by respondents of the names, marks, brands, symbols, and devices as set out in paragraph 3 is wholly unauthorized by the owners of said names, marks, brands, symbols, and devices and gives to respondents' goods a salability which they would not otherwise have, and gives to said respondents an advantage over their competitors who do not similarly misrepresent the true origin of their goods and conceal the same under a reputable but false origin as do respondents. The said appropriation and use by said respondents of the reputation and goodwill of others at the expense of and injury to such others who have created such reputation and goodwill has the capacity and tendency to deceive, and deceives the public purchasing said products into believing that respondents' products originate with well-known and reputable concerns contrary to the fact. Thereby substantial injury is done by respondents to competitors and substantial competition in interstate and foreign commerce.

PAR. 5. (a) The name "Marconi" refers to and is generally recognized as the name of Guglielmo Marconi, the engineer and electrician who first perfected the appliances used in space telegraphy, or radiography and the application of electric waves to actual telegraphy and the inventor of various electrical and radio devices among which is the celebrated "Fleming Tube," a tube used in radio sets. Marconi the celebrated "Fleming Tube," a tube used in radio sets. Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America, a corporation organized in 1899 under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, acquired from said Guglielmo Marconi the exclusive right to the use and exploitation of all of the said Guglielmo Marconi patents and inventions, including the use of the name "Marconi" in and throughout the United States and its territories and possessions. In 1919 the said Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America sold, transferred and assigned to Radio Corporation of America all of its right, title, and interest in and to said "Marconi" patents and inventions, including the right to the use of the name "Marconi" in connection therewith, and has been used and extensively advertised by, and is the rightful property of Radio Corporation of America and its subsidiaries.

(b) For many years last past the Victor Talking Machine Company, Camden, N. J., has been manufacturing and selling phonographs and phonograph records, which phonographs have acquired a wide and favorable reputation and have been in great demand by the trade and purchasing public. During all this period the phonographs, phonograph records, and other articles manufactured and sold by said company have featured the name "Victor" as part of their trade name, which said name has been attached in a prominent place to said machines, sold, and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce.

In 1929 the Radio Corporation of America obtained control of said Victor Talking Machine Company and organized a company under the corporate name "RCA-Victor Co.," and also organized a company under the name of "The RCA Manufacturing Co., Inc.," which company is engaged in the manufacture and sale of radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets. All of said sets bear the name "Victor," either alone or in combination with other letters or words in a prominent place on said sets. Said radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets are sold to the purchasing public by retail dealers throughout the United States. During the past twenty-five years the Victor Talking Machine Company has spent approximately $70,000,000 in advertising, and the word "Victor" has always prominently appeared in said advertising. At the present time RCA-Victor Company is advertising its radio sets and radio tubes in a number of magazines having a large national circulation and in other publications and newspapers.

The name "Victor" when used on radio sets and radio tubes and like products is the rightful property of the RCA-Victor Co. and the Victor Division of the RCA Manufacturing Company.

The said initials "RCA" have long been used as marks or brands to designate radio sets and radio tubes and other merchandise manufactured, sold, and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce by said RCA-Victor Co., the Victor Division of the RCA Manufacturing Co. and the Radio Corporation of America. Neither said Guglielmo Marconi nor Radio Corporation of America or any of its subsidiaries have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name Marconi or the name Victor or the letters RCA (or RSA and RCI colorable imitations of the letters RCA) in any manner.

PAR. 6. For more than thirty years prior to his death on October 16, 1931, Thomas A. Edison had been known and recognized throughout the various States of the United States and foreign countries as the inventor, patentee, owner, and manufacturer of numerous electrical devices of various kinds and descriptions and of machines for the reproduction of the human voice, which have acquired a wide and favorable reputation and are in great demand by the trade and purchasing public who desire Edison products. Among the machines for the reproduction of the human voice manufacturer by companies which the said Thomas A. Edison organized and controlled, are phonographs, dictaphones, and transmitting machines, radios, combination radios and phonographs and many other articles of various kinds and character such as storage batteries, spark plugs, ignition coils, and household electrical appliances. Many of the machines and articles above referred to bear the name "Edison" as part of their brand, and such name "Edison" has acquired a valuable goodwill as identifying the manufacturer of said machines or articles.

Among the companies organized and controlled by the said Thomas A. Edison before his death is Thomas A. Edison, Inc., which said company is still engaged in the manufacture of the machines and articles invented and developed by Thomas A. Edison. Thomas A. Edison, Inc., during the years 1926-1930 inclusive, manufactured and sold radio sets valued at many millions of dollars, and during the said period spent several millions of dollars in advertising its said radio products. All the radio sets manufactured and sold by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., feature the name "Edison" as part of their brand name.

Complaint

The name "Edison" refers to Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor in the electrical field and the pioneer in the talking machine and radio industry, the right to the use of which name was vested in Thomas A. Edison, Inc., by Thomas A. Edison and was extensively advertised and has long previously been used and continues to be used by Thomas A. Edison, Inc. on radio sets, phonographs and other electrical devices and appliances, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce. Neither Thomas A. Edison or the said Thomas A. Edison, Inc. have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name "Edison" in any manner.

PAR. 7. The name "Bell" and the representation of a bell, when used in connection with sound reproduction and sound transmission in the electrical and radio field refers to the great inventor Alexander Graham Bell and is the property of the said Alexander Graham Bell and his successors and assigns. The common law title to the name "Bell" is vested, by long and continued use since 1886, in the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, its subsidiaries and associates, and the Western Electric Company, Inc. Western Electric Company, Inc. manufactures, sells, extensively advertises and ships radio sets, radio tubes, and radio batteries in interstate and foreign commerce, and uses the name "Blue Bell" and the representation of a bell as a brand name to designate its said products. The representation of a bell has long been used and extensively advertised by the American Telephone & Telegraph Company as a symbol or trade designation in its business. Neither the said Alexander Graham Bell nor the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and its subsidiaries nor Western Electric Company, Inc. have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name "Bell" in any manner.

PAR. 8. The name "Majestic" is a name long associated with radio sets and is the legal property of Grigsby-Grunow Company who are the original makers of radio sets branded with the name "Majestic," which were extensively advertised, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce by the said Grigsby-Grunow Company. Said name "Majestic" is now vested in Majestic Radio and Television Corporation of Illinois, which now manufactures, sells and ships in interstate and foreign commerce radio sets, radio tubes, and like products branded or marked with the name Majestic. Neither Grigsby-Grunow Company, its successors or assigns nor Majestic Radio and Television Corporation of Illinois have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name "Majestic" in any manner.

PAR. 9. During many years last past the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. has been a large manufacturer of billard and pocket billard tables, bowling alleys and various other articles, and its products have acquired a wide and favorable reputation and have been in great demand by the trade and purchasing public for many years last past. During all this period the products manufactured and sold by said company have featured the name "Brunswick" as part of their brand name, which said name has been attached in a prominent place to said products. In 1915 the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. began the manufacture and sale of phonographs and phonograph records, and sometime later began the manufacture and sale of radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets, on all of which articles the name "Brunswick" was featured in a prominent place on said products. In 1930 the radio and phonograph division of said Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. was sold to Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., which company organized the corporation under the corporate name Brunswick Radio Corporation to operate the business. Said latter company obtained the exclusive right to use the name "Brunswick" in connection with said radio sets, phonographs, and combination radio and phonograph sets.

Until January 1, 1933, Brunswick Radio Corporation continued the manufacture and sale of radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets, on all of which sets the name "Brunswick" has been prominently featured. Since January 1, 1933, the manufacture of radio sets by Brunswick Radio Corporation has been suspended, but said Brunswick Radio Corporation still owns the manufacturing plants in which said sets were manufactured and may resume such manufacture at some time in the future. The radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets manufactured by Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. and Brunswick Radio Corporation were sold to the purchasing public by retail dealers throughout the United States and in foreign countries. During all the time the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Corporation and the Brunswick Radio Corporation were manufacturing and selling radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets said companies expended large sums of money in advertising said sets, and the name "Brunswick" has at all times been prominently displayed in said advertising.

"Bronswick," the name used by respondents, is a colorable imitation of the name "Brunswick" which has long been used by the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. and the Brunswick Radio Corporation on radio sets, phonographs and combination radio and phonograph sets. Neither Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc. or Brunswick Radio Corporation have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name Brunswick (or Bronswick a colorable imitation thereof) in any manner.

PAR. 10. A device of a circle with scroll-like interior projections enclosing the script letters "GE" is the property of General Electric Company and has long been used and extensively advertised by said General Electric Company as a mark or brand to designate the products manufactured, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce by said General Electric Company. The device used by respondents of a circle with scroll-like interior projections enclosing the script letters "EB" is a colorable imitation of this well-known device. Neither Thomas A. Edison, Thomas Edison Inc., Alexander Graham Bell, American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Western Electric Company, nor said General Electric Company or any of its subsidiaries have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the letters "EB" in any manner.

PAR. 11. The offering for sale and sale and shipment by respondents in interstate and foreign commerce, as set out in paragraphs 1, 2, 3, and 4 hereof, to dealers in radio sets, radio tubes, and like products of escutcheons, or name plates stamped or branded with the well-known names, marks, brands, and symbols of others without their consent, and the offering for sale and sale and shipment in interstate and foreign commerce by respondents of radio sets, radio tubes, and like products branded or marked with the names, marks, brands, and symbols of others without authority or consent of the owners thereof, places in the hands of dealers and others the means whereby injury might be done and is done to competitors and the purchasing public, and all of the acts and things alleged and done by respondents are each and all of them to the injury and prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate and foreign commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

known as the complaint, in this proceeding, upon the following named corporations and individuals:

Respondents, Etched Products Corporation, Albert Nierenberg, Walter H. Miller, Electro Chemical Engraving Company, F. E. Switzer, N. L. Jacobus, Robert Schlesinger, Julius Erdoes, L. S. Southwick, Premier Metal Etching Company, Herbert Pape, Karl D. (named Carl J.) Johnson, Ernest A. Rottach, Hugo Lehrfeld, American Emblem Company, Paul B. Williams, Clarence S. C. Williams, James Eels, Fred B. King, Edgar Denton, Jr., Metal Etching Corporation, M. Hermann, Crowe Nameplate and Manufacturing Company, E. C. Coolidge, I. Robinson Smith, King Trading Corporation, Royal Radio Company, Inc., Murray Auerbach, A. M. Frank, David (I.) Morrison, Harvard Radio Tube Testing Stations of Pennsylvania, Inc., Julius M. Schoenberg, Ross Distributing Company, Larry B. Ross, Sun Radio and Service Supply Corporation, Emanuel Rosensweig, Schiller Brothers, Inc., Louis Schiller, Peter Robbins, trading as Robbins Radio Company and Ambassador Radio Company, and F. C. Scruggs, trading as Call Radio Company.

Respondents, Metro Manufacturing Company, Inc., Metro Radio Corporation, Metro Sales Company, Inc., Pyramid Distributors, Inc., George Levine, Max Scafford, and Regina Gadol could not be located and were not served with copies of the complaint.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and the answers thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the matter and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the public interest and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPHS 1. Respondents, Etched Products Corporation, Walter H. Miller, Albert Nierenberg, Electro Chemical and Engraving Company (named in the complaint Electro Chemical Engraving Company), F. E. Switzer, N. L. Jacobus, Robert Schlesinger, Julius Erdoes, L. S. Southwick, Premier Metal Etching Corporation, Karl D. (named in the complaint Carl J.) Johnson, Ernest A. Rottach, Hugo Lehrfeld, American Emblem Company, Paul B. Williams, Clarence S. C. Williams, James Eels, Fred B. King, and Edgar Denton, Jr., filed answers in which they deny all the material allegations of the complaint. It appears that said respondents did not participate in the acts and practices charged in the complaint, and the complaint should be dismissed as to said respondents.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Metal Etching Corporation, is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, domiciled and doing business at 1001 Essex Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., and respondent, M. Hermann, was and is an officer and agent of said corporation.

Respondent, Crowe Nameplate and Manufacturing Company, is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois, domiciled and doing business at 1749 Grace Street, Chicago, Ill., and respondents E. C. Coolidge and I. Robinson Smith are officers and agents of said corporation.

Respondents hereinabove named are now, and have been for several years last past, engaged in the manufacture and sale of escutcheons and nameplates—upon which said products they have etched or stamped names, marks, brands, and symbols—for use as marks and brands on radio sets and radio parts to designate the names, marks, brands, and symbols of the makers and brand names of said radio sets and radio parts. They have sold and shipped and now sell and ship products to manufacturers and dealers in radio sets and radio parts, including the respondents named in paragraphs 3 and 4 hereof. They have caused and now cause said escutcheons and nameplates so marked and branded when sold to be transported from their respective places of business in the States of New York and Illinois to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in States of the United States other than the State of origin of the shipment and in the District of Columbia and foreign countries.

PAR. 3. Respondent, King Trading Corporation, is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, domiciled and doing business at 51 Vesey Street, New York City, N. Y.; respondent, Royal Radio Company, Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, doing business at 168 Washington Street, New York City, N. Y., and respondent, Murray Auerbach, was and is an officer and agent of said respondent corporations.

Respondents A. M. Frank, David (I.) Morrison and Murray Auerbach conducted business in an individual capacity as free agents and also as agents of said respondents, King Trading Corporation and Royal Radio Company, Inc., with their principal places of business at 16 Hudson Street, and 168 Washington Street in New York City, N. Y.

The respondents herein named have been for several years last past, and are now, engaged in the manufacture, assembly, and sale of radio sets and radio parts upon which said products they place and cause to be placed escutcheons and nameplates—purchased from respondents set out and described in paragraph 2—with names, letters, marks, brands, and symbols etched or stamped thereon to designate the makers and brand names of said radio sets and radio parts. They sell and ship said products to the respondents named in paragraph 4 hereof and to other dealers and to the public. They have caused, and now cause, said radio parts and radio sets, escutcheons and nameplates so marked and branded, when sold, to be transported from their respective places of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in States of the United States other than the State of origin of the shipment and in the District of Columbia and to foreign countries.

PAR. 4. Respondent, Harvard Radio Tube Testing Stations of Pennsylvania, Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, domiciled and doing business at 208 N. Broad Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and respondent Jules M. Schoenberg is an officer, representative and agent of said corporation.

Respondent, Ross Distributing Company, is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal place of business at 2020 Chancellor Street, in the city of Philadelphia, Pa., and respondent Larry B. Ross is an officer, agent, and representative of said corporation.

Respondent, Sun Radio and Service Supply Corporation, is a corporation organized under the laws of the District of Columbia, domiciled and doing business at 938 F Street N. W., Washington, D. C., and respondent, Emanuel Rosensweig, is an officer, agent, and representative of said corporation.

Respondent, Schiller Brothers, Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the District of Columbia, domiciled and doing business at 922 F Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., and respondent Louis S. Schiller is an officer, agent, and representative of said corporation.

Respondent, Peter Robbins, is an individual trading under the names Robbins Radio Company and Ambassador Radio Company, domiciled and doing business at 940 F Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Respondent, F. C. Scruggs, is an individual trading under the name Call Radio Company, domiciled and doing business at 636 H Street, N. E., Washington, D. C.

The respondents herein named have been for several years last past, and are now, engaged in the sale and distribution of radio sets and radio parts upon which said products there are affixed escutcheons and nameplates with names, marks, brands, and symbols etched or stamped thereon to designate the names, marks, brands, and symbols of the makers and brand names of said products. Said radio sets and radio parts so offered for sale and sold with said escutcheons and nameplates affixed thereto, were, and are, bought from the several respondents set out and described in paragraphs 2 and 3. Said products, so marked and branded, were, and are, sold by said respondents to the purchasing public, and, when sold, are transported from their several respective places of business in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania, and the city of Washington, D. C., to purchasers thereof at their several points of location in States other than the State or point of origin and in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries.

PAR. 5. For the purpose of selling escutcheons and nameplates and of inducing manufacturers and dealers in radio sets, radio parts and like products to buy said products, the several respondents set out and described in paragraph 2 have been for several years last past, and are now, engaged in a scheme to deceive the public and to compete unfairly with other manufacturers and dealers in escutcheons and nameplates and like products who are in competition with respondents in interstate and foreign commerce;

For the purpose of selling radio sets, radio parts, and like products and of inducing the public to buy said products, the several respondent corporations and the several respondent individuals, individually, and as officers, agents, and representatives of said respondent corporations, herein set out and described in paragraphs 2, 3, and 4, cooperating among themselves and together with one another, have been for several years last past and are now engaged in a scheme to deceive the public and to compete unfairly with other manufacturers and dealers in radio sets, radio parts, escutcheons, and nameplates, and like products, who are in competition with the said respondents in interstate and foreign commerce. In furtherance of said scheme, the said respondents have adopted, made, used, and sold, and now make, use, sell, and ship in interstate and foreign commerce to distributors, dealers and others, escutcheons, and nameplates and radio sets, radio parts, and like products, upon which are attached, or to which are affixed, escutcheons and nameplates bearing the names, marks, brands, and symbols of corporations and individuals well known and long established in the radio and like industries, which names, marks, brands, and symbols were adopted and used and are now being used by said respondents and others without authority or consent from the legal owners and users of said names, marks, brands, and symbols.

Among the names, marks, brands, and symbols so made, adopted, and used by respondents are the following:

"Marconi" and also "Marconi-International," "Marconi Radio Corporation," which are found to be colorable imitations and simulations of said name "Marconi":

"Edison" and also "Edison-International," "Edison-Bell," "Edison" with the representation of a bell, "Edison Radio Stores, Inc.," which are found to be colorable imitations and simulations of said name "Edison";

"Bell" and the representation of a bell, which is found to be a simulation of the name "Bell";

"Victor" and also "Victor International," which is found to be a colorable imitation and simulation of said name "Victor";

"Majestic" and also "Majestic International" and "Majestic Radio Corporation" which are found to be colorable imitations and simulations of the said name "Majestic";

"Brunswick" and also "Bronswick" which is found to be a colorable imitation and simulation of the said name "Brunswick";

The letters "R. C. A." and also "R. C. I." and "R. S. A.," which are found to be colorable imitations and simulations of said letters "R. C. A.";

The letters "G. E.," either alone or in the circle with scroll like interior decorations, and also the letters "E. B.," which are found to be a colorable imitation and simulation of said letters "G. E."; and

"Marconi," "Edison," "Bell," "Victor," "Majestic," "Brunswick," or "Bronswick," standing alone or in conjunction with other words, names or devices, or any other colorable imitations or simulations of said trade names, marks and brands.

Said respondent corporations, and said respondent individuals, individually, and as officers, agents, and representatives, set out and described in paragraph 2, with respect to escutcheons and name plates, and said respondent corporations, and said respondent individuals, individually, and as officers, agents, and representatives, set out and described in paragraphs 3 and 4, with respect to escutcheons, nameplates, radio sets, radio parts and like products, marked and branded with the said well known and long established names, marks, brands, and symbols hereinabove set out and described, advertise said products in pamphlets, circulars, catalogues, newspapers, and other periodicals circulated in interstate and foreign commerce, and in the District of Columbia, and sell and ship said products so marked from their respective places of business to purchasers thereof located in the District of Columbia and in States other than the State or place of origin of said shipments, in interstate and foreign commerce without the authority or consent of the legal owners of said names, marks, brands, and symbols.

PAR. 6. (a) The name "Marconi." The name "Marconi" refers to and is generally recognized as the name of Guglielmo Marconi, the engineer and electrician who first perfected the appliances used in space telegraphy or radiography and the application of electric waves to actual telegraphy and the inventor of various electrical and radio devices among which is the celebrated "Fleming Tube," a tube used in radio sets. Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America, a corporation organized in 1899 under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, acquired from said Guglielmo Marconi the exclusive right to the use and exploitation of all of the said Guglielmo Marconi patents and inventions, including the use of the name "Marconi" in and throughout the United States and its territories and possessions. In 1919 the said Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America sold, transferred and assigned to Radio Corporation of America all of its right, title, and interest in and to said "Marconi" patents and inventions, including the right to the use of the name "Marconi" in connection therewith. Said name "Marconi" is now, and has been used and extensively advertised by, and is the rightful property of Radio Corporation of America and its subsidiaries.

(b) The name "Victor." For many years last past the Victor Talking Machine Company, Camden, N. J., has been manufacturing and selling phonographs and phonograph records, which phonographs have acquired a wide and favorable reputation and have been in great demand by the trade and purchasing public. During all this period the phonographs, phonograph records and other articles manufactured and sold by said company have featured the name "Victor" as part of their trade name, which said name has been attached in a prominent place to said machines, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce.

In 1929 the Radio Corporation of America obtained control of said Victor Talking Machine Company and organized a company under the corporate name "RCA-Victor Co.," and also organized a company under the name of "The RCA Manufacturing Co., Inc.," which company is engaged in the manufacture and sale of radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets. All of said sets bear the name "Victor," either alone or in combination with other letters or words in a prominent place on said sets. Said radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets are sold to the purchasing public by retail dealers throughout the United States. During the past twenty-five years the Victor Talking Machine Company has spent approximately $70,000,000 in advertising, and the word "Victor" has always prominently appeared in said advertising. At the present time RCA-Victor Company is advertising its radio sets and radio tubes in a number of magazines having a large national circulation and in other publications and newspapers.

The name "Victor" when used on radio sets and radio tubes and like products is the rightful property of the RCA-Victor Company and the Victor Division of the RCA Manufacturing Company.

(c) The letters or initials "R. C. A." The initials "RCA" have long been used as marks or brands to designate radio sets and radio tubes and other merchandise manufactured, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce by said RCA-Victor Company, the Victor Division of the RCA Manufacturing Company and the Radio Corporation of America. Neither said Guglielmo Marconi nor Radio Corporation of America or any of its subsidiaries have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name Marconi or the name Victor or the letters RCA (or RSA and RCI, colorable imitations of the letters RCA) in any manner.

(d) The name "Edison." For more than thirty years prior to his death on October 16, 1931, Thomas A. Edison had been known and recognized throughout the various States of the United States and foreign countries as the inventor, patentee, owner, and manufacturer of numerous electrical devices of various kinds and descriptions and of machines for the reproduction of the human voice, which have acquired a wide and favorable reputation and are in great demand by the trade and purchasing public who desire Edison products. Among the machines for the reproduction of the human voice manufactured by companies which the said Thomas A. Edison organized and controlled, are phonographs, dictaphones, and transmitting machines, radios, combination radios and phonographs and many other articles of various kinds and character such as storage batteries, spark plugs, ignition coils, and household electrical appliances. Many of the machines and articles above referred to bear the name "Edison" as part of their brand, and such name "Edison" has acquired a valuable goodwill as identifying the manufacturer of said machines or articles.

Among the companies organized and controlled by the said Thomas A. Edison before his death is Thomas A. Edison, Inc., which said company is still engaged in the manufacture of the machines and articles invented and developed by Thomas A. Edison. Thomas A. Edison, Inc., during the years 1926-1930, inclusive, manufactured and sold radio sets valued at many millions of dollars, and during the said period spent several millions of dollars in advertising its said radio products. All the radio sets manufactured and sold by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., feature the name "Edison" as part of their brand name.

The name "Edison" refers to Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor in the electrical field and the pioneer in the talking machine and radio industry, the right to the use of which name was vested in Thomas A. Edison, Inc., by Thomas A. Edison and was extensively advertised and has long previously been used and is now used by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., on radio sets, phonographs and other electrical devices and appliances, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce. Neither Thomas A. Edison nor the said Thomas A. Edison, Inc., have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name "Edison" in any manner.

(e) The name "Bell." The name "Bell" and the representation of a bell, when used in connection with sound reproduction and sound transmission in the electrical and radio field refers to the great inventor Alexander Graham Bell and is the property of the said Alexander Graham Bell and his successors and assigns. The common law title to the name "Bell" is vested, by long and continued use since 1886, in the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, its subsidiaries and associates, and the Western Electric Company, Inc. Western Electric Company, Inc., manufactures, sells, extensively advertises and ships radio sets, radio tubes and radio batteries in interstate and foreign commerce, and uses the name "Blue Bell" and the representation of a bell as a brand name to designate its said products. The representation of a bell has long been used and extensively advertised by the American Telephone & Telegraph Company as a symbol or trade designation in its business. Neither the said Alexander Graham Bell nor the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and its subsidiaries Western Electric Company, Inc., have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name "Bell" in any manner.

(f) The name "Majestic." The name "Majestic" is a name long associated with radio sets and is the legal property of Grigsby-Grunow Company who are the original makers of radio sets branded with the name "Majestic," which were extensively advertised, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce by the said Grigsby-Grunow Company. Said name "Majestic" is now vested in Majestic Radio and Television Corporation of Illinois, which now manufactures, sells and ships in interstate and foreign commerce radio sets, radio tubes and like products branded or marked with the name Majestic. Neither Grigsby-Grunow Company, its successors or assigns nor Majestic Radio and Television Corporation of Illinois have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name "Majestic" in any manner.

(g) The name "Brunswick" (Bronswick). During many years last past the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company has been a large manufacturer of billiard and pocket billiard tables, bowling alleys and various other articles, and its products have acquired a wide and favorable reputation and have been in great demand by the trade and purchasing public for many years last past. During all this period the products manufactured and sold by said Company have featured the name "Brunswick" as part of their brand name, which said name has been attached in a prominent place to said products. In 1915 the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company began the manufacture and sale of phonographs and phonograph records, and sometime later began the manufacture and sale of radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets, on all of which articles the name "Brunswick" was featured in a prominent place on said products. In 1930 the radio and phonograph division of said Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company was sold to Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., which company organized the corporation under the corporate name Brunswick Radio Corporation to operate the business. Said latter company obtained the exclusive right to use the name "Brunswick" in connection with said radio sets, phonographs and combination radio and phonograph sets.

Until January 1, 1933, Brunswick Radio Corporation continued the manufacture and sale of radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets, on all of which sets the name "Brunswick" has been prominently featured. Since January 1, 1933, the manufacture of radio sets by Brunswick Radio Corporation has been suspended but said Brunswick Radio Corporation still owns the manufacturing plants in which said sets were manufactured and may resume such manufacture at some time in the future. The radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets manufactured by Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company and Brunswick Radio Corporation were sold to the purchasing public by retail dealers throughout the United States and in foreign countries. During all the time the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Corporation and the Brunswick Radio Corporation were manufacturing and selling radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets said companies expended large sums of money in advertising said sets, and the name "Brunswick" has at all times been prominently displayed in said advertising.

"Brunswick," the name used by respondents, is a colorable imitation of the name "Brunswick" which has long been used by the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company and the Brunswick Radio Corporation on radio sets, phonographs and combination radio and phonograph sets. Neither Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., nor Brunswick Radio Corporation have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name Brunswick (or Bronswick, a colorable imitation thereof) in any manner.

(h) The letters G. E. in a circle, with scroll-like interior decorations. A device of a circle with scroll-like interior projections enclosing the script letters "GE," is the property of General Electric Company and has long been used and extensively advertised by said General Electric Company as a mark or brand to designate the products manufactured, sold, and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce by said General Electric Company. The device used by respondents of a circle with scroll-like interior projections enclosing the script letters "EB," is a colorable imitation of this well known device. Neither Thomas A. Edison, Thomas Edison, Inc., Alexander Graham Bell, American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Western Electric Company, nor said General Electric Company or any of its subsidiaries have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the letters "EB" or "G. E." in any manner.

Said names, letters, and symbols are the names and designations of said well known and long established individuals, companies, and corporations, and are standard brands and symbols when used as company, corporate, and trade names, and as marks and brands on radio sets, radio parts and like products, and said products so marked have a fixed and stable value in the trade and industry generally throughout the United States and foreign countries. The purchasing public relies upon said well known brands, marks, and symbols when used on radio sets, radio parts and like products, and in said industries as indicating high standard, reliable and genuine products. The use of such names, letters and symbols influences the purchase of said products and increases sales. The number of dealers in said products so marked, increase sales value. The said names, letters and symbols attached to said products have value to the thousands of dealers engaged in the sale and distribution of said standard brand products. The said names, letters, and symbols are valuable to those persons, partnerships, and corporations owning them, and who have used and now use and employ them in commerce.

Because of the popularity of the names "Marconi," "Victor," "Bell," "Edison," "Brunswick," "Majestic," and the letters "G. E.," either standing alone or in a circle with scroll-like interior decorations, and the letters "R. C. A.," and the products bearing these names, letters, and symbols, manufactured and sold by the lawful owners thereof; the use by respondents of said names, letters and symbols, and simulaticns thereof, has led and has the capacity and tendency to lead the public to believe that the products sold by respondents and so marked or identified are the products of said well known respective companies or interests hereinabove referred to and identified and results in the appropriation by the respondents of the good will of, and an unfair diversion of business from said respective competitor companies and interests, and an unfair diversion of business from other competitors who do not resort to such practices, to the injury of the owners of said marks, letters, and symbols and of said competitors, and to the prejudice and injury of the public.

PAR. 7. The use by respondents of the names, marks, brands, symbols, and devices as set out in paragraph 5 is wholly unauthorized by the owners of said names, marks, brands, symbols, and devices and gives to respondents' goods a salability which they would not otherwise have, and gives to said respondents' an advantage over their competitors who do not similarly misrepresent the true origin of their goods and conceal the same under a reputable but false origin as do respondents. The said appropriation and use by said respondents of the reputation and good will of others at the expense of and injury to such others who have created such reputation and good will, has the capacity and tendency to deceive, and deceives the public purchasing said products into believing that respondents' products originate with well known and reputable concerns contrary to the fact. Thereby substantial injury is done by respondents to competitors and substantial competition in interstate and foreign commerce.

The purchasing public buying radio sets, radio parts, and like products, marked or branded with the said well known names, letters, and symbols are of a common mind or belief, regardless of the selling price or of the source of supply, that said products are manufactured and sold by the lawful owners and users of said names, marks, brands, letters, and symbols, and when said names, marks, brands, letters, and symbols are placed upon radio sets, radio parts, and like products, such products are accepted as the products of those who have lawfully used and now use such names as marks, brands, letters, and symbols upon like products as set out in paragraph 6 hereof. The name or brand being dependent upon, influences the sale of said products.

Members of the purchasing public have purchased radio sets, radio parts, and like products branded and sold to the trade by respondents and others, which products were imitations of or less than the genuine products entered in trade by the lawful owners and users of said standard names, and have been deceived in such purchases.

The manufacture, sale and delivery by respondents set out and described in paragraphs 2, 3, and 4, of escutcheons and nameplates, and radio sets, radio parts and like products, marked and branded with the names, letters and symbols set out and described in paragraph 5, without authority or consent of the legal owners and lawful users thereof, places in the hands of others to whom said products are sold, the means whereby injury might be and is done to competitors dealing in the genuine products honestly marked. Injury to manufacturers and dealers in the legitimate products is suffered by the sale by respondents of said products falsely marked, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce. Injury to the lawful owners and users of said standard brands, names, marks and symbols is suffered because of the manufacture, sale, and competition of said respondents' said products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the said respondents, Metal Etching Corporation, M. Hermann, Crowe Nameplate and Manufacturing Company, E. C. Coolidge, I. Robinson Smith, King Trading Corporation, Royal Radio Company, Inc., Murray Auerbach, A. M. Frank, David (I.) Morrison, Harvard Radio Tube Testing Stations of Pennsylvania, Inc., Julius M. Schoenberg, Ross Distributing Company, Larry B. Ross, Sun Radio Service and Supply Corporation, Emanuel Rosensweig, Schiller Brothers, Inc., Louis S. Schiller, Peter Robbins, individually and trading under the names Robbins Radio Company and Ambassador Radio Company, and F. C. Scruggs individually and trading under the name Call Radio Company, are to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors and are unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce and constitute a violation of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST, ETC.

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended and supplemental complaint of the Commission, the answers of those respondents, upon whom the complaint was served, some of which answers deny the material allegations of the complaint and some of which admit the material allegations of the complaint, and the Commission being fully advised in the premises,

It is ordered, That the complaint issued herein be and the same is hereby dismissed as to the respondents, Etched Products Corporation and Albert Nierenberg and Walter H. Miller; Electro Chemical

It is further ordered, That said respondents shall within 60 days from notice hereof, file with this Commission a report in writing, stating in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF

JEAN G. SUBIN, ISRAEL SUBIN, AND JOHN N. KINDER-MAN, INDIVIDUALLY, AND TRADING AS AMERICAN REMEDY COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3013. Complaint, Dec. 10, 1936—Decision, Apr. 28, 1937

Where three individuals engaged in the distribution and sale of the acetyl salicylic acid product known as aspirin, in substantial competition with others engaged in distribution and sale of such products in commerce among the various States and in the District of Columbia, and including many who do not in any manner misrepresent their said products, either as to quality or efficacy in treatment and cure of ailments and conditions of the body; in advertising the same—

- (a) Represented that their said product was the purest acetyl salicylic acid, commonly known as aspirin, obtainable in America, and that it was registered in the Patent Office, through designation thereof as "American Purest Aspirin," and through statement "Registered U. S. Patent Office"; and
- (b) Represented that it was a competent and effective treatment and cure for colds and aches and pains of whatever nature;

Facts being it was not thus registered, and had not been, as believed by many by virtue of such supposed registration, tested and approved, and was not, by reason thereof, superior to similar products offered by competitors, and was no better than or different from product of many of its competitors, and was not a competent and effective treatment and cure for all colds, aches, and pains, in that it had no effect on causative factors of such conditions in the body;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations and implications were true and that products of competitors were inferior to and less effective than that of said individuals, and with result that a substantial number of the purchasing and consuming public, as a result of such erroneous beliefs thus engendered, bought their said product and thereby diverted trade to them from their competitors who truthfully advertise their products; to their injury and that of the public:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Jean G. Subin, Israel Subin, and John N. Kinderman, individually and trading as American Remedy Company, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Jean G. Subin, Israel Subin, and John N. Kinderman, individually and trading as American Remedy Company, a fictitious trade name registered under the requirements of an act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, are engaged in business with their principal office and place of business located at 131 Market Street and 301 Green Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Respondents are now, and have been for sometime in the past, engaged in the business of distributing and selling in commerce, as herein set out, a certain acetyl salicylic acid product designated by them as "American Purest Aspirin."

PAR. 2. Said respondents, being engaged in business as aforesaid, cause said aspirin when sold, to be transported from their principal place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located at various points in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents now maintain, and have maintained at all times, a constant current of trade and commerce in said aspirin so distributed and sold by them, among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are now, and have been, in substantial competition with other corporations, firms, and individuals likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling acetyl salicylic acid products such as aspirin, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. In the course and operation of said business, and for the purpose of inducing individuals, firms, and corporations to purchase said "American Purest Aspirin," respondents have caused the said product to be advertised in various ways and by various means through which representations as to said product are circulated throughout the various States of the United States. In all of said advertisements, respondents have caused the name of said product, to wit, "American Purest Aspirin" to be prominently and conspicuously displayed, together with the following statements:

Distributors.

The use of the word "Registered" in large and conspicuous lettering directly underneath the word "Aspirin" on the container in which the product is sold and in other advertising, has a capacity and tendency to lead the public into the erroneous belief that the product of the respondents has been registered in some way with the United States Patent office, and into the erroneous belief that by virtue of such registration the product itself is a superior brand of aspirin. Likewise the use of the word "Purest" is a conspicuous lettering directly underneath the word "American" and preceding the word "Aspirin" has a tendency to lead the public into the erroneous belief that the product of the respondents is the purest aspirin obtainable in America. The statement "For colds, aches and pains" used in said advertising and labeling as aforesaid, has a tendency to mislead and deceive the public into the erroneous belief that the product is a remedy and cure for all aches and pains when in truth and in fact, there are aches and pains not resulting from colds, from which no benefit would be derived by an individual through the taking of the respondent's product.

PAR. 5. The representations made by respondents with respect to the nature and effect of their aspirin when used as above set forth are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading and untrue. Said product is not fully effective for the treatment of pains and cold and it has no effect on the causative factors of such conditions of the human body. Its use does not always bring prompt relief to those suffering from the conditions named, viz, colds, aches and pains. The representation of the respondents with reference to the word "Registered" is false, misleading, and untrue, as the product has never been registered in the U. S. Patent Office, and the further representations that the product is America's Purest Aspirin is likewise false and misleading and untrue, as the product is not the purest aspirin obtainable in America.

PAR. 6. There are among respondents' competitors many who manufacture, distribute and sell aspirin who, in no way, misrepresent that their aspirin is the purest aspirin obtainable on the American market when it is not; that their product has been registered in the United States Patent Office, when it has not or that their respective aspirin has a quality and character or an effectiveness in use for the treatment of various conditions of the human body which it does not have. They do not make unlimited claims for the administering of their product for the relief of all types of colds, aches, and pains in the human body and do not falsely disparage the aspirin products of their respective competitors.

PAR. 7. Each and all of the false and misleading statements and representations made by the respondents in designating and describing their product and the effectiveness of their product, as hereinabove set out, in offering for sale and selling "American Purest Aspirin" as a registered product, and as "America's Purest Aspirin" was, and is, calculated to, and had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true, and into the further erroneous belief that aspirin products of its competitors are inferior to, and less effective than "American Purest Aspirin." Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs, induced by the acts and misrepresentations of the respondent, as hereinabove detailed, a substantial number of the consuming public has purchased a substantial volume of respondents' "American Purest Aspirin" with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondents from competitors likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling aspirin who truthfully advertise and represent their products and the effectiveness of said products in use. As a result thereof, injury has been, and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 8. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondents have been, and are, all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on the 10th day of December 1936, issued and subsequently served its complaint in this proceeding upon the respondents, Jean G. Subin, Israel Subin, and John N. Kinderman, individually and trading as American Remedy Company, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondents' motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and substitute answer, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. That respondents, Jean G. Subin, Israel Subin, and John N. Kinderman, are individuals trading as American Remedy Company. Respondents have their office and principal place of business at 301 Green Street, Philadelphia. Respondents are now, and for more than one year last past have been, engaged in the business of distributing and selling in commerce, a certain acetyl salicylic acid product, commonly known as aspirin, designated by them as "American Purest Aspirin."

PAR. 2. Said respondents cause said product, when sold, to be transported from their place of business in the State of Pennsylvania to purchasers thereof located at various points in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondents now maintain, and have maintained at all times mentioned herein, a constant current of trade and commerce in said product so distributed and sold by them, among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are now, and have been, in substantial competition with corporations, firms, and individuals likewise engaged in the business of distributing and selling acetyl salicylic acid products such as aspirin, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

There are, among the competitors of respondents, many who sell and distribute acetyl salicylic acid, commonly known as aspirin, in said commerce, who do not in any manner misrepresent their said products either as to the quality thereof or as to the efficacy thereof in the treatment and cure of ailments and conditions that exist in the human body.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business in said commerce, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of their products, the respondents cause advertisements containing representations and implications in regard to said product and its efficacy in the treatment and cure of certain ailments and conditions to be circulated in the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In all such advertisements the respondents make the following statements:

Conclusion

By the means and in the manner above stated, the respondents represent and imply that their said product has been and is registered with the United States Patent Office; that it is the purest acetyl salicylic acid, commonly known as aspirin, obtainable in America; and that it is a competent and effective treatment and cure for colds, and aches and pains of whatever nature.

PAR. 5. Respondents' said product is not registered in the United States Patent Office; it is not the purest acetyl salicylic acid obtainable in America, and is no better than or different from the product of many of its competitors; it is not a competent and effective treatment and cure for all colds, aches and pains, in that it has no effect on the causative factors of such conditions in the human body.

Many prospective purchasers of respondents' product believe that the registration of such a product with the United States Patent Office indicates that such a product has been tested and approved and is superior to similar products offered for sale and sold by competitors, and many prospective purchasers believe that the product of the respondents is the purest type of that product sold on the American market, and that such product is a competent and effective treatment and cure for all colds, aches, and pains.

PAR. 6. The above and foregoing representations and implications, so made and used by the respondents in connection with the sale and distribution of their said product in such commerce, as hereinabove set out, have had and do have the tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations and implications are true, and into the erroneous belief that the products of the competitors of the respondent are inferior to and are less effective than the product of the respondents. As a result of such erroneous beliefs, so engendered, a substantial number of the purchasing and consuming public purchase the respondents' said product, thereby diverting trade to the respondents from their said competitors, who truthfully advertise their products, to the injury of such competitors and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Jean G. Subin, Israel Subin, and John N. Kinderman, individually and trading as American Remedy Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of the Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes.”

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents, Jean G. Subin, Israel Subin, and John N. Kinderman, their representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of that certain acetyl salicylic acid product, commonly known as aspirin, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or by implication:

1. That said product is registered in the Patent Office of the United States of America.
2. That said product is the purest aspirin in America and superior to other products composed of similar ingredients.
3. That said product is a cure for colds.
4. That said product is a competent and effective treatment or palliative for all aches and pains.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2812. Complaint, May 21, 1936—Decision, April 29, 1937

Where a company, held out as a membership corporation and used as a corporate instrumentality by the fourteen "member" concerns and the ten "affiliate" concerns, which the former associated with them in their purpose and plan of preventing and eliminating, as far as possible, piracy of design and style in women's hats; and said "member" and "affiliate" concerns, engaged in the designing and manufacturing of women's hats at their respective factories in New York and California, and in selling their said products to retailers located in the several States, and in substantial competition with one another, but for the understandings and agreements below set out, and included among the recognized leaders in the field of women's hats as respects style and design, and with their said products, in great demand by the purchasing public throughout the United States, normally required, to an extent, at least by high-grade retail dealers in such products in New York and elsewhere in the United States, in order to offer a full line thereof; in pursuance of their aforesaid plan and purpose and the agreement of said "affiliate" concerns to work in unison and cooperation with said corporate instrumentality or "Guild" and its said "members" in making effective the rulings of the former as respects style piracy, and their agreement to make no sales to and show no merchandise to any retail store which had failed to sign the Guild's agreement or so-called "Declaration of Cooperation"—

- (a) Solicited and secured, through a regular series of circular letters and follow-up literature designed to induce and coerce retailers, and advising them that the Guild membership comprised practically every creative firm in the industry in question, and that only a store subscribing could inspect or purchase their hats, such agreements or so-called "Declarations of Cooperation" from some 1600 high-grade retail dealers in women's hats in the various States, under which agreements or declarations the dealer undertook and agreed (1) not to purchase from manufacturers hats which were copies of designs originated and made by them, or alleged to be such copies, as established through Guild's registration bureau and the committee provided for, and (2) to stamp their orders for hats with a statement that such orders were placed upon the seller's warranty that the styles of such products being purchased were not copies of styles originated by them, and that purchaser reserved right to return any merchandise which was not as warranted, and agreed with one another to make it a condition precedent to the sale of their products to retailers that they must be signatories to and agree to be bound by and act in accordance with aforesaid declarations, and announced that they would refuse, and did refuse, to sell their products to retail dealers of stylish millinery who had failed or refused to sign or to cooperate in said declaration and plan and agreement for elimination of style piracy, and brought about return of hats under aforesaid warranty in cases in which goods in question were declared by aforesaid Guild to be copies originated by certain of such "members" or "affiliates";

- (b) Failed and refused to sell their products to retailers, on the ground or for the reason that such retail dealers (1) purchased, or had purchased, from manufacturers women's hats that were alleged by them to be copies of hats which they originated and made, or (2) failed or refused to stamp their orders for women's hats purchased from manufacturers with statement that such orders were placed upon seller's warranty that styles of goods being purchased were not copies of styles originated by them, and that purchasers reserved right to return any merchandise which was not as warranted; and
- (c) Expelled from their membership any member or affiliate member, on the ground or for the reason that such member or affiliate solicited sale of, or sold, women's hats to a retailer who failed to sign above agreement or declaration or failed or refused to cooperate in the methods therein set forth;

With result of unduly hindering competition in creating a monopoly in sale of women's hats in interstate commerce, and with capacity and tendency so to do, through (1) limiting manufacturers of stylish hats for women as to the outlets of their products and limiting retail dealers as to their source of supply, (2) depriving public of benefits of normal price competition among retailers of stylish hats for women, (3) preventing such retailers from purchasing their requirements of such products in interstate commerce from manufacturers other than those subject to above set forth limitation and restriction, (4) increasing price of such hats to retailers and consumers through protection of profits resulting from their activities to eliminate from trade alleged copies of styles which they claimed and adjudged themselves to have originated, (5) placing in their hands control of business practices of manufacturers of such hats, to extent of limiting and, as far as possible, eliminating retail outlet for copied styles of manufacturers who copy styles originated by them, (6) eliminating from sale in interstate commerce women's hats which are copies of styles and designs claimed to have been originated by them or others and registered with their said Guild, and (7) limiting interstate commerce in high-class women's hats to models originated and designed by the manufacturer thereof, or to copies produced by permission of alleged originators thereof:

Held, That such practices, under the circumstances set forth, were to the injury and prejudice of the public and competitors and retailers of such products, and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., and its members, and Uptown Creators' Guild and its members, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., is a membership corporation organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal office and place of business located at 711 Fifth Avenue, in the city of New York, in said State. Its membership consists of corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships, as hereinafter described, all of whom are engaged in designing and manufacturing ladies' hats at factories located in the State of New York and elsewhere in the United States and especially reproductions of hats originally designed, manufactured, and sold by French milliners, and in the sale of said ladies' hats to retail dealers located in States other than the States of manufacture, causing said ladies' hats, when sold, to be transported from their respective places of manufacture to the purchasers thereof. There has been and now is a constant current of trade and commerce in said products between the members of said Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., and retailers in said hats located throughout the several States of the United States. In the course and conduct of their business the members of said Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., were, prior to the organization of said Guild in competition with each other and were at all times herein referred to in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of similar products in commerce as hereinabove set out. The membership of said Millinery Quality Guild, Inc. is and has been as follows:

Cooper-Russell, Inc., a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 15 West 39th Street, city of New York, in said State;

Farrington and Evans, Inc., a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 711 Fifth Avenue, city of New York, in said State;

Dave Herstein Company, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 711 Fifth Avenue, city of New York, in said State;

Simon Millinery Company, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of California, with its principal place of business located at 989 Market Street, in the city of San Francisco, in the State of California.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Uptown Creators' Guild, is a voluntary unincorporated association of corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in designing, manufacturing, selling and distributing millinery, including ladies' hats, to retail dealers located in States other than the State of manufacture, causing said ladies' hats, when sold, to be transported from the respective places of manufacture in the State of New York or State of manufacture to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States. There has been and now is a constant current of trade and commerce in said ladies' hats between the members of said unincorporated association and retail dealers in said hats. In the course and conduct of their respective businesses, the members of said Uptown Creators' Guild were, prior to the time when they began to cooperate with Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., as hereinafter set out, in competition with each other and were at all times herein referred to in competition with corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of similar products. The membership of said Uptown Creators' Guild at the time hereinafter referred to was as follows:

Henri Bendel, Inc., a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 10 West 57th Street, city of New York, in said State;

Lilly Dache, Inc., a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 485 Madison Avenue, city of New York, in said State;

John-Frederics, Inc., a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 501 Madison Avenue, city of New York, in said State;

Minnie Kramer, Inc., a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 501 Madison Avenue, city of New York, in said State;

La Mode Chez Tappe, Inc., a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 19 West 57th Street, city of New York, in said State;

Nicole de Paris, Inc., a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business at 7 East 55th Street, city of New York, in said State;

Florence Reichman, Inc., a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 16 East 52nd Street, city of New York, in said State;

Pauline Kahn, an individual trading under the name and style of Mme. Pauline, with her principal place of business located at 6 East 53rd Street, city of New York, in said State;

Marion Valle, Inc., a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business located at 501 Madison Avenue, city of New York, in said State.

PAR. 3. The respondent corporations, individuals, firms and partnerships, hereinabove mentioned, who make up and constitute the Millinery Quality Guild, Inc. and Uptown Creators' Guild are originators of the leading styles of the highest class ladies' hats and are manufacturers and sellers of the highest class ladies' hats. No member of either Guild originates or manufactures hats to sell at wholesale at less than $8.00 per hat. Said members of both said Guilds maintain designing departments and employ highly paid designers who are constantly engaged in the origination of new styles of hats. Such designers at intervals journey to Paris, France, to observe the trend of styles and to secure original French models, from which they later devise various adaptations which are called and known as "originations." The style element is the outstanding factor in the sale of ladies' hats and the late style hats, such as are sold and distributed by the members of both Guilds, are in great demand by the purchasing public throughout the United States. The respondent members of said Guilds are the recognized leaders in the field of ladies' hats so far as style and design are concerned and a majority of the high grade retail dealers and outlets are required to procure at least some of their models from the manufacturers in one or both of said Guilds in order to offer a full line of ladies' hats.

PAR. 4. The professed purpose of the organization of Millinery Quality Guild, Inc. was to prevent piracy of style and design of ladies' hats sold and distributed by members of the Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., as hereinabove set out. Acting in pursuance of such professed purpose, said Millinery Quality Guild, Inc. and its members have adopted and still have in effect the following methods and practices:

(a) The establishment and operation of a department in the Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., known as "Registration Bureau," wherein members of the Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., and no others, had and have the right and privilege of filing and registering the original model or models designed by them. By and through the understanding of the members of the Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., it is mutually agreed by all the members of said Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., that the acceptance of any of its members' models or designs for registration constituted and constitutes a conclusive determination by the Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., that such design or designs was or were original designs and thereafter any imitation or copying thereof is to be considered and treated as design piracy. It is further agreed and understood between the members of the Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., that when registration of any design is granted to any member of said Guild, the hat and design are the particular property of the member which had registered them.

(b) Said Millinery Quality Guild, Inc. and its members further solicited and secured from a large number of retail customers in the various States of the United States an agreement styled "Declaration of Cooperation" between such retail dealers and the Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., said agreement being incorporated herein and made a part hereof by reference.

(c) Sought and secured the cooperation of the unincorporated group styling themselves the Uptown Creators' Guild in carrying out and enforcing the purpose of its organization, and in that behalf secured the signature of the constituent members of said Uptown Creators' Guild to a certain agreement:

The firms whose signatures are attached hereto have agreed to unite in a circle under a caption of their own choosing. This organization to work in unison with the members of the Millinery Quality Guild on the questions of Style Piracy and the effort to eliminate unfair advertising. The agreement being that the members of this affiliated group will work in unison with the Millinery Quality Guild in making effective the rulings regarding style piracy and unfair advertising. They will display the same sign in their show rooms, stating that on and after July 16 (1934) no sales will be made and no merchandise will be shown to any store who has failed to sign our agreement regarding Style Piracy which is as follows:

This order is placed upon the seller's warranty that the above styles of hats are not copies of styles originated by members of the Millinery Quality Guild, Inc. The purchaser reserves the right to return any merchandise which is not as warranted.

PAR. 5. The constituent members of said Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., for more than three years last past, and the constituent members of the unincorporated association styling themselves the Uptown Creators' Guild, from and after the date of signature by them of the agreement hereinabove set forth, by combination, agreement, and concert of action, made it a condition precedent of the sale of their products to retailers that such retailers must have signed the "Declaration of Cooperation," hereinabove referred to; and by agreement, combination and concerted action, have refused to sell their products to any retailer or retailers who have failed or refused to enlist in the plan and sign the "Declaration of Cooperation." In and by the agreement signed by the retailers of ladies' hats, designated "Declaration of Cooperation," the members of both of said Guilds have coerced and compelled, and now coerce and compel, retail dealers who are desirous of selling such stylish hats as are only produced by the members of said Guilds to refuse to purchase said ladies' hats from manufacturers who have copied hats adjudged and reported by said Guilds to have been designed by said members of said Guilds and to otherwise cooperate with said Guilds in removing from the market hats of manufacturers who are not cooperating with said Guilds in their style protective program set forth herein, under penalty of being blacklisted and boycotted by members of the said Guilds. In and by such agreement styled the "Declaration of Cooperation," retailers are coerced and compelled to agree to recognize the property rights in styles created by Guild members and to refrain from purchasing copies of pirated styles created by the members of that association, and to stamp each millinery order made by them with the reading matter shown in paragraph two of the agreement hereinabove set out, and in such a manner as to notify the seller that the order is placed only upon the manufacturer's warranty that the hats so ordered are not copies of styles originated by members of the Millinery Quality Guild, Inc. and the members of the Uptown Creators' Guild. Said Millinery Quality Guild, Inc. claims the right, and by common understanding and agreement of its members and the members of the Uptown Creators' Guild has the right, to expel from its membership and to deprive of the benefit of the protection of its system of registration, and its system of style protection generally, any member of the Millinery Quality Guild, Inc. or Uptown Creators' Guild who solicits the business of or sells its products to a retailer who fails or refuses to sign its "Declaration of Cooperation," and it has so expelled one of the constituent members of the Uptown Creators' Guild for the cause stated, and advertised the fact of such expulsion in periodicals, having an interstate circulation, and by circular letters of notification addressed to approximately 1600 retailers in various States of the United States who had signed the "Declaration of Cooperation" and who were cooperating with the plan of the Millinery Quality Guild, Inc.

PAR. 6. The capacity, tendency, purpose, and result of the combination, conspiracy and agreement, and the acts and practices performed thereunder, by said respondents and the retail dealers hereinabove described, have been and now are to unduly and unreasonably restrain commerce by limiting manufacturers of stylish hats as to the outlets of their products and retail dealers as to the sources of supply; to deprive the public of the benefits of normal price competition among retailers of stylish hats by restraining said retailers, under threat of boycott, who desire to purchase the products of the members of the Millinery Quality Guild, Inc. and the Uptown Creators' Guild from making any purchases unless such retailers sign and enter into the Guilds' agreements; to prevent retailers in stylish millinery from freely purchasing their requirements of said products in interstate commerce from the manufacturers thereof; to substantially increase the price of such hats to the retailers and to the consuming public; to place in the hands of the Millinery Quality Guild, Inc. control over the business practices of the manufacturers of stylish hats for women and the power to exclude from this industry those who do not conform to the rules and regulations established by said Guild and thus to unduly and unreasonably restrain interstate trade and commerce in stylish millinery and to tend to create a monopoly in the said Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., its members and those cooperating with it.

PAR. 7. The foregoing alleged acts and practices of respondents have been and still are to the prejudice of the buying public generally and the customers and competitors of the members of said respondents in particular and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on the 21st day of May 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., Cooper-Russell, Inc., Farrington and Evans, Inc., Dave Herstein Company; G. Howard Hodge; Edgar J. Lorie, Inc., L. G. Meyerson, Inc., Scherman Hat Company; Oriole Hat Company; John Trinner, Inc., Vibo Company, Inc., Vogue Hat Co., Simon Millinery Company; Lilly Dache, Inc., Gladys and Belle, Inc., Hatnegie Hats, Inc., Jay-Thorpe, Inc., John Frederics, Inc., Minnie Kramer, Inc., Nicole de Paris, Inc., Florence Reichman, Inc., Marion Valle, Inc., Henri Bendel, Inc., Peggy Hoyt, Inc., La Mode Chez Tappe, corporations; Sergin F. Victor, an individual trading as Serge; Pauline Kahn, an individual trading as Mme. Pauline, Harry Solomons and May F. Solomons, copartners trading as Harry Solomons and Sons, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce, in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of said complaint were introduced by Astor Hogg, attorney for the Commission before John W. Norwood, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Lowell M. Birrell, Maurice M. Cohn, Sanford Jarrett, Lewis G. Bernstein, and Strauss, Reich & Boyer, attorneys for the respondents, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint, and in opposition thereto, and the oral argument of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., herein-after referred to as the "Guild" is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of New York with its principal office and place of business located at 711 Fifth Avenue, in the city of New York in said State. Said Guild is now, and for more than three years last past has been, under the domination and control of respondent hat manufacturers hereinafter referred to as "member" respondents, representatives of said member respondents acting as directors of said Guild. Since the month of July 1934, said Guild has held itself out to the public to be a membership corporation with a membership composed of all of the concerns hereinafter named as "member" respondents. Said Guild has been used by all of the said "member" respondents as an instrumentality for the carrying out of the plan, purpose and agreement relative to the prevention of style piracy hereinafter described. The said "member" respondents are:

Cooper-Russell, Inc., a corporation, with its principal place of business at 15 West 39th Street, New York, N. Y.;

Farrington and Evans, Inc., a corporation, with its principal place of business at 711 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y.;

Dave Herstein Company, a corporation, with its principal place of business at 711 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.;

G. Howard Hodge, a corporation, with its principal place of business at 711 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y.;

Edgar J. Lorie, Inc., a corporation with its principal place of business at 711 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y.;

L. G. Meyerson, Inc., a corporation, with its principal place of business at 711 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.;

Scherman Hat Company, a corporation, with its principal place of business at 5 East 37th Street, New York, N. Y.;

Sergin F. Victor, an individual trading under the name and style of "Serge", with his principal place of business at 15 West 39th Street, New York, N. Y.;

Harry Solomons and May F. Solomons, copartners trading under the name and style of Harry Solomons and Son, with their principal place of business at 711 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.;

Oriole Hat Company, a corporation, with its principal place of business at 15 West 39th Street, New York, N. Y.;

John Trinner, Inc., a corporation, doing business under the name and style of "Trinner Hats", with its principal place of business at 711 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.;

Vibo Company, Inc., a corporation, with its principal place of business at 1 West 39th Street, New York, N. Y.;

Vogue Hat Company, a corporation, with its principal place of business at 711 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.;

Simon Millinery Company, a corporation, existing under the laws of the State of California, with its principal place of business at 989 Market Street, San Francisco, Calif.

PAR. 2. Respondent corporations and individuals hereinafter named and described in this paragraph and hereafter referred to as "affiliate" respondents are:

Lilly Dache, Inc., a corporation, with its principal place of business at 485 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.;

Gladys and Belle, Inc., a corporation, with its principal place of business at 485 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.;

Hatnegle Hats, Inc., a corporation, with its principal place of business at 711 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.;

Jay-Thorpe, Inc., a corporation, with its principal place of business at 24 West 57th Street, New York, N. Y.;

John-Fredericks, Inc., a corporation, with its principal place of business at 501 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.;

Minnie Kramer, Inc., a corporation, with its principal place of business at 501 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.;

Nicole de Paris, Inc., a corporation, with its principal place of business at 7 East 55th Street, New York, N. Y.;

Florence Reichman, Inc., a corporation, with its principal place of business at 16 East 52nd Street, New York, N. Y.;

Pauline Kahn, an individual trading under the name and style of Madam Pauline with her principal place of business at 6 East 53rd Street, New York, N. Y.;

Marion Valle, Inc., a corporation, with its principal place of business at 501 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

PAR. 3. All of said respondents mentioned in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof, except the Guild, are engaged in designing and manufacturing women's hats at their respective factories located in the States of New York and California in the United States and in the sale of said women's hats to retail dealers located in the several States of the United States other than the States of manufacture. Said respondents cause said women's hats, when sold, to be transported in interstate commerce from their respective places of manufacture to the purchasers thereof located in practically every State in the Union, and in so doing there is a constant current of trade and commerce maintained by said respondents. In the carrying on of their said respective businesses said respondents are engaged in substantial competition with each other, except as to the understandings and agreements hereinafter set forth, and with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the distribution, sale and transportation of similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 4. All of the said respondents hereinbefore named other than the said Guild form a substantial majority of the originators of the leading styles of high grade millinery for women. In general the hats manufactured and sold by said respondents are sold at wholesale for a price of about $8.00 per hat, but some of the "member" respondents manufacture hats to sell at wholesale at a lower price. Some manufacturers of women's hats, including said respondents, originate their own designs for the hats they make. Some manufacturers do not originate their own designs but copy the designs of other manufacturers. The copying of other manufacturers' designs is commonly known in the industry as style piracy. Manufacturers who originate their own designs are known in the industry as original creators. Many of the said respondents maintain designing departments and employ designers or stylists who are constantly engaged in the origination of new styles of hats for women. Many of such designers visit Paris, France to observe the prevailing French styles and fashions and to determine the style trends. After making such observations and determining the style trends, said designers devise, for their respective manufacturers, design adaptations which are used by said respondents in making their respective hats. Designs prepared in this way are considered in said industry original creations, even though they may not be novel in the sense that nothing like them has ever existed before.

The style element is one of the most important factors in the sale of women's hats. The respondents herein are among the recognized leaders in the field of women's hats so far as style and design are concerned. The leading styles of hats, such as are sold and distributed by said respondents, are in great demand by the purchasing public throughout the United States. The high grade retail dealers in women's hats, both in New York and elsewhere in the United States, in order to offer a full line of women's hats are normally required to procure at least some of their models from the said respondents.

PAR. 5. In the year 1934 the said "member" respondents acting directly and in cooperation with each other and acting through the Guild, entered upon and carried out a plan or purpose to prevent insofar as possible piracy of the style and design of women's hats manufactured and sold by said respondents. In order to more completely effectuate and accomplish said purpose the said "member" respondents sought and secured the cooperation of the "affiliate" respondents. In carrying out and enforcing their said plan and purpose to eliminate piracy of design and style of women's hats said "member" respondents procured from said "affiliate" respondents an agreement wherein and whereby each and all of said "affiliate" respondents agreed to work in unison and cooperation with said Guild and its said "member" respondents in making effective the rulings of said Guild regarding style piracy, and an agreement that on and after July 16, 1934, they would make no sales to and would show no merchandise to any retail store which had failed to sign a certain agreement entitled a "Declaration of Cooperation" promulgated by said Guild and hereinafter fully set out.

PAR. 6. To facilitate the operation of said plan and purpose a Registration Bureau was established by said Guild cooperating with "member" respondents under the supervision of its officers and employees wherein the creators of original designs and styles might register their models. Once the model is accepted by the Registration Bureau it is the usual practice of said respondents to regard such model as an original design and style of the person registering same, and any imitation or copying thereof in the ordinary course of business is treated by said respondents as design piracy. However, in the case of any alleged design piracy such filing and registration is not deemed conclusive but the matter is determined by a committee consisting of a representative of one or more of the "member" respondents or by the officers and employees of the said Guild.

The said "member" respondents and "affiliate" respondents in order to make their said plan and purpose effective solicited and secured from approximately 1600 high grade retail dealers in women's hats located in various States of the United States the agreement hereinbefore referred to as the "Declaration of Cooperation", which is set forth in full as follows:

DECLARATION OF COOPERATION

BETWEEN ----- AND THE MILLINERY QUALITY
GUILD, INC. IN THEIR EFFORT TO STAMP OUT STYLE PIRACY IN THE MILLINERY INDUSTRY.

MILLINERY QUALITY GUILD, INC.

452 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN: We wish to express our desire to cooperate with the members of your organization who have decided to confine the sale of their individual merchandise to such retailers as by their conduct indicate their business policy to be that they will recognize the property rights in styles created by your members, and will refuse to countenance so-called "Style Piracy". Believing the principles declared by your members to be proper for the protection of the public, the retailer and the manufacturer, we wish to go on record as stating our fixed business policy.

We will instruct all of our buyers in Millinery that we will not buy any copies of pirated styles created by members of your association; that we will explain to them the great damage which the spreading of this practice is doing to our business and ask their complete cooperation.

Furthermore, we will stamp all of our millinery orders with the following clause:

"This order is placed upon the seller's warranty that the above styles of hats are not copies of styles originated by the members of The Millinery Quality Guild, Inc. The purchaser reserves the right to return any merchandise which is not as warranted."

We welcome this opportunity to put ourselves on record to lend you our fullest cooperation for we know it will lessen the confusion in our business and add to the profits.

Very truly yours,

 Store's name
 By -----

 Store's address.

In soliciting and securing said agreements the said respondents, acting by and through the said Guild, employed a regular series of circular letters and follow-up literature designed to induce and coerce retailers to sign the "Declaration of Cooperation." In and by the circular letters sent out to the various retail stores throughout the United States, such retail stores were advised that the membership of the Guild comprised practically every important creative firm in the millinery industry and that only those stores which had subscribed to the "Declaration of Cooperation" can inspect or purchase the women's hats of respondents.

PAR. 7. From and after the date when the "affiliated" member respondents entered into the said agreement with the said "member" respondents, they and said "member" respondents, by mutual understanding, agreement, combination and concert of action made it a condition precedent to the sale of their products to retail dealers throughout the United States that such retailers must be signatories to the "Declaration of Cooperation," and must agree to be bound by and act in accordance with the principles of prevention of style piracy announced in the said "Declaration of Cooperation." Respondents other than the Guild, publicly announced that they would refuse to sell, and in certain cases did refuse to sell their products to retail dealers in stylish millinery who had failed or refused to sign the "Declaration of Cooperation" or who had failed to cooperate in the plan and agreement for the elimination of style piracy.

Findings

24 F. T. C.

In and by the foregoing plan and agreement said respondents have attempted to compel and still are attempting to compel and have compelled retail dealers who are desirous of selling hats manufactured by said respondents to make it a condition precedent to the purchase of women's hats from millinery manufacturers that the order for same be placed only upon the seller's warranty that the hats purchased are not copies of styles originated by respondents, and that in case the warranty fails then the merchandise may be returned. Pursuant to this method the said respondents have, in certain cases, brought about the return of women's hats by retail stores to manufacturers from whom they had purchased the same when such goods were declared by the respondent Guild to be copies originated by certain of respondents.

Pursuant to said plan, purpose and agreement said respondents agreed among themselves to expel from their membership, and to deprive of the benefits of their system of registration, and their system of style protection generally, any member or affiliate member of the Guild who solicits the business of or sells products to a retailer who has failed or refused to sign the said "Declaration of Cooperation." In one instance the respondents did expel Milgrim Hats, Inc., a corporation engaged in the manufacture and sale of women's hats in interstate commerce from their membership upon determination by the respondents that Milgrim Hats, Inc., was not abiding by the terms of said agreement, and notified the retail outlets and the public in general that they had expelled said concern from their membership.

PAR. 8. The respondents Peggy Hoyt, Inc., Henri Bendel, Inc., and La Mode Chez Tappe, all of New York City, are not shown to have participated in the acts complained of and no finding is made against them.

PAR. 9. The capacity, tendency, and result of the said purpose plan and agreement hereinbefore set forth, and the acts and practices performed thereunder by the respondents, as hereinbefore set forth, have been and now are unduly to hinder competition and to create monopoly in the sale of women's hats in interstate commerce:

(a) By limiting manufacturers of stylish hats for women as to the outlets of their products and by limiting retail dealers as to their source of supply;

(b) By depriving the public of the benefits of normal price competition among retailers of stylish hats for women, and

(c) By preventing the retailers of stylish hats for women from purchasing their requirements of said products in interstate commerce from manufacturers except subject to the limitation and restriction of this plan and agreement as hereinbefore set forth, and

Order

(d) By increasing the price of stylish hats for women to retailers and consumers through the protection of profits resulting from respondents' activities to eliminate from the trade alleged copies of styles which they claim and adjudge themselves to have originated;

(e) By placing in the hands of respondents control of the business practices of the manufacturers of stylish hats for women to the extent of limiting and as far as possible, eliminating the retail outlet for copied styles of manufacturers who copy the styles originated by the respondents;

(f) By eliminating from sale in interstate commerce women's hats which are copies of styles and designs claimed to have been originated by respondents or others and registered with the Millinery Quality Guild, Inc.; and

(g) By limiting interstate commerce in high class women's hats to models originated and designed by the manufacturer thereof or to copies produced by permission of the alleged originators thereof.

CONCLUSION

The practices of the respondents as set forth in the foregoing findings as to the facts, in the circumstances therein set forth, are to the injury and prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors and retailers of women's hats, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce in violation of the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents, Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., Cooper-Russell, Inc., Farrington and Evans, Inc., Dave Herstein Company; G. Howard Hodge; Edgar J. Lorie, Inc., L. G. Meyerson, Inc., Scherman Hat Company; Oriole Hat Company; John Trinner, Inc., Vibo Company, Inc., Vogue Hat Co., Simon Millinery Company; Lilly Dache, Inc., Gladys and Belle, Inc., Hatnegie Hats, Inc., Jay-Thorpe, Inc., John Frederics, Inc., Minnie Kramer, Inc., Nicole de Paris, Inc., Florence Reichman, Inc., Marion Valle, Inc., corporations; Sergin F. Victor, an individual trading as Serge; Pauline Kahn, an individual trading as Mme. Pauline; Harry Solomons and May F. Solomons, copartners trading as Harry Solomons and Sons, their respective officers, representatives, agents, and employees, or any group of such respondents or their agents, either with or without the cooperation of persons not parties in this proceeding, cease and desist from following a common course of action pursuant to a mutual understanding, plan, or agreement for the purpose or with the effect, directly or indirectly, of lessening competition in interstate commerce in women's hats, by the following methods, or any one or more thereof, to wit:

1. Soliciting or securing from retail dealers in women's hats any "Declaration of Cooperation" or agreement or understanding whatsoever wherein or whereby said retail dealers undertake or agree to refrain from purchasing, or to refuse to purchase from manufacturers, women's hats that are copies of designs originated and manufactured by respondents, or women's hats alleged by any of the respondents to be such copies; or wherein or whereby said dealers undertake or agree to stamp their orders for women's hats with a statement that such orders are placed upon the seller's warranty that the styles of women's hats being purchased are not copies of styles originated by respondents, and that the purchasers reserve the right to return any merchandise which is not as warranted.
2. Failing or refusing to sell their products to retail dealers on the ground or for the reason that such retail dealers purchase or have purchased from manufacturers women's hats that are alleged by respondents to be copies of women's hats originated and manufactured by respondents.
3. Failing or refusing to sell their products to retail dealers who fail or refuse to stamp their orders for women's hats purchased from manufacturers, with the statement that such orders are placed upon the seller's warranty that the styles of women's hats being purchased are not copies of styles originated by respondents, and that the purchasers reserve the right to return any merchandise which is not as warranted.
4. Expelling from the membership of said Millinery Quality Guild, Inc., any member or affiliate member on the ground or for the reason that such member or affiliate member solicited the sale of, or sold women's hats to a retailer who failed to sign the agreement set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, or failed or refused to cooperate in the methods therein set forth.

5. Utilizing any cooperative means among themselves or with retail dealers to accomplish or carry out the methods prohibited in paragraphs 1, 2, and 3 hereof.

It is further ordered, That respondents shall within 60 days after service upon them of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

It is further ordered, That the complaint as against respondents Peggy Hoyt, Inc., Henri Bendel, Inc., and La Mode Chez Tappe be dismissed on the ground that the allegations of the complaint are not sustained as to them.

IN THE MATTER OF
HEC BARTH, TRADING AS HEC BARTH LABORATORIES AND DARK-EYES LABORATORIES

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2608. Complaint, Oct. 31, 1935—Decision, Apr. 30, 1937

Where an individual engaged in sale, under name "Dark Eyes," of a combination two-bottle eyebrow and eyelash stain containing silver nitrate and pyrogallol and prepared in black and in brown, and distributed in practically every State through department stores, drug stores, and beauty shops, and, as thus engaged, in substantial competition with others similarly engaged in sale and distribution, or in manufacture, sale, and distribution, of eyebrow and eyelash stains or dyes in commerce among the several States and in the District of Columbia—

- (a) Represented, in advertising his said products in newspapers and periodicals of general circulation and by radio, that the same was safe and harmless and a new discovery, and that use thereof gave permanent beauty to, or was a permanent darkener of, eyebrows and eyelashes, facts being said product was a caustic which would destroy tissue, possibility of danger through use thereof was enhanced if applied by an unskilled person or in an unskilled manner, and it was neither safe nor harmless nor a new discovery, new growth made new applications necessary, and it did not accordingly give permanent beauty nor permanently darken the eyelashes and eyebrows through use thereof; and
- (b) Represented that he owned, operated, or controlled a laboratory in which said product was made, facts being product in question was made for him by a company which owned the formula thereof, and in which he owned no interest and over which he exercised no control;

With effect of misleading a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such representations were true, and with result that such public, as a consequence of mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by such false and misleading statements, brought a substantial volume of his products, and trade was unfairly diverted to him from competitors likewise engaged in sale and distribution of such darkeners or stains, or in the manufacture, sale and distribution thereof, and who truthfully represent the effects of their products when applied to the eyebrows and eyelashes; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Complaint

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Hec Barth, doing business under the trade names of Hec Barth Laboratories and Dark Eyes Laboratories, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been or is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereto would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Hec Barth, is an individual trading as Hec Barth Laboratories and Dark Eyes Laboratories, with his office and principal place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois.

At and from said city and under said trade names, he is now and for several years last past, has been engaged in the sale of beautifying preparations, among which is a product sold by him for use by women in the coloring of their eyelashes and eyebrows under the name of "Dark Eyes."

PAR. 2. This said product, described in paragraph 1 hereof, is sold by respondent to wholesalers and jobbers of beautifying products, to drug stores, beauty parlors, barbershops, and to ultimate consumers thereof, the latter being supplied through the United States mails. Said drug stores sell the same to the consuming public. Said beauty parlors and barber shops use the same in the coloring of the eyelashes and eyebrows of women.

Respondent, when said product is so sold by him, causes the same to be shipped from the said city of Chicago, State of Illinois, into and through other states of the United States, to his said purchasers at their respective places of business or residence.

PAR. 3. In the sale of the said "Dark Eyes," respondent is in substantial competition with corporations, copartnerships and individuals engaged in selling and offering for sale in interstate commerce of compounds, chemicals or materials for use and used in the coloring or dyeing of eyelashes and eyebrows of women.

PAR. 4. Respondent, in aid of the sale of said "Dark Eyes," has advertised and is now advertising the same in newspapers, magazines and periodicals of general circulation in the United States and in pamphlets, booklets, letters, printed testimonials, and other printed matter and by and through the use of photographs and other pictures, caused by the respondent to be circulated among said customers and prospective customers, and on labels attached to the containers thereof and in and through radio broadcasts which reach said customers and prospective customers residing in several of the States of the United States. In and through said advertising media, respondent makes the following among other false and misleading representations as to his said product:

1. That respondent owns, operates, or controls a laboratory or laboratories where said product is manufactured by him.

2. "Give your eyes this permanent beauty with Dark Eyes"—"The new permanent darkener"—"Permanent color and beauty with Dark Eyes"—"The new permanent eyelash and eyebrow darkener"—"Lasts from four to five weeks."

3. "Dark Eyes", when used as directed, is safe and harmless.

4. "Dark Eyes" is a new discovery.

5. The use of "Dark Eyes" gives your eyelashes and eyebrows lasting youth or lasting beauty.

6. Thousands of smart women prefer this modern beauty way to possess attractive eyes.

7. "Dark Eyes" is perfectly harmless to use and absolutely safe.

PAR. 5. The representations set forth in the paragraph last above are false and misleading in that:

1. Respondent owns and maintains no laboratory, and the said product "Dark Eyes", is manufactured for him;

2. The use of "Dark Eyes" does not give permanent beauty; it is not a permanent darkener. It does not assure permanent color and beauty; if it is "permanent", it will last longer than four or five weeks, and if it lasts only four or five weeks, it is not permanent. The name "Dark Eyes" is a misnomer; it is the eyebrows and eyelashes and not the eyes that are colored by it;

3. "Dark Eyes" is not safe or harmless, and its use may result in harm to the user thereof; the use of "Dark Eyes" as directed may result in injury to the eye or the skin or flesh about the eye, or elsewhere;

4. "Dark Eyes" is not a new discovery. The ingredients contained in it have been used for many years in the coloring or dyeing of eyebrows and eyelashes;

5. The use of "Dark Eyes" does not give eyelashes and eyebrows lasting youth or lasting beauty.

6. The use of "Dark Eyes" does not constitute a modern or better way to possess attractive eyes.

7. "Dark Eyes" is not perfectly harmless to use or absolutely safe;

PAR. 6. Each and all of the said representations described in Paragraph Four hereof, have and have had the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that they are true, and each and all of the said representations have and have had the tendency and capacity to induce the purchase of said respondent's product and have and have had the tendency and capacity to divert trade from and otherwise injure respondent's said competitors.

PAR. 7. The above alleged acts and practices are all to the prejudice of the public and to respondent's said competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on October 31, 1935, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Hec Barth, an individual, doing business under the trade names of Hec Barth Laboratories and Dark-Eyes Laboratories, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by DeWitt T. Puckett, attorney for the Commission, before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Sid Mogul, attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, no request for oral argument having been made, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Hec Barth, is an individual trading as Dark-Eyes Company. Until about a year ago he employed the trade names Hec Barth Laboratories and Dark-Eyes Laboratories. The business is located at 412 Orleans Street, Chicago, Ill. He is now, and since April 1934, has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a product by the name of "Dark-Eyes," an eyebrow and eyelash stain. The product is put up and prepared for the market in small bottles, each containing approximately 1.3 drams of the preparation. Each package contains two bottles. Bottle number one contains primarily silver nitrate, and bottle number two contains primarily pyrogallol. It is prepared in two colors, namely, black and brown.

The formula for the black product is:

Bottle No. 1:

Silver Nitrate U. S. P.-----	4.75 parts
Ammonium Hydroxide C. P.-----	1.30 parts

The above are dissolved in a pectic vehicle in sufficient quantity to make the whole measure 100 parts.

Bottle No. 2:

Pyrogallol (Resublimed U. S. P.)-----	3.25 parts
Solvent (Distilled Water)-----	96.25 parts

The formula for the brown product is:

Bottle No. 1:

Silver Nitrate U. S. P.-----	3.25 parts
Ammonium Hydroxide C. P.-----	.80 parts

Both are dissolved in a pectic vehicle in sufficient quantity to make the whole measure 100 parts.

Bottle No. 2:

Pyrogallol (Resublimed U. S. P.)-----	2.50 parts
Solvent (Distilled Water)-----	97.50 parts

The main difference between the formula for the brown product and the black product is that the brown product contains less silver nitrate and pyrogallol per unit measure.

The product is applied by first applying the liquid in bottle number one to the eyelashes or eyebrows with a camel's hair brush. When the first application is dry the liquid in bottle number two is then applied with another small camel's hair brush. Contact between the two liquids causes an immediate precipitation of color.

When orders are received for respondent's product, he causes it to be shipped and transported from Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof located at various points in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois. The product is distributed in practically every State of the United States through department stores, drug stores, and beauty shops. An introductory or trial size package is sent through the mails direct to the purchasers thereof. The respondent has, since 1934, maintained a constant current of trade in said product, in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States.

At all times since the respondent entered into business, he has been in substantial competition with other individuals, and with partnerships and corporations engaged in the sale and distribution, or in the manufacture, sale and distribution, of eyebrow and eyelash stains or dyes, in commerce, among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The respondent has advertised, and is now advertising, said product, in newspapers, periodicals, and magazines of general circulation in the United States. The product was advertised by radio during 1934. Representative of said advertising claims are the following statements:

"Give your eyes this permanent beauty with 'Dark-Eyes'"—"The new permanent darkener"—"Permanent color and beauty with 'Dark-Eyes'"—"The new permanent eyelash and eyebrow darkener"—"Lasts from four to five weeks".

"Dark-Eyes", when used as directed, is safe and harmless.

"Dark-Eyes" is a new discovery.

The use of "Dark-Eyes" gives your eyelashes and eyebrows lasting youth or lasting beauty.

Thousands of smart women prefer this modern beauty way to possess attractive eyes.

"Dark-Eyes" is perfectly harmless to use and absolutely safe.

Each package of the product contains a direction sheet, which bears the expressions, among others, "Permanent," "Harmless," and "Harmless to Eyes, Hair and Skin." On the outside of the package itself appears the word "Permanent."

Respondent represented until about a year ago that he owned and operated a laboratory where the product "Dark-Eyes" was manufactured. However, respondent has never at any time actually owned or operated, or directly and absolutely controlled, a laboratory in which the product was manufactured. In fact, the product is manufactured for the respondent by the W. W. Baldwin Company of 412 Orleans Street, Chicago, Ill., owners of the formula for the product. Respondent has never owned any interest in, or exercised any control over, the said W. W. Baldwin Company. Respondent's said product does not give permanent beauty, nor are the eyelashes and eyebrows permanently darkened by use of the product. When new lashes appear, or as the hair grows new applications of the product are necessary to darken the new growth. Said product is not a new discovery. Its active ingredients, silver nitrate and pyrogallol, have been used in stains or eyebrow darkeners for many years.

The respondent's product is not harmless or absolutely safe, but is injurious to the eyes of some users. Women users of the product testified at the hearings. Mrs. Ethyl Weinberg Astrachan of Chicago, Ill., purchased a package of respondent's product at Field's store in Chicago and used the product in accordance with the directions supplied with it. Immediately after the application, her eyes began to pain her considerably and a severe headache set in. She suffered with her eyes for a period of three months. Dr. John William Wall, an eye specialist of Chicago, Ill., who attended Mrs. Astrachan during her said illness, concluded that Mrs. Astrachan's trouble with her eyes was caused by the application of the respondent's product to her eyelashes and eyebrows.

Mrs. Mary W. Buettner of Cleveland, Ohio, purchased a package of respondent's products from a department store in Cleveland, Ohio, and applied the product in accordance with the instructions enclosed in the package. When she awoke the following morning, her eyes were inflamed, swollen and discolored. About four weeks elapsed before her eyes become normal. Mrs. Buettner had applied other eyelash stains and dyes to her eyelashes on previous occasions with no ill effect. Dr. Norman McGay of Cleveland, Ohio, who attended Mrs. Buettner during her aforesaid illness, found Mrs. Buettner suffering from a very badly swollen eczematous condition around the left eye, over the bridge of the nose and a little over the right eye. The left eye was almost swollen shut. The forehead over the eyebrows and across the bridge of the nose was badly discolored with some chemical. He found Mrs. Buettner to be suffering from a localized condition caused by some local application, which he concluded to be the product she applied on that occasion.

Mrs. Margaret S. Werntz of Shaker Heights, Ohio, went to a beauty shop in Cleveland, Ohio, about eleven o'clock on the morning of December 14, 1935, and had her eyelashes stained with the respondent's said product. About six o'clock that night her eyes began watering and smarting, followed by pains in and near the eyeballs. The following morning her eyes were swollen and completely closed, and she remained totally blind for one week. Mrs. Werntz could not read for three months. Dr. James Roder Bell of Cleveland, Ohio, Mrs. Werntz' attending physician during her said illness, concluded, after having treated Mrs. Werntz' eyes for three weeks, that her injury resulted from the application of respondent's product to her eyelashes and eyebrows.

One percent silver nitrate solutions are used by the medical profession as an antiseptic. It is applied to the eyes of new born babes to prevent gonorrhoeal infection. When something stronger than a one percent silver nitrate solution is required, in treating certain conditions of the eyes, some drug other than silver nitrate is used. Silver nitrate solutions containing as much as 2.5% silver nitrate are used as a disinfectant when applied to parts of the body other than the eyes.

The solution in bottle number one of the respondent's said black product contains 4.75% of silver nitrate U. S. P. The solution in bottle number one of respondent's said brown product contains 3.25% of silver nitrate U. S. P. The silver nitrate solution is applied to the eyelashes or eyebrows and permitted to remain there a few moments before the solution contained in bottle number two is applied.

It is established by the testimony of medical authorities and chemical experts that respondent's product is a caustic, and will destroy tissue. Silver nitrate and pyrogallol, if not mixed in the exact molecular proportions, will give off an excess of the silver nitrate or free pyrogallol, and the uncombined silver nitrate has the same effect that it would have if used separately, and the uncombined silver nitrate can produce injury. The possibility of danger through use of the respondent's product is enhanced of course, if applied by an unskilled person or in an unskillful manner.

PAR. 3. Many of respondent's competitors who sell and distribute, or manufacture, sell and distribute, eyebrow and eyelash darkeners or dyes, in interstate commerce, do not in any way misrepresent the effects of their products when applied to the eyebrows and eyelashes.

PAR. 4. The use by respondent of the representations set forth above, in his advertising literature, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and has misled a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. As a consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the false and misleading statements and representations above referred to, the purchasing public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from his competitors likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing eyebrow and eyelash darkeners or stains, or in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of eyelash darkeners or stains, who truthfully represent the effects of their products when applied to the eyebrows and eyelashes of persons. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition, in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Hec Barth, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Hec Barth, individually and trading as Hec Barth Laboratories and Dark-Eyes Laboratories, or under any other trade name, his agents, representatives and employees, in connection with the sale and distribution of an eyelash darkener now known as "Dark Eyes," or any other product containing the same or substantially the same ingredients, sold under that name or under any other trade name, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That said product is safe and harmless.
2. That said product is a new discovery.
3. That the use of said product gives permanent beauty to or is a permanent darkener of the eyebrows and eyelashes.
4. That respondent owns, operates or controls a laboratory or laboratories until and unless he does in fact actually own and operate, or directly and absolutely control a laboratory or laboratories wherein said product is compounded.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF PERFECT MANUFACTURING COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2899. Complaint, Aug. 14, 1936—Decision, Apr. 30, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in manufacture, and sale to purchasing and consuming public in various parts of the United States, through use of trade name "Sav-An-Upper Company," of preparation, among others, known and designated as "Sav-An-Upper," and thus branded, labeled, and packed for sale and distribution by it, trading under name "Sav-An-Upper Company," and by its agent-salesmen to purchasing and consuming public; in advertising its said product, in the course and conduct of its said business and as a means of obtaining services of such agent-salesmen to handle and sell the same, in sales magazines and periodicals of general circulation and in circulars and other mail matter distributed to prospective agents and containing sales talks and instructions, and through representations in said advertisements, distributed as aforesaid, and which were eventually communicated to customers and consumers, actual and prospective—

- (a) Represented that its said product had unusual sales appeal, or that selling qualities or possibilities thereof were most exceptional, and that large sums of money might commonly or easily be made by agents in handling and selling the same, through such statements as that men and women everywhere were making tremendous profits, up to 202%, in the sale thereof, that an investment of $1.50 could build itself into tens, hundreds, and thousands of dollars in just a short while, and that earnings up to $5,000 a year should be reached by quite a few, and others of like import and effect;
- (b) Represented that its said product, when applied to objects, possessed and imparted the quality, condition, and effect of permanency and would renew articles to which it was applied, such as trunks, luggage, school and shopping bags, or make scuffed shoe tops look as neat and good as the day they left the factory, and similar statements; and
- (c) Represented that it owned or operated the million dollar company which was, or would be, back of salesmen selling its said product, and that such company had a world-wide business and prospering agents everywhere;

Facts being such statements and representations were false, deceptive, misleading and exaggerated in various particulars, its said product did not possess the sales appeal or possibilities claimed for it, agents and salesmen could not and did not realize, through sale thereof, large earnings and profits held out to them, product did not produce or impart a coating which was permanent in character or which would renew or restore objects, no matter how old, worn or scuffed they might be, to a new or like new condition, and it did not own, control, or operate any million dollar company or business with world-wide trade or connections, or any company or business even approximating such financial size, status, or importance;

With tendency and capacity to cause agents and salesmen to form mistaken and erroneous beliefs that such a company, and with world-wide business and prosperous agents everywhere, was back of them, and that product in question had a selling power or appeal which it did not possess, and that large and substantial profits could be earned from sale thereof, and with effect of causing members of purchasing public to form mistaken and erroneous beliefs concerning character and qualities of said product and usage to which it properly and successfully might be put, and with further result that salesmen and agents were thereby induced to handle and sell the same, and members of the public to purchase said product under erroneous belief that misleading and extravagant claims made for it were true, to the detriment and injury of manufacturers and sellers of similar products, and with capacity and tendency unfairly to divert to it trade of competitors engaged in selling such products and who fairly and accurately advertise and represent the same:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Marshall Morgan for the Commission.

Parton & Seasongood, of Cincinnati, Ohio, for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Perfect Manufacturing Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as "respondent," has been, and is now, using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Perfect Manufacturing Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal office and place of business located at 3325 Madison Road, in the city of Cincinnati, Ohio. Respondent is now and for more than two years last past has been engaged, as hereinafter described, in the business of manufacturing and selling to retail dealers, agents, and salesmen in various parts of the United States, through the use of trade name companies, various appliances, products, and preparations. Among the appliances, products, and preparations so manufactured and sold by respondent, is a liquid shoe polish, enamel, dressing, or finish, for shoes, made in different colors, known and designated as "Sav-An-Upper," and sold to retail dealers, salesmen, and agents in various parts of the United States. The said preparation, Sav-An-Upper, is manufactured, as stated in Cincinnati, Ohio, where it is branded, labelled, and packed by respondent for sale and distribution by itself through the use of a trade name company, known and designated as "Sav-An-Upper Company," and by its agent-salesmen, or dealer-customers, to the purchasing and consuming public of the United States. In consummating such sales and in distributing such product, respondent causes the said shoe polish, enamel, dressing, or finish to be transported and delivered from its place of business in Cincinnati, State of Ohio, through and into various other States of the United States to the respective purchasers thereof at their respective points of location. In the course and conduct of its business the respondent has been and is now engaged in direct and substantial competition with various corporations, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of shoe polishes, enamels, finishes, or dressings for shoes and offering such products for sale in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and within the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its said business respondent has offered its products for sale and has sold and transported or caused the same to be transported in commerce among the several States of the United States to the consuming public through the medium of salesmen, agents, and dealers. Said products are and were shipped in response to orders received from said salesmen, agents, or dealers transported or caused to be transported in commerce among the several States of the United States. As a means of obtaining the services of such salesmen, agents, or dealers, said respondent causes and has caused advertisements to appear in sales magazines and periodicals having general circulation, and, in addition, distributes and has distributed circulars and other mail matter containing sales talks and instructions.

In the course and conduct of its said business, as hereinabove related, respondent has caused various false, deceptive, and misleading statements to be inserted and to appear in said advertisements and in circulars and other mail matter distributed by it. The statements contained in said advertisements, circulars, and mail matter are addressed to and are and have been distributed among salesmen, agents, and dealers throughout the United States and are intended to be and constitute instructions to them in connection with sales talks to be made to retail stores, boot-black stands, customers and consumers, actual and prospective. In this manner the said various false and misleading statements and representations inserted in said trade magazines, circulars, bulletins and other communications by respondent, including claims set forth in describing respondent's products, are and have been passed on to the ultimate consumer by respondent's salesmen, dealers, and agents, and the consuming public have been induced to purchase the products thus offered for sale and sold by respondent in the erroneous belief that said false and misleading statements and representations concerning such products were and are true.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent, in advertisements, circulars, bulletins, and sales communications having a general circulation, as stated, represents in advertising:

Picture appearing in a display advertisement of an old, creased and wrinkled looking shoe coupled with the words:

Before Using Sav-An-Upper.

Picture of same shoe in glistening black surface, and, new in appearance, coupled with the words:

After Using Sav-An-Upper.

Complaint

Be financially independent.

You can earn as much money as you want because the amount of your income depends entirely on your own efforts.

You simply make the sensational one-second demonstration and the prospect BUYS.

A self-polished, good-looking flexible coating that is longer wearing, crack-proof, waterproof and permanent.

If you act quickly you can begin making as much as $2.00 in an hour at once, beginning the first day.

* * * Its big margin of profit (up to 186%) means that just a few sales will pay you $30.00, $50.00, $80.00 a week or more.

* * * Even beginners are so swamped with orders that they must hire sub-agents to help handle their business. Earnings up to $5000.00 in a year should be reached by quite a few.

* * * I want to see you own your own home, your own car, and have a bank account. That's what Sav-An-Upper is doing for other men and women everywhere.

* * * Demonstrations of this kind made in a busy section, at fairs, at carnivals or markets, bring as high as $12.00 worth of sales in an hour, which can mean as much as $7.95 in profits to you.

* * * Depending on the size of your territory and the number of sub-agents you put to work, you can make as high as $18.00 in a day, besides what you make on your personal sales to consumers and stores and through demonstrations.

* * * this sensational new discovery affords YOU AN OPPORTUNITY TO GET IN ON THE GROUND FLOOR of a gigantic, world-wide business with prospering representatives everywhere.

Our entire plant including manufacturing department, chemical laboratories, raw material storage, offices, occupies 5 acres with three railroad sidings, * * *

A million dollar company is back of you!

PAR. 4. When in truth and in fact said statements and representations made by said respondent with respect to its product and the earnings to be derived from the sale thereof, were and are false, deceptive and misleading in the following among other particulars:

1. Agents, dealers, solicitors and other selling respondent's product cannot and do not earn up to $2.00 an hour.

2. Men and women everywhere are not making tremendous profits—up to 202%, or getting their share of "the Big Money", or realizing an enormous margin of profit on quick easy sales.

3. Investments of $1.50 are not building themselves into tens, hundreds and thousands of dollars in just a short time.

4. Every demonstration of respondent's product does not make "sales and profits galore".

5. Territories in which respondent's product has not been sold are not "gold mines, ready for digging".

6. Profits to the sellers of respondent's products are not "guaranteed" nor have they a fortune to gain which they cannot lose.

Complaint

24 F. T. C.

7. Salesmen are not being made "independent" in handling respondent's product, nor are they earning as much as they want, nor are the amounts of earnings limited only by their own effort.

8. One-second demonstrations do not cause prospective purchasers to buy.

9. Agents and sellers cannot and do not make as much as $2.00 in an hour at once by acting quickly or otherwise, beginning the first day; nor $12.00 an hour nor $18.00 in a day.

10. The sale of respondent's product is not providing and has not provided homes, cars and bank accounts for men and women selling such product.

11. A few sales an hour of respondent's product will not pay $30, $50, $80 and more a week, and beginners are not so swamped with orders that they must hire sub-agents to help handle their business.

12. Earnings up to $5,000 in a year are not reached by "quite a few."

13. Respondent's business is not "a gigantic, world-wide business with prospering representatives everywhere"; and no million dollar company, including chemical laboratories, occupying 5 acres and having three railroad sidings, is back of those selling respondent's products.

14. Respondent's product is not crack-proof, nor water-proof, nor permanent, nor does it renew trunks, luggage, school bags, shopping bags, brief cases, leather upholstery and cushions, auto tops, harness, and other articles of leather.

15. Respondent's product cannot and does not make scuffed shoe tops look as neat and good as "the day they left the factory" or make old shoes like new for 2¢ and 6¢ respectively.

16. The "attractive, polished, glowing neatness of brand new shoes" is not restored to old uppers of shoes by use of respondent's product no matter "how soiled, discolored, scuffed, scratched or faded the old uppers may be."

PAR. 5. Among the competitors of respondent referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, there are those who manufacture and sell in commerce products like or similar to those sold by respondent, and who do not make false, misleading, and extravagant claims and representations concerning such products, but advertise and represent the same fairly and accurately.

PAR. 6. Respondent by the use of the hereinbefore described advertising in interstate commerce has thereby falsely represented to prospective agents, salesmen, dealers, or others, that large or substantial sums of money are being or could be easily and quickly made in the sale of its said product, when in truth and in fact the selling possibilities and sale qualities thereof are not and never have been of the character represented, and respondent has further, as herein shown, falsely represented in advertising matter the nature, character and qualities of its said product.

By the use of these false and misleading representations appearing in respondent's circulars, bulletins, sales talks, or instructions, advertisements in trade magazines and in other advertising matter employed by respondent, which representations are passed on to the purchasing public by salesmen, agents, and dealers selling respondent's product, the consuming public and those induced to sell such product, are and have been thereby deceived concerning the character and qualities of the said product and the uses to which it, properly and successfully may be put, and are and have been thereby induced to purchase respondent's product under the erroneous belief that the false and extravagant claims made for it are and were true. The aforesaid practices of respondent are further to the detriment and injury of manufacturers and sellers of products similar to those sold by respondent, and have had the capacity and tendency to divert to respondent the trade of competitors engaged in selling in interstate commerce products of the nature of that sold by respondent, and who fairly and accurately advertise and represent such products.

PAR. 7. The above false, misleading, and deceptive acts, practices and methods of respondent under the circumstances and conditions hereinabove alleged are unlawful and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on the 14th day of August 1936, issued and on the 17th day of August 1936, served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Perfect Manufacturing Company, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. On September 5, 1936, the respondent filed its answer in this proceeding. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts executed by the respondent through its counsel, Messrs. Paxton and Seasongood, and by W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel, of the Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, might be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission might proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts (including inferences which it might draw from said facts), and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, answer and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved and accepted, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Perfect Manufacturing Company, is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Ohio, with its principal office and place of business located at 3325 Madison Road, in the city of Cincinnati, Ohio. Respondent is now and for more than two years last past has been engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling to the purchasing and consuming public in various parts of the United States, through the use of trade name companies, various appliances, products, and preparations. Among such is a liquid finish for shoes, made in different colors, known and designated as "Sav-An-Upper." The said preparation, Sav-An-Upper, is manufactured in Cincinnati, Ohio, where it is branded, labeled, and packed for sale and distribution by respondent trading under the name "Sav-An-Upper Company," and by its agent-salesmen, to the purchasing and consuming public in the United States. In consummating such sales and in distributing such product, respondent causes the said shoe finish to be transported and delivered from its place of business in Cincinnati, State of Ohio, through and into various other States of the United States to the respective purchasers thereof at their respective points of location.

PAR. 2. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its business, is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, engaged in substantial competition with other corporations, and with firms and individuals likewise engaged in the manufacture, sale and distribution of liquid finishes for shoes in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

Findings

PAR. 3. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its said business, and as a means of obtaining the services of agent-salesmen to handle and sell its product "Sav-An-Upper" causes and has caused advertisements to appear in sales magazines and periodicals having a general circulation throughout the United States and in addition distributes and has distributed to prospective agents, circulars and other mail matter containing sales talks and instructions. The representations contained in said advertisements distributed as aforesaid among agent-salesmen throughout the United States are and have been eventually communicated to customers and consumers, actual and prospective.

PAR. 4. Respondent, in the course and conduct of its business, in circulars, bulletins, sales communications and through other advertising media having general circulation, has made various claims, statements and representations concerning its product "Sav-An-Upper." In certain of its advertisements respondent represents that its product "Sav-An-Upper" has unusual sales appeal, or that selling qualities or possibilities of "Sav-An-Upper" are most exceptional and that large sums of money may commonly or easily be made by agents in handling and selling such product. In certain other statements and advertisements, respondent makes various representations concerning the permanent, wearing, lasting, and restorative qualities of the said product and concerning the size, scope, and character of respondent's business. Typical of the representations contained in said advertising matter of respondent, are statements that men and women everywhere are making tremendous profits, up to 202%, in the sale of "Sav-An-Upper," that an investment of $1.50 can build itself into tens, hundreds, and thousands of dollars in just a short while, that earnings up to $5,000 a year should be reached by quite a few, and other statements of like import and effect. In other statements it is represented that "Sav-An-Upper," when applied, has the characteristic of permanency and will renew articles to which it is applied, such as trunks, luggage, school and shopping bags, or will make scuffed shoe tops look as neat and good as the day they left the factory, or that when applied to old shoes they can be made to look new for as little as 2¢ to 6¢ respectively, and that old shoe uppers to which "Save-An-Upper" is applied, no matter how soiled or discolored, scuffed, scratched, or faded, will be restored to the glowing neatness of brand-new shoes. Further typical of respondent's representations are representations to the effect that respondent is, owns or operates a million dollar company which is, or will be, back of the salesmen selling its product "Sav-An-Upper," and that such company has a world-wide business and prospering agents everywhere.

PAR. 5. The statements and representations made by respondent in selling and offering for sale its product "Sav-An-Upper" were, and are, false, deceptive, misleading, and exaggerated in various particulars. Respondent's product does not possess the sales appeal or possibilities that are being and have been claimed for it. Agents and salesmen can not and do not realize, as a result of the sale of said product, the large earnings and profits that have been held out to them by respondent as an inducement to have them handle and undertake the sale of said product. The respondent does not own, control or operate any million dollar company or business with world-wide trade or connections or any company or business even approximating such financial size, status or importance, and respondent's product "Sav-An-Upper," when applied to objects, does not produce or impart a coating which is permanent in character or which can or will renew or restore objects, no matter how old, worn or scuffed they may be, to a new or like-new condition.

PAR. 6. Among the competitors of the respondent referred to in paragraph 1 hereof, there are those who manufacture and sell in commerce, products like or similar to those sold by respondent, and who do not make false, misleading and extravagant claims and representations concerning such products, but advertise and represent the same fairly and accurately.

PAR. 7. The use of the hereinbefore mentioned false and misleading representations on the part of respondent and its agents, which are typical of the methods employed by respondent in the sale and offering for sale of its product, the said liquid finish for shoes known and designated as "Sav-An-Upper" has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to cause agents and salesmen to form the mistaken and erroneous beliefs that a million dollar company, with a world-wide business and prosperous agents everywhere, is back of them, that the product has a selling power or appeal which it does not possess, and that large and substantial profits can be earned from the sale thereof. The use of respondent's representations has further caused members of the purchasing public to form mistaken and erroneous beliefs concerning the character and qualities of the said product and the uses to which it properly and successfully may be put. Salesmen and agents have thereby been induced to handle and sell respondent's product and members of the purchasing public have thereby been induced to purchase said product under the erroneous belief that the misleading and extravagant claims made for it are and were true.

Order

The aforesaid representations and practices of respondent are further to the detriment and injury of manufacturers and sellers of products similar to that sold by respondent and have the capacity and tendency unfairly to divert to respondent the trade of competitors engaged in selling in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and within the District of Columbia products of the nature of that sold by respondent, and who fairly and accurately advertise and represent such products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Perfect Manufacturing Company, a corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Perfect Manufacturing Company, its officers, representatives, agents, individual or corporate, and its employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia of a liquid finish or product for shoes known as "Sav-An-Upper," or designated or described under any other name, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Order

24 F. T. C.

1. Representing that agents or salesmen can or do earn or have ever earned certain specified sums daily, weekly, monthly, or for or during any stated period of time through the sale of respondent's said product unless and until said agents or salesmen actually have so made the earnings stated;

2. Representing that respondent's product when applied to objects possesses and imparts the quality, effect or condition of permanency, or has the renewing and restoring qualities or characteristics, which have been ascribed to it by the respondent, and which it does not possess.

3. Representing that respondent is a million dollar company, and that it has assets or a volume of business or business connections or operations substantially in excess of those which it actually possesses.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2726. Complaint, Feb. 19, 1936—Decision, May 1, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in the sale and distribution of potato chip machines; in advertising same in various periodicals, pamphlets, form letters, and other advertising media of interstate circulation—

- (a) Represented and held out, as possible or maximum earnings for any fixed period, amounts in excess of those actually earned during such period by operators of its machines under normal conditions in due course of business, through use of such statements or expressions as "up to" or "as much as," or others of similar import and effect, such as "Make as much as $23.00 a day on the capacity of one machine selling wholesale only," "Work at home. Make up to $117.00 a week";
- (b) Represented or held out, as usual or customary earnings or profits to be derived from the operation of its machines, sums or amounts in excess of the average, usual and customary sums or amounts actually thus earned under normal conditions in due course of business, through such statements as "Every time you invest $11.48 in raw materials, you get back $35.00 in cash on the spot * * *," with $23.50 thereof "net profit for you," and, theretofore, such statements as "There is no way to tell whether you'll make $5,000 or $15,000 the first year"; and
- (c) Represented that its said machines had a retail value or sales price greater than that for which they were usually and customarily sold in due course of business;

With effect of misleading a substantial portion of purchasing public into erroneous belief that said representations were true, and with result that such public, as a consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by such false and misleading statements and representations, bought a substantial volume of its products, and trade was unfairly diverted to it from competitors engaged in sale and distribution of such machines, or in manufacture, sale, and distribution thereof, and who truthfully represent possible and actual earnings of operators of their said machines; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Food Display Machine Corporation, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, with its principal office and place of business located at 500 North Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill. It is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in advertising and selling potato chip machines between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, and now causes, and for more than one year last past has caused, such potato chip machines, when sold by it, to be shipped from its place of business in Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof, some located, in the State of Illinois and others located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and there is now, and has been for more than one year last past, a constant current of trade in commerce in potato chip machines sold by the respondent between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations, and with persons, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale of potato chip machines between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, in soliciting the sale of and selling its potato chip machines, respondent now represents, and for more than one year last past has represented, in and by its advertisements, published in various periodicals of interstate circulation, form letters, pamphlets, and other forms of advertising media, as follows:

Make as much as $23.00 a day on capacity of one machine selling wholesale only;

Work at home. Make up to $117.00 a week;

$23.50 a day actually possible;

Profits of $100.00, $200.00, $300.00 and more weekly possible with this marvelous new automatic potato chip machine;

A new kitchen industry which husbands and wives (or either) can develop in their spare time * * * profits up to $30.40 a day;

There is no way to tell whether you'll make $5,000 or $15,000 the first year;

CHICAGO COMPANY MAKES 50,000 LBS. PER WEEK!

OF THE three big companies supplying part of the Chicago market with Potato Chips, consider the business that is being done by only one. They have 40 men and girls working. They make and sell 50,000 pounds of Potato Chips a week—50,000 pounds. Think what that means. Profits on Potato Chips run up as high as 20¢ per pound. If you sold only 500 lbs. a week, you would make $100.00 on this small business. Yet here is one company that sells 50,000 pounds. Ask yourself whether this is a chance to make big money and make it quick;

Every time you invest $11.48 in raw materials, you get back $35.00 in cash on the spot. $23.50 of it is net profit for you;

There are at least 38 outlets in your community that, with this low priced machine I have just perfected, you can furnish with genuine Vita-Seald, mineralized potato chips wholesale;

A complete mineral food content of 9 vital health-giving minerals;

The old-fashioned, greasy, devitalized potato chips—difficult to digest and worthless as a mineral food;

All of the valuable minerals found in a raw potato have been retained in these chips by the Vita-Seald process of cooking;

Vita-Seald potato chips retain these nine previous minerals. This mineral invention of mine seized the public's imagination and gives my Vita-Seald operators a tremendously important selling point.

People may buy their first bag just as they would any other. One taste and they know they have bitten into something unusual. The taste is so different, such a temptation to eat more. They then read the story. They discover that the reason for the spicy, tangy, crunchy, crispness is the mineral richness of the Vita-Seald chip;

You receive $222.40 worth of actual value yet you pay only $186.53.

Said statements, together with other statements not herein set out, are intended as, and serve as representations as to the income and profit that may reasonably be expected to accrue to the purchaser of the equipment upon the purchase and use thereof.

In truth and in fact the actual or probable earnings or profits of operators of respondent's potato chip machines are, on the average, much less than the amounts set forth above. The statements set forth above relative to the mineral content, taste, and food value of potato chips manufactured by respondent's machines and in accordance with its process, are grossly exaggerated and unwarranted by the facts. The representation that "there are at least 38 outlets in your community that, with this low priced machine I have just perfected, you can furnish with genuine Vita-Seald, mineralized potato chips wholesale", is untrue.

PAR. 3. The use by respondent of the representations set out in paragraph 2 hereof have had and do have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and do mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the belief that such representations are true and to purchase a substantial quantity of such potato chip machines from respondent in such erroneous belief. There are, among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, manufacturers and distributors of potato chip machines who do not misrepresent the probable or average earnings of the operators of such machines, or the number of wholesale outlets for their product, who likewise advertise, sell and distribute potato chip machines, among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. By the representations aforesaid, trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from such competitors; thereby substantial injury is being, and has been, done by respondent to substantial competition in commerce among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 4. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and the respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on February 19, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Food Display Machine Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by DeWitt T. Puckett, attorney for the Commission, before Robert S. Hall, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by John A. Bussian, attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, request for oral argument not having been made, and the commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Food Display Machine Corporation, is an Illinois Corporation. Its principal office and place of business is at 325 West Huron Street, Chicago, Ill.

It is now, and since 1924, has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of potato chip machines. Said machine is a complete unit consisting of a slicer, cooking vat, and centrifuge for drying or rid-ding the chips of the cooking oil. When orders are received for respondent's said machines, it causes them to be shipped and trans-ported from Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof located at vari-ous points in States of the United States other than the State of Illinois, and in foreign countries. The respondent has, during the past several years, maintained a constant current of trade in said machines, in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States. Respondent's dollar volume of business, for the first half of the year 1936, was approximately $20,000.

At all times during the last several years, the respondent has been in substantial competition with other corporations, and with individ-uals and partnerships, engaged in the sale and distribution, or in the manufacture, sale and distribution, of potato chip machines or potato chip machine equipment, in commerce, among and between the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In connection with the sale of its potato chip machines, respondent advertises its products in various periodicals, pamphlets, form letters, and other advertising media of interstate circulation. Representations of its said advertising claims are the following:

Make as much as $23.00 a day on the capacity of one machine selling whole-sale only.

Work at home. Make up to $117.00 a week.

Every time you invest $11.48 in raw materials, you get back $35.00 in cash on the spot. $23.50 of it is net profit for you.

Respondent formerly made the following statements in its adver-tising literature:

Profits of $100.00, $200.00, $300.00 and more weekly possible with this mar-velous new automatic potato chip machine.

A new kitchen industry which husbands and wives (or either) can develop in their spare time * * * profits up to $30.40 a day.

There is no way to tell whether you'll make $5,000 or $15,000 the first year.

It is possible for a live wire to make a net profit of $1,000 to $1,500 a month.

You receive $222.40 worth of actual value yet you pay only $186.53.

No operator of the respondent's said potato chip machines ever earned any of the amounts specified in the advertising claims set forth above, and there is no evidence that any operator has ever made any net profit by operation of said machines. In fact, respondent furnished no evidence to substantiate its advertising claims. Nicholas Macron, of Cleveland, Ohio, purchased one of respondent's machines, after having read its advertising claims, and operated said machine according to instructions furnished by respondent, at intervals, over a period of several weeks, but he never made any net profit whatever by said operations.

PAR. 3. Many of respondents' competitors who sell and distribute, or manufacture, sell and distribute, potato chip machines or potato chip machine equipment, in interstate commerce, do not in any way misrepresent the actual or possible earnings of the operators of their machines.

PAR. 4. The use by respondent of the representations set forth herein, in its advertising literature, has had and now has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and has misled a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. As a consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the false and misleading statements and representations above referred to, the purchasing public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from its competitors likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing potato chip machines, or in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of potato chip machines or equipment, who truthfully represent the possible and actual earnings of the operators of their machines. As a result thereof substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition, in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Food Display Machine Corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission, the answer of respondent, testimony and other evidence taken before Robert S. Hall,

1175

Order

an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, in support of the allegations of said complaint and in opposition thereto, and briefs filed herein, no request for oral argument having been made, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Food Display Machine Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of potato chip machines in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, or holding out, as possible or maximum earnings for any fixed period through the use of such statements or expressions as "up to" or "as much as," or any other statements or expressions of similar import and effect, or through any other means or device or in any manner, any amount in excess of amounts actually earned during said fixed period by operators of respondent's machines under normal conditions in due course of business;

2. Representing, or holding out, as usual or customary earnings or profits to be derived from the operation of its machines, any sum or amount in excess of the average usual and customary sums or amounts actually so earned under normal conditions in due course of business.

3. Representing that respondent's machines have a retail value or sales price greater than the price for which they are usually and customarily sold in due course of business.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order.

IN THE MATTER OF
C. C. MILLER ET AL., TRADING AS SUNLIFE CHLORO-PHYLLIAN LABORATORIES, LTD.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2753. Complaint, Mar. 31, 1936—Decision, May 1, 1937

Where partners engaged in advertising, selling, and distributing a preparation for external application, known and designated as "Sunlife Chlorophyllian Oil"; in advertising same in circulars, published and distributed throughout the United States, and in radio broadcasts and other forms of advertising media—

- (a) Represented that said preparation would cure and was a competent and effective treatment for the relief of nervous irritation, muscular rheumatism, lumbago, gouty conditions, swollen and painful joints, cramped limbs, swollen and aching feet, coughs and colds, sleeplessness, "growing" pains, sprains, cuts, bruises, burns, and arthritis; and
 - (b) Represented, as aforesaid and through use of word "Sunlife" in their said trade name, that said product contained beneficial elements of the natural rays of the sun, and that use thereof would bring beneficial effects of sunshine to the users, through statements or representations that active element in preparation in question was chlorophyll, and that said substance was literally stored-up sunshine captured by science and brought to the user, and that users of said preparation would receive same beneficial effects as would be received from exposure to the natural rays of the sun;
- Facts being function of pigment chlorophyll, found in plant life, is limited to such life and has no true effect on or therapeutic value to the human body and, applied to the skin, is not absorbed, preparation in question is not a competent or adequate treatment for various ailments and conditions above set forth, and does not relieve so-called "growing" pains in children or other conditions in question, and use thereof does not bring sunshine to affected parts of the body nor give the user the beneficial effects of sunshine;

With tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that aforesaid preparation or oil contained natural sunshine, and that users thereof would receive benefits flowing from the use of natural sunshine, and that it was a competent and adequate treatment for muscular rheumatism, lumbago, gouty conditions, and the other afflictions and ailments set forth, and that users thereof would receive same beneficial effects as those received from exposure to natural sunshine, and of thereby, and through use of word "Sunlife" in trade name featured as above set forth, inducing members of buying public to purchase said preparation for use because of the erroneous beliefs thus engendered, and of unfairly diverting trade to them from competitors engaged in the sale and distribution of similar preparations in commerce among and between the various States, without in any wise misrepresenting the therapeutic value of their said respective products; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Complaint

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. Charles P. Vicini and Mr. Robert S. Hall, trial examiners.

Mr. P. C. Kolinski and Mr. Astor Hogg for the Commission.

Mr. Sanford W. Hornwood, of Los Angeles, Calif., for respondents.

COMPLAINT

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, C. C. Miller, W. B. Mather, W. M. Louisson, D. A. Lester, L. D. Marr, H. M. Young, are partners trading and doing business in the name of Sunlife Chlorophyllian Laboratories, Ltd., with their principal office and place of business located at 2702 South Hill Street, Los Angeles, Calif. They are now, and for more than one year last past have been, engaged in advertising, selling, and distributing a preparation recommended for various ailments of the human body and designated "Sunlife Chlorophyllian Oil," and now cause, and for more than one year last past have caused, their said preparation, when sold by them, to be shipped from their place of business in Los Angeles, Calif., to the purchasers thereof, some located in the State of California and others located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and there is now, and has been for more than one year last past, a constant current of trade in commerce in said preparation sold by the respondents between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Respondents are now, and for more than one year last past have been, in substantial competition with other partnerships and with persons, firms, and corporations engaged in the sale of like oils and other similar preparations between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Complaint

24 F. T. C.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondents adopted as and for their trade name for their preparation the words "Sunlife Chlorophyllian Laboratories, Ltd." and caused said trade name to appear prominently displayed in their advertisements and advertising matter, including circulars, folders, and letterheads, and to be distributed throughout the various States of the United States.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of their business, as described in paragraph 1 hereof, in soliciting the sale of and selling said preparation "Sunlife Chlorophyllian Oil," respondents now represent, and for more than one year last past have represented, in and by radio broadcasts, advertisements having an interstate circulation, letters, pamphlets, and other forms of advertising media, as follows:

(a) Rub away the pain—Scientists say: "Muscular pains, aching discomforts are caused by congestion. When this congestion is broken up by surging blood, the pain disappears". Rub SUNLIFE CHLOROPHYLLIAN OIL into those muscles and joints. Feel the tingling surge of blood. SUNLIFE CHLOROPHYLLIAN OIL'S active element is chlorophyll which is a scientific name for the "green substance of living plants". It can be called "captured sunlight". The value of chlorophyll is recognized and recommended.

(b) SUNLIFE CHLOROPHYLLIAN OIL is recommended for nervous irritation, muscular rheumatism, lumbago, gouty conditions, swollen and painful joints, cramped limbs, swollen and aching feet, simple coughs and colds, insomnia or sleeplessness.

(c) Every mother will appreciate it for the children, as it relieves the so-called "growing pains" and many minor injuries, such as SPRAINS, CUTS, BRUISES AND BURNS.

(d) Particularly soothing to the nerve tissues, producing a blood stimulation

(e) CHLOROPHYLL is literally stored-up sunshine, captured by science and brought to you.

(f) * * * to any of you who are suffering from muscular rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, gouty conditions, cramped or swollen limbs, or stiff, aching joints * * * I want to tell You about SUNLIFE CHLOROPHYLLIAN PENETRATING OIL * * * It has brought relief to many people who suffered with those ailments.

(g) You have all seen a dog or cat, when they are hurt or ill, seek out a sunny spot and curl up there and just seem to soak up the sunshine. * * * You may have tried it yourself, letting the healing rays of the sun shine on you when you have a stiff neck, aching shoulder, etc. Something like this same result may be expected from the use of SUNLIFE CHLOROPHYLLIAN OIL.

(h) It is soothing to the nerves and stimulating to the blood flow, and seems to relieve nervous tension.

(i) A man * * * had suffered from arthritis in his feet for a long time so badly that he could hardly walk. He had spent several months in one of the highest priced hospitals in this country but without gaining relief for his feet. He took two bottles of SUNLIFE with him when he went back to Iowa, and we had a letter from him in which he told us that he had used one bottle and was started on the second bottle and there was very little soreness left in his feet and he was greatly relieved.

(j) The scientific new discovery—SUNLIFE CHLOROPHYLLIAN PENETRATING OIL.

All of said representations and statements, together with other statements not herein detailed, purport to be descriptive of respondents' preparation and of the beneficial results that may reasonably be expected to be obtained by the user of said preparation.

PAR. 4. For a good many years a substantial portion of the purchasing public has been led to believe, and does believe, that exposure of the human body to the natural sunshine produces beneficial results in the treatment of diseases, conditions and ailments of the skin, muscles, bones, and joints, and other parts of the human body.

Chlorophyll is produced by the aid of sunlight, but it is not absorbed through the skin, and its application to the skin has no effect upon rheumatic conditions, gouty conditions, sciatica, lumbago, cramped or swollen limbs, joints, or other parts of the human anatomy. Chlorophyll does not possess the same beneficial ingredients as sunlight and its use does not produce the same beneficial effects as sunlight.

PAR. 5. The use of the word "Sunlife" in respondents' trade name is false and misleading and deceptive to the purchasing public, in that purchasers are led to believe that respondents sell and distribute a preparation into which has been incorporated certain beneficial elements contained in the natural rays of the sun, and that the use of said preparation in the treatment of certain diseases and ailments will have the same beneficial effects in the treatment thereof as actual exposure of the human body to the natural rays of the sun, and causes them to purchase respondents' preparation in said mistaken and erroneous belief.

PAR. 6. In truth and in fact the representations made by the respondents, in aid of the sale of their preparation, are grossly exaggerated, false, misleading, and incorrect. Said preparation is not a competent or adequate remedy or treatment for nervous irritation, muscular rheumatism, lumbago, gouty conditions, swollen or painful joints, cramped limbs, swollen or aching feet, insomnia or sleeplessness. The preparation does not relieve in children the so-called "growing pains" and any injuries of children, such as cuts or sprains or bruises or burns. The chlorophyll contained in the preparation does not penetrate the skin and reach bones or muscles or joints. The preparation is not soothing to the nerve tissues, and does not produce a blood stimulation. Chlorophyll is not literally stored-up sunshine, and the use of the preparation does not bring to affected parts of the human body natural sunshine. The preparation does not bring relief to the users. The use of the preparation does not bring about remotely or otherwise, the results obtained from natural sunshine. The use of the preparation will not and does not act as a cure for or a remedy for arthritis, or any other ailment of the human body.

PAR. 7. The use of the word "Sunlife" in respondents' trade name has the capacity and tendency to deceive and mislead the purchasing public into the belief that the product sold by respondents is one that brings natural sunshine to the purchasers who use the preparation sold by the respondents. The representations of respondents, as hereinabove set forth, and other similar representations made by the respondents, have had and do have the tendency to confuse, mislead and deceive members of the public into the belief that respondents' preparation, designated "Sunlife Chlorophyllian Oil," contains natural sunshine, and that the users of the preparation will get the benefit inuring from the use of natural sunshine; that the preparation is a competent and adequate remedy and treatment for muscular rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, gouty conditions, cramped, swollen limbs, and stiff, aching joints; that it is a competent and adequate treatment and remedy for nervous irritation; that its use will relieve the growing pains of children and many minor injuries of children, such as cuts, sprains, bruises, and burns; that the use of the preparation will bring sunshine to afflicted parts of the human body, such as aching joints, muscular rheumatism, lumbago, and various other ailments; that chlorophyll is literally stored-up sunshine; that it will penetrate the skin and reach afflicted parts of the human system; that users of said preparation will receive beneficial results and results similar to those received from natural sunshine. The said representations of respondents have had and do have the tendency and capacity to induce members of the public to buy and use said preparation because of the erroneous belief engendered as above set forth, and to unfairly divert trade to respondents from competitors engaged in the sale, in interstate commerce, of similar competing preparations.

There are among the competitors of respondents, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, many who sell and distribute in commerce similar oils and preparations, who do not misrepresent the properties or qualities or therapeutic virtues, functions, uses or effects of their said competing products.

PAR. 8. The above alleged acts and practices of respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and the respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on March 31, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, C. C. Miller, W. B. Mather, W. M. Louisson, H. M. Young, D. A. Lester, and L. D. Marr, partners, trading as Sunlife Chlorophyllian Laboratories, Ltd., charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondents' answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by P. C. Kolinski and Astor Hogg, attorneys for the Commission before Charles P. Vicini and Robert S. Hall, examiners of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Sanford W. Hornwood, attorney for the respondents; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence and brief in support of the complaint (the respondents having filed no brief); and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, C. C. Miller, W. B. Mather, W. M. Louisson, H. M. Young, D. A. Lester, and L. D. Marr are partners trading and doing business under the name of Sunlife Chlorophyllian Laboratories, Ltd., with their principal office and place of business located at 2702 South Hill Street, Los Angeles, Calif. For several years last past they have been and they are now, engaged in advertising, selling and distributing a preparation for external application known and designated as "Sunlife Chlorophyllian Oil." They sell and distribute said preparation in commerce between and among the various States of the United States in substantial quantities. They cause said preparation, when sold, to be shipped from their place of business in the State of California to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of California. In the course and conduct of their business as aforesaid, respondents, during all the time herein mentioned, have been and are now in substantial competition with other partnerships and with corporations, firms and individuals engaged in the business of selling and distributing like oils and other preparations designed for the treatment of similar conditions and ailments of the human body in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. Respondents' product is in liquid form and contains the following ingredients:

Camphor gum U. S. P.,
Oil Wintergreen (Methyl Salicylate) U. S. P.,
Oil Peppermint, U. S. P.,
Chlorophyll concentrate paste in oil,
Solvent mineral oil (odorless),
Crystal oil.

PAR. 3. Respondents have represented by advertisements that their preparation "Sunlife Chlorophyllian Oil" will cure and is a competent and effective treatment for the relief of nervous irritation, muscular rheumatism, lumbago, gouty conditions, swollen and painful joints, cramped limbs, swollen and aching feet, simple coughs and colds, insomnia, "growing" pains, sprains, cuts, bruises, burns, and arthritis; that said preparation is soothing to the nerves and relieves nervous tension; that the active element in the preparation is Chlorophyll; that Chlorophyll is literally stored-up sunshine captured by science and brought to the user; and that the users of said preparation will receive the same beneficial effects as will be received from exposure to the natural rays of the sun. These representations have appeared in circulars, published and distributed by respondents throughout the United States, in radio broadcasts recommending respondents' preparation and in other forms of advertising media. Among the representations, statements and claims made by respondent are:

(a) Rub away the pain—Scientists say:

"Muscular pains, aching discomforts are caused by congestion. When this congestion is broken up by surging blood, the pain disappears." Rub SUNLIFE CHLOROPHYLLIAN OIL into those muscles and joints. Feel the tingling surge of blood. SUNLIFE CHLOROPHYLLIAN OIL'S active element is chlorophyll which is a scientific name for the "green substance of living plants". It can be called "captured sunlight". The value of Chlorophyll is recognized and recommended.

(b) SUNLIFE CHLOROPHYLLIAN OIL is recommended for nervous irritation, muscular rheumatism, lumbago, gouty conditions, swollen and painful joints, cramped limbs, swollen and aching feet, simple coughs and colds, insomnia or sleeplessness.

(c) Every mother will appreciate it for the children, as it relieves the so-called "growing pains" and many minor injuries, such as SPRAINS, CUTS, BRUISES, AND BURNS.

Findings

(d) Particularly soothing to the nerve tissues, producing a blood stimulation.

(e) CHLOROPHYLL is literally stored-up sunshine, captured by science and brought to you.

(f) . . . to any of you who are suffering from muscular rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, gouty conditions, cramped or swollen limbs, or stiff, aching joints * * * I want to tell you about SUNLIFE CHLOROPHYLLIAN PENETRATING OIL * * * It has brought relief to many people who suffered with those ailments.

(g) You have all seen a dog or cat, when they are hurt or ill, seek out a sunny spot and curl up there and just seem to soak up the sunshine. * * * You may have tried it yourself, letting the healing rays of the sun shine on you when you have a stiff neck, aching shoulder, etc. Something like this same result may be expected from the use of SUNLIFE CHLOROPHYLLIAN OIL.

(h) It is soothing to the nerves and stimulating to the blood flow, and seems to relieve nervous tension.

(i) A man * * * had suffered from arthritis in his feet for a long time so badly that he could hardly walk. He had spent several months in one of the highest priced hospitals in this country but without gaining relief for his feet. He took two bottles of SUNLIFE with him when he went back to Iowa, and we had a letter from him in which he told us that he had used one bottle and was started on the second bottle and there was very little soreness left in his feet and he was greatly relieved.

PAR. 4. For many years a substantial portion of the purchasing public has believed that exposure of the human body to natural sunshine produces beneficial results in the treatment of diseases, conditions and ailments of the skin, muscles, bones, joints, and other parts of the human body.

Chlorophyll is a pigment produced by the aid of sunshine and found in plants, the function of which is to act as a catalyst in storing up strength for plant life. Its function is limited to plant life. This pigment is not found in animal life and has no true function or effect on the human body. Chlorophyll has no therapeutic value to or effect on the human body, and if it is applied to the skin it is not absorbed. The only therapeutic value that might be ascribed to any of the ingredients of the preparation involved is that camphor and oil of wintergreen sometimes act as counter-irritants in such conditions as acute arthritis, but even then such ingredients have no curative effects. The preparation is not a competent or adequate treatment for, nor does it when applied, relieve nervous irritation, muscular rheumatism, lumbago, gouty conditions, swollen or painful joints, coughs and colds, cramped limbs, swollen or aching feet, insomnia and sleeplessness. The preparation does not relieve the so-called "growing pains" in children, or cuts, sprains, bruises, burns or arthritis. It is not soothing to the nerves and does not relieve nervous tension. Chlorophyll is not literally stored-up sunshine and the use of the preparation does not bring sunshine to affected parts of the human body, and neither does the user thereof receive the beneficial effects of sunshine. The chlorophyll alleged to be contained in said preparation does not and cannot penetrate the skin and said preparation will not bring relief to the users for any of the conditions that respondents represent it to be beneficial.

PAR. 5. Respondents have adopted and now use the trade name "Sunlife Chlorophyllian Laboratories, Ltd." They cause their aforesaid trade name to be prominently featured and set forth in all of their advertisements, leaflets, booklets, circulars, etc., which they send to customers and prospective customers, and in and by radio broadcasts.

The use of the word "Sunlife" in respondents' trade name is misleading in that purchasers are led to mistakenly believe that respondents offer and sell a preparation into which certain beneficial elements containing the natural rays of the sun have been incorporated, and that the use of said preparation will give the same benefits as will be received from actual exposure of the body to the natural rays of the sun.

PAR. 6. The representations of respondents as hereinbefore set forth have had and do have the tendency and capacity to confuse, mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that the preparation "Sunlife Chlorophyll Oil" contains natural sunshine and that the users of the preparation will receive the benefits flowing from the use of natural sunshine; that the preparation is a competent and adequate treatment for muscular rheumatism, lumbago, gouty conditions, cramped and swollen limbs, painful joints, coughs and colds, sleeplessness "growing pains," cuts, sprains, bruises, burns, and arthritis; that the preparation is soothing to the nerves and relieves nervous tension; that the use of the preparation will carry sunshine to afflicted parts of the human body and that the users of said preparation will receive the same beneficial effects as those received from exposure to natural sunshine.

The representations of respondents, as aforesaid, and the use of the word "Sunlife" in respondents' trade name have the capacity and tendency to induce members of the buying public to purchase said preparation for use because of the erroneous beliefs engendered as above set forth, and to unfairly divert trade to respondents from competitors engaged in the sale and distribution of similar preparations in commerce among and between the various States of the United States, and which said competitors do not in any wise misrepresent the therapeutic value of their respective preparations.

In this manner respondents do substantial injury to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid facts and practices of the respondents, C. C. Miller, W. B. Mather, W. M. Louisson, H. M. Young, D. A. Lester, and L. D. Marr, partners, trading as Sunlife Chlorophyllian Laboratories, Ltd., are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents, C. C. Miller, W. B. Mather, W. M. Louisson, H. M. Young, D. A. Lester, and L. D. Marr, individually and as partners, trading under the name "Sunlife Chlorophyllian Laboratories, Ltd." or under any other trade name, their representatives, agents, servants, and employees in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of a preparation now designated as "Sunlife Chlorophyllian Oil" or any other preparation of the same or substantially the same ingredients, composition or therapeutic effect, sold under that name or under any other name, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing in any manner that said preparation will cure or is a competent and effective treatment or remedy for, or will relieve nervous irritation, nervous tension, muscular rheumatism, lumbago, gouty conditions, swollen and aching feet, coughs and colds, sleeplessness "growing" pains, sprains, cuts, bruises, burns, and arthritis.

Order

24 F. T. C.

2. Representing through the use of the word "Sunlife" alone or in conjunction with any other word or words, or through the use of any other word or words of similar import and effect in their trade name or in any other manner, or through any other means or device, that said product contains any beneficial elements of the natural rays of the sun or that the use of said preparation will bring the beneficial effects of sunshine to the users thereof.

It is further ordered, That the respondents shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

JAMIN LINDNERCOMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914*Docket 3042. Complaint, Jan. 29, 1937—Decision, May 7, 1937*

Where a corporation engaged in the sale and distribution, among the several States and in the District of Columbia, of certain medicinal preparations and appliances for use by women in feminine hygiene, variously described, known as and sold under names "Gynettes," "Gyn-o-sol," "Gynex Tablets," "Viornetts," "Gynex Fountain Bag," and "Gynex Spray with Gynex Bulb," in substantial competition with others, of whom some were engaged in sale and distribution of similar preparations and appliances and of whom others were engaged in sale and distribution of preparations, remedies, and treatments used and useful for purposes for which it represented and implied that its said preparations and appliances were useful, and among which various competitors were included many who do not in any manner misrepresent their products and efficacy thereof; in describing its said preparations and appliances and efficacy thereof when used for purposes recommended, in booklets, pamphlets, and circulars distributed among prospective purchasers and in window display placards—

- (a) Represented that said "Gynettes," "Gynex Tablets," and "Gyn-o-sol" preparation constituted competent and effective contraceptive and could be depended upon for such purpose without limitation, and that they were competent and reliable remedies, treatments, and cures for ills and diseases peculiar to women, as in said various advertisements specified;
- (b) Represented that preparation "Viornetts" was a competent and effective treatment and cure for period pains and irregularities in the menstruation period of women, and a sedative for uterine and ovarian troubles of women, and that it strengthened said organs;
- (c) Represented that said preparations and appliances had been tested and approved by an independent organization devoted to scientific research on questions involving methods of preventing conception and preventing, treating, and curing diseases, maladies and conditions peculiar to women; and
- (d) Represented that said preparations and appliances might be used with safety and without deleterious effects by all women;

Facts being preparations and products named did not constitute competent and effective contraceptives as aforesaid claimed, and could not be depended upon for such purpose without limitation, nor constitute competent and reliable remedies, treatments and cures for ills, diseases, and conditions as above set forth, but had no beneficial therapeutic value in treatment thereof or of any of them, said preparations and appliances had not been submitted, tested, and approved as above set forth, by an independent organization as claimed or represented, and could not be used with safety and without deleterious effects as contraceptives, but use thereof in many

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the Bureau of Hygiene, Inc. (formerly the Bureau of Feminine Hygiene), the Gynex Corporation, Preferred Industries Corporation, corporations and Benjamin Lindner, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and are using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents Bureau of Hygiene (formerly Bureau of Feminine Hygiene) and Gynex Corporation are now, and have been for several years last past, corporations organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York. Respondent Bureau of Hygiene was organized to do research and laboratory work relative to the products marketed by the respondent Gynex Corporation.

Respondent Preferred Industries Corporation is now, and has been for several years last past, a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of New York. Benjamin Lindner is its President and directs and controls the policies and business operations of the corporation. Respondent Preferred Industries Corporation, acting directly and through Benjamin Lindner, its president, supervises, operates, and directs the sales policies and general business affairs of respondents Gynex Corporation and Bureau of Hygiene. It, together with its president, Benjamin Lindner, acting in his individual capacity, also factor the products marketed by Gynex Corporation.

The principal offices and places of business of all of the respondents are located at 301 Madison Ave., and 211 East 19th Street in the city of New York. Respondent Benjamin Lindner also has an office at 285 Madison Avenue in the city of New York. The respondents have been, and are now engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing and selling certain medical preparations and appliances for so-called feminine hygiene use to purchasers in commerce among and between various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. The respondents cause these products, when sold, to be transported from their aforesaid places of business to the purchasers thereof located in the various States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia, and maintain a constant course of trade and commerce in said products so distributed and sold by them.

In the course and conduct of said business respondents have been, and are, in substantial competition with other corporations and with firms, individuals, and partnerships engaged in the distribution and sale of similar products, and other products intended and designed for similar use by women in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. The products marketed by the respondents are variously known and described as Gynettes (the ideal suppository for feminine hygiene), Gyn-o-sol (the ideal vaginal jelly for feminine hygiene), Gynex Tablets (normal oxyguinoline sulphate), Viornetts (viburnum compound), Gynex Spray, Gynex Fountain Bag and Gynex Spray with Gynex Bulb. In the operation of their business and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of said products on the part of members of the purchasing public, the respondents have made use of certain advertising literature such as booklets, pamphlets, circulars, and show-window displays represented to be descriptive of the various products herein named and the various applicators used in connection therewith, and the effectiveness of said products and appliances when used. The advertising literature herein referred to is distributed to members of the purchasing public through advertising literature contained in the boxes in which said products are marketed, and in advertising literature distributed through the medium of drug stores, through the United States mails direct to the prospective purchasers and in other ways.

With reference to the products designated as Gynettes and Gyn-o-sol such statements as the following are made.

Complaint

24 F. T. C.

GYNETTES

One Gynette is used upon retiring, or when desired. In a few minutes its cocoa butter base melts, spreading an antiseptic film over the interior of the vagina, affording protection, and security of mind. Since the antiseptic qualities of Gynettes remain effective throughout the night—douching may be postponed until morning. Gynettes are also beneficial in soothing minor irritation and are excellent deodorants. Gynettes may be used with utmost confidence—are non-injurious—dependable, and are compounded from a formula that has the professional endorsements of Gynecologists as well as the Bureau of Feminine Hygiene.

GYN-O-SOL

Gyn-o-sol is a soft jelly which performs the same function and is compounded from the same formula as Gynettes. Use of one or the other is a matter of personal preference, the difference being entirely in the manner of application. Gyn-o-sol is applied quickly and easily and its action is immediate and effective. A similar formula is used today by thousands of women. It is non-injurious and offers the married woman the protection she wants. Its consistency is such that it spreads evenly over all internal parts and deposits a film that remains effective throughout the night, making douching unnecessary until morning.

In said statements, together with other similar statements not herein set out, and in their general advertising respondents represent directly or through implication that said products designated as Gynettes and Gyn-o-sol form competent and effective preventatives against conception, and form competent and reliable remedies, cures, or treatments for certain maladies, ills, or diseases peculiar to women such as:

- Leucorrhoea (Whites)
- Inflamed Membrane (Endometritis)
- Vaginal Inflammation (Vaginitis)
- Pelvic Inflammation
- Nervous Conditions (Neurosis)

PAR. 3. In truth and in fact the products designated as Gynettes and Gyn-o-sol do not form or constitute competent treatments, remedies, or cures for the various maladies and diseases peculiar to women hereinabove set out and are of no beneficial therapeutic value in the treatment of said diseases. Neither of said products will accomplish the results claimed by the respondents with respect to preventing conception. Neither of said products, when used in connection with the applicators furnished by the respondents will in all cases serve as competent preventatives of conception but are in some cases capable of causing injuries and deleterious effects to those making use of them.

PAR. 4. With reference to the product designated as Viornetts such statements as the following are made:

Viornetts contain Viburnum and other beneficial ingredients, and are recommended to all women who suffer periodic pain or irregularities. A uterine and ovarian sedative, its use tends to tone and strengthen these organs. Non-narcotic, chocolate coated—convenient—and fully as effective as liquid preparations. Viornetts are harmless, reliable, and efficient.

In said statements, together with other similar statements not herein set out, and in their general advertising respondents represent directly or through implication that said product designated as Viornetts form effective treatments for periodic pain or irregularities, sedative for uterine and ovarian troubles of women and to strengthen these organs and are as fully effective as liquid preparations.

In truth and in fact the products designated as Viornetts do not form or constitute competent treatments for periodic pain or irregularities, sedative for uterine and ovarian troubles as hereinabove set out and have no beneficial therapeutic value in the treatment of said diseases or conditions.

PAR. 5. With reference to the products designated as Gynex Tablets such statements as the following are made:

Of the many preparations which are used for the purpose of douching, a few equal and none has been found superior to Gynex Tablets. They are excellent deodorants, instantly destroying offensive odors. Gynex Tablets are specially manufactured for use with the Gynex Dilating Spray—together they form the ideal combination for the correct practice of feminine hygiene. Healing—soothing—refreshing.

In said statements, together with other similar statements not herein set out, and in their general advertising respondents represent directly or through implication on their part that said products designated as Gynex Tablets form competent and effective preventatives against conception, and form competent and reliable remedies, cures, or treatments for certain maladies, ills, or diseases peculiar to women such as:

- Leucorrhœa (Whites)
- Inflamed Membrane (Endometritis)
- Vaginal Inflammation (Vaginitis)
- Pelvic Inflammation
- Nervous Conditions (Neurosis)

In truth and in fact the products designated as Gynex Tablets do not form or constitute competent treatments, remedies or cures for the various maladies and diseases peculiar to women hereinabove set out and have no beneficial therapeutic value in the treatment of said diseases. The said product will not accomplish the results claimed by the respondents with respect to preventing conception. Neither will said product, when used in connection with the applicator furnished by the respondents in all cases serve as a competent preventative of conception but in some cases it is capable of causing injuries and deleterious effects to those making use of them.

PAR. 6. In the course of the operation of their business, as aforesaid, respondents employ and use agents for the promotion of the distribution and sale of the various products hereinabove named and also make use of window displays and other advertising matter purporting to be issued by a "Bureau of Hygiene" (Bureau of Feminine Hygiene). The advertising literature herein referred to purports to describe the functions of said Bureau in statements such as:

An especially important function of the Bureau of Feminine Hygiene is to select and test apparatus and medicaments suitable for the correct practice of Feminine Hygiene. The Bureau of Feminine Hygiene is pledged to sponsor only those products which have passed the most rigid tests. If the best available is not considered good enough, the product becomes the subject of further research and improvement.

The Bureau's Seal of Approval on any product for Feminine Hygiene is your assurance and guarantee of its purity, its quality, and its reliability.

FIRST, to answer a prevalent need for authentic, accurate, honest information on women's eternal and most troublesome problems. This information service is actually maintained, seriously, tactfully, and within the limits of all existing legislation. There is no attempt at evasion of regulation, nor is there any invasion of the functions belonging exclusively to the medical profession. There is a need that exists beyond these limits . . . and the Bureau meets it faithfully to the extent of its powers.

SECOND, to sponsor a line of appliances and preparations for the proper attainment of real feminine hygiene, that is of the very highest grade and efficacy in every respect. Every item now in the line has been subjected to the most exacting tests and has proven its value. Every article that may be added to the group in the future, will also be required to satisfy completely the most stringent requirements. . . .

In said statements, together with other statements not herein set out, and in their advertising literature generally, respondents represent, directly or through implication, that the Bureau of Hygiene (Bureau of Feminine Hygiene) is an organization devoted to scientific research on questions involving methods of prevention of conception and methods of preventing, treating, and curing diseases, maladies and conditions peculiar to women, and that the Bureau of Hygiene is in no way connected with, or financially interested in, the distribution and sale of the various products purported to be recommended by it in the various types of advertising literature distributed by the respondents herein.

In truth and in fact the Bureau of Hygiene is not an organization or institution organized and conducted for the carrying on of scientific research on questions involving methods of prevention of conception, or methods of preventing, treating, or curing diseases and maladies peculiar to women, or on any other questions. The Bureau of Hygiene does not make any particular study of so-called feminine hygiene and in fact does not operate any laboratory wherein various hygienic products are tested. While the respondent Bureau of Hygiene is a corporation, it does not function as a business enterprise separate and distinct from the business operations conducted by the other respondent corporations.

There are among the respondents' competitors in commerce, as herein set out, those who do not in any way misrepresent the character, nature, and size of their respective businesses and who do not misrepresent in any way the nature, character and therapeutic effect of their respective products when used, and do not make use of any of the misleading representations herein set out or others similar thereto.

PAR. 7. The aforesaid false and misleading statements and representations as used by the respondents in offering for sale and selling their various products as herein described, in commerce as herein set out, have had, and do now have, the tendency and capacity to, and do mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that said representations are true and into the purchase of substantial quantities of respondents' various products on account of said erroneous and mistaken beliefs induced as aforesaid. As a result thereof trade is unfairly diverted from competitors of respondents who do not, in the sale and distribution of their respective products, make use of the same or similar misrepresentations. In consequence thereof injury has been, and is now being done by respondents to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

PAR. 8. The methods, acts, and practices of respondents herein set forth are all to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors as hereinabove alleged. Said methods, acts and practices constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on January 29, 1937, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondents, Bureau of Hygiene, Inc., Gynex Corporation, Preferred Industries Corporation, and Benjamin Lindner, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Subsequently, the complaint was dismissed without prejudice as to the respondents, Bureau of Hygiene, Inc., Preferred Industries Corporation and Benjamin Lindner, and the respondent, Gynex Corporation filed its answer in which it admitted the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and waived the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure which answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, and the answer of respondent, Gynex Corporation, thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom.

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Gynex Corporation, is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, and has its offices and places of business at 211 East 19th Street and 301 Madison Avenue in the city of New York, N. Y.

The respondent is now, and has been for the several years last past, engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce between and among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of certain medicinal preparations and appliances for use by women in feminine hygiene.

Respondent's said preparations and appliances are variously described and known as, and sold under the names, Gynettes, Gyn-ol, Gynex Tablets, Viornettes, Gynex Fountain Bag, and Gynex Spray with Gynex Bulb.

Respondent causes said preparations and appliances, when sold, to be transported from its said places of business in the city of New York, New York, to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States other than the State of New York and in the District of Columbia. Respondent maintains a constant current of trade in said commerce in the sale and distribution of said preparations and appliances.

PAR. 2. During all of the times mentioned herein the respondent has been in substantial competition in said commerce with other corporations and with firms and individuals, some of whom are engaged in the sale and distribution of preparations and appliances similar in kind to those sold and distributed by the respondent and others of whom are engaged in the sale and distribution of preparations, remedies and treatments used and useful for the purposes for which the respondent represents and implies that its said preparations and appliances are useful.

Among the competitors of the respondent in said commerce are many who do not in any manner misrepresent their products and the efficacy thereof.

PAR. 3. In the conduct of its business in said commerce, and for the purpose of inducing the purchase of its said preparations and appliances, the respondent caused to be prepared and distributed among prospective purchasers, booklets, pamphlets, circulars, and window display placards which contain statements descriptive of said preparations and appliances and the efficacy thereof when used for the purposes recommended.

PAR. 4. Among and typical of the statements so made in connection with the sale and distribution of said preparations and appliances are the following:

One Gynette is used upon retiring, or when desired. In a few minutes its cocoa butter base melts, spreading an antiseptic film over the interior of the vagina, affording protection, and security of mind. Since the antiseptic qualities of Gynettes remain effective throughout the night—douching may be postponed until morning. Gynettes are also beneficial in soothing minor irritation and are excellent deodorants. Gynettes may be used with utmost confidence—are non-injurious—dependable, and are compounded from a formula that has the professional endorsements of Gynecologists as well as the Bureau of Feminine Hygiene.

Gyn-o-sol is a soft jelly which performs the same function and is compounded from the same formula as Gynettes. Use of one or the other is a matter of personal preference, the difference being entirely in the manner of application. Gyn-o-sol is applied quickly and easily and its action is immediate and effective. A similar formula is used today by thousands of women. It is non-injurious and offers the married woman the protection she wants. Its consistency is such that it spreads evenly over all internal parts and deposits a film that remains effective throughout the night, making douching unnecessary until morning.

Of the many preparations which are used for the purpose of douching, few equal and none has been found superior to Gynex Tablets. They are excellent deodorants, instantly destroying offensive odors. Gynex Tablets are especially manufactured for use with the Gynex Dilating Spray—together they form the ideal combination for the correct practice of feminine hygiene. Healing—soothing—refreshing.

Vionetts contain Viburnum and other beneficial ingredients, and are recommended to all women who suffer periodic pain or irregularities. A uterine and ovarian sedative, its use tends to tone and strengthen these organs. Non-narcotic chocolate coated—convenient—and fully as effective as liquid preparations. Vionetts are harmless, reliable and efficient.

Many other statements of similar import and meaning are used by the respondent in connection with the sale and distribution of said preparations and appliances.

PAR. 5. By the means and in the manner set out in paragraph 4 hereof the respondent represents and implies that the preparations "Gynettes," "Gynex Tablets," and "Gyn-o-sol" are competent and effective preventatives of conception and that they are an absolute protection against pregnancy, and can be depended upon for which purpose without limitation; that said preparations are competent and reliable remedies, treatments and cures for ills and diseases peculiar to women, including leucorrhea, inflamed membranes, vaginal inflammation, pelvic inflammation, and nervous conditions.

By the means and in the manner set out in paragraph 4, the respondent represents and implies that the preparation of "Viornetts" is a competent and effective treatment or cure for periodic pains or irregularities in the menstruation period of women, a sedative for uterine and ovarian troubles of women, and that its use will strengthen those organs.

The preparations "Gynettes," "Gynex Tablets," and "Gyn-o-sol" and the appliances used in connection therewith are not competent and effective preventatives of conception, and are not an absolute protection against pregnancy, and cannot be depended upon for such purposes without limitation; said preparations are not competent and reliable remedies, treatments, and cures for ills and diseases peculiar to women, including leucorrhea, inflamed membranes, vaginal inflammation, pelvic inflammation, and nervous conditions.

The preparation "Viornetts" is not a competent and effective treatment or cure for periodic pains or irregularities in the menstruation period of women, a sedative for uterine or ovarian troubles of women, and its use will not strengthen these organs.

Said preparations have no beneficial therapeutic value in the treatment of any of the ailments, ills and diseases mentioned herein.

PAR. 6. Respondent in said booklets, pamphlets, circulars and window display placards represents that its said preparations and appliances have been submitted to, tested and approved by an independent organization devoted to scientific research on questions involving the methods of preventing conception and preventing, treating, and curing the diseases, maladies and conditions peculiar to women, and that such organization so testing and approving the preparations and appliances of the respondent is in no way connected with or financially interested in the sale and distribution of said preparations and appliances.

Respondent's said preparations and appliances have not been submitted to, tested, and approved by an independent organization devoted to scientific research on questions involving the methods of preventing conception and preventing, treating and curing the diseases, maladies, and conditions peculiar to women, which was in no way connected with or financially interested in the sale and distribution of said preparations and appliances.

PAR. 7. Respondent in said booklets, pamphlets, circulars, and window display placards represents that said preparations and the appliances used in connection therewith may be used with safety and without deleterious effects by women to prevent conception.

In many cases the use of such preparations and appliances used in connection therewith are capable of causing, and do cause, injuries and have a deleterious effect on those using them.

PAR. 8. The representations and implications of the respondent in connection with the sale and distribution of said preparations and appliances in said commerce, as stated, have the tendency and capacity to and do confuse, mislead, and deceive members of the public as to the properties and efficacy of said preparations and appliances in the particulars herein set forth, and to cause them, because of the erroneous beliefs engendered by said representations and implications to buy and use said preparations and appliances, thereby substantially diverting trade in said commerce to the respondent from its competitors who truthfully represent their products, to their injury and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Gynex Corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST, ETC.

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer filed herein by the respondent, Gynex Corporation, admitting all material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondent, Gynex Corporation, has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Order

· 24 F. T. C.

It is ordered, That the respondent, Gynex Corporation, its officer, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of the medicinal or pharmaceutical preparations and appliances which are designed, intended and used in the treatment of various female ailments and conditions and for female hygiene purposes now designated as Gynettes, Gyn-o-sol, Gynex Tablets, Viornetts, Gynex Fountain Bag, and Gynex Spray with Gynex Bulb, or of any other preparations or appliances of substantially the same ingredients and therapeutic effect or of substantially the same design, whether designated by the aforementioned names or by any other names, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing, directly or by implication:

1. That the preparations "Gynettes", "Gynex Tablets," and "Gyn-o-sol" are competent and effective preventatives of conception, an absolute protection against pregnancy, and can be depended upon for such purposes without limitation.

2. That the preparations "Gynettes", "Gynex Tablets" and "Gyn-o-sol" are competent and reliable remedies, treatments, and cures for ills and diseases peculiar to women, including leucorrhoea, inflamed membranes, vaginal and pelvic inflammation, and nervous conditions.

3. That the preparation "Viornetts" is a competent and effective treatment or cure for period pains and irregularities in the menstruation period of women, a sedative for uterine and ovarian troubles of women and that it strengthens the ovaries and uterus.

4. That said preparations and appliances have been tested and approved by an independent organization devoted to scientific research on questions involving the methods of preventing conception and preventing, treating, and curing the diseases, maladies, and conditions peculiar to women, until and unless such an organization has tested and approved said preparations and appliances, and

5. That said preparations and appliances may be used with safety and without deleterious effects by all women.

It is further ordered, That the complaint herein be and the same hereby is, dismissed as to the respondents, Bureau of Hygiene, Inc., Preferred Industries Corporation, and Benjamin Lindner, without prejudice.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Gynex Corporation, shall within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

STANDARD DISTRIBUTORS, INC., AND LOUIS H. GELLAR

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3065. Complaint, Feb. 19, 1937—Decision, May 13, 1937

Where a corporation and an individual, president and manager thereof and director of its policies and practices, engaged in the distribution and sale of radios, food beaters, and food mixers, and of lottery schemes in connection with sale of aforesaid products to retail merchants in the various States—

(a) Sold and distributed to retail merchants located at various points throughout the United States, in connection with sale and distribution of aforesaid products, a lottery scheme and sales plan and paraphernalia and devices necessary to the carrying out of said scheme and distribution of aforesaid products among the customers of such merchants, under a scheme or plan by which the chance holders of the two right keys, out of a large number which it supplied to its respective merchant customers, to unlock padlock supplied with said key assortments, received, as case might be, radio, food beater or food mixer, and thereby supplied to and placed in the hands of others means of conducting lotteries in sale or distribution of said products in accordance with such plan, contrary to the established public policy of the United States and to the laws of many States, and in competition with many unwilling, by reason of said facts, to offer or sell their merchandise so as to involve game of chance, and who refrain therefrom;

With result that many retail merchants and prospective purchasers of merchandising and sales promotion plans, attracted by element of chance involved in sales method above described, were induced to purchase their said merchandise and participate in said plan, in preference to purchase of same or similar merchandise and in preference to purchase or use of other merchandising or sales promotion plans from competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods in sale or distribution of their goods, and with tendency and capacity unfairly to divert to themselves, because of use of said lottery or game of chance, trade and commerce from competitors who do not use same or equivalent methods, to exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and do not use such practices, lessen competition therein and tend to create a monopoly thereof in them and such other competitors as do use same or equivalent practices or methods, and to deprive purchasing public of benefits of free competition therein, and with tendency and capacity, further, unfairly to eliminate therefrom all actual, and exclude therefrom all potential, competitors who do not adopt and use such or any method involving game of chance or sale of chance thus to win such articles, as contrary to public policy or laws of many States, as above set forth, or as, in their opinion, detrimental to public morals and those of persons among whom chances are distributed;

(b) Represented, through their agents and field representatives, to retailers that said merchandising and sales promotion plan or lottery scheme, sup-

Facts being said lottery plan or scheme, thus distributed by it, was not a sales promotion plan to get their products before purchasing public, but scheme to dispose thereof to retailers, they did not redeem keys returned by participating retailers as above set forth, or return to such retailers all or substantial part of the money paid by them, nor furnish envelopes, nor supply circulars or girls to distribute same as above set forth, but demanded and received substantial deposit upon a retailer's agreement to participate, shipped prize merchandise, paraphernalia, and devices C. With effect of causing many retailers erroneously to believe that aforesaid representations were true, and of causing a substantial portion thereof to participate in such plan and purchase merchandise from them because of such erroneous belief, and of thereby diverting substantial trade in such commerce to them from their competitors who truthfully represent their merchandise and sales plans; to their injury and that of the public:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

1205

est, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Standard Distributors, Inc., is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of New York. The respondent, Louis H. Gellar, an individual, is president of the respondent corporation, and manages and directs its policies and practices. Both respondents have their principal place of business located at 114 E. 32 St., in the city of New York, in the State of New York.

The respondents are now and for more than one year last past have been engaged in the business of distributing and selling radios and food beaters and mixers and have also been engaged in selling lottery schemes to retail merchants located at points in the various States of the United States. They cause and have caused their said products and merchandising plan, when so sold, to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of New York, State of New York, and distributed to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for more than one year last past, a constant current of trade and commerce by said respondents, in such products and merchandising plan, between and among the States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are in competition with other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of radios, food beaters and mixers, cards, trade cards, discount cards, premium cards, coupons, trading stamps, and merchandising plans, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as aforesaid, the respondents sell and distribute to retail merchants located at various points throughout the United States, radios and food beaters and mixers, and, in connection therewith, sell and distribute to such merchants a lottery scheme and sales plan, whereby said radios and food beaters and mixers are distributed among the customers of such merchants by chance. Respondents sell and distribute to such merchants the paraphernalia and devices necessary to the carrying out of said lottery scheme and the distribution of said merchandise by chance, a part of which is a large number of keys, usually 4,500, and a padlock. One of said keys is distributed by the merchants to customers with each purchase of a given amount of merchandise, usually 25¢ worth. When a fixed number of said keys, usually the entire number furnished by the respondents, have been distributed among the customers of the merchants, the keys so distributed are collected by the merchant and fitted into the said padlock. Two of the keys so distributed will fit the padlock, and to the holders of each of these two keys the merchant delivers a radio or food beater and mixer, as the case may be, furnished by the said respondents. Said radios and food beaters and mixers are thus distributed to the customers of said retail merchants by lottery, gift enterprise, or game of chance.

Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale of its said radios and food beaters and mixers in accordance with the plan hereinabove set forth. The use by the respondents of said method in the distribution of its said radios and food beaters and mixers, and the sale of said radios and food beaters and mixers by and through the use thereof, is a practice contrary to the established public policy of the United States, and contrary to the laws of many of the States of the United States, and because of said facts many competitors of said respondents are unwilling to offer for sale or sell their merchandise so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Many retail merchants who are prospective purchasers of radios and food beaters and mixers are attracted by the element of chance involved in respondents' sales method as above described, and are thereby induced to purchase respondents' merchandise, and participate in said plan, in preference to the same or similar merchandise from respondents' competitors, who do not use the same or equivalent methods in selling or distributing their merchandise.

PAR. 3. The use of the method above set forth by the respondents has a tendency and capacity unfairly to divert to the respondents, because of the use of said lottery or game of chance, trade and commerce from their competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods; to lessen competition in said trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said trade in respondents and such other competitors who use the same or equivalent methods; and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefits of free competition in said trade. The use of said methods by the respondents has the tendency and capacity unfairly to eliminate from said trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said method, or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win radios or food beaters and mixers by chance, because such method is contrary to the public policy of the United States or to the laws of many of the States of the United States, or because they are of the opinion that such method is detrimental to public morals and to the morals of the persons among whom said chances are distributed, or because of any or all of said reasons.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their business, as aforesaid, respondents represent to retailers that the lottery plan or scheme as above set out is a sales promotion plan, devised by the respondents to get their radios and food beaters and mixers before the public, and that the retailer participating in the plan may do so without cost, in that the respondents "sell" such retailer the plan, including the merchandise given as a prize, at a price which is equivalent to one cent per key for the keys furnished, and represent that they, when the prize merchandise has been distributed, will pay to the retailer the sum of one cent for each key returned to the respondents for refund, thereby returning to the retailer all of the money paid to the respondents, if all of the keys are returned, and that the retailer thereafter will have the agency for, and receive a commission on the sales of, respondents' radios and food beaters and mixers distributed in the particular territory where the retailer is located. Respondents further represent that they will furnish envelopes within which the customers of the retailer are to place their keys, and upon which they are to place their names and addresses, to be returned to the retailer so that the keys may be fitted into the padlock, thus securing for the retailer and respondents a list of prospective purchasers of radios and food beaters and mixers. Respondents further represent that they will supply to the retailer five thousand circulars descriptive of the plan, and will furnish a corps of girls to distribute such circulars. Respondents represent and imply that the radios to be distributed are "Majestic" radios, a trade name for radios manufactured by Grigsby-Grunow Company, and well and favorably known to the purchasing public, and a radio that is preferred by a substantial portion of the purchasing public to radios not of an established brand or sold under a recognized trade name.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the lottery plan or scheme so distributed by the respondents is not a sales promotion plan to get their products before the purchasing public, but is a scheme to dispose of their said products to retailers, for the respondents fail and refuse to redeem the keys returned to them by retailers participating in the plan at the rate of one cent each, and to return to such retailers all, or a substantial part, of the money paid the respondents. In truth and in fact, the respondents do not furnish envelopes in which the keys are to be placed and returned to the retailers by customers, nor do they supply to retailers five thousand circulars and a corps of girls to distribute such circulars. The radios distributed by the respondents are not the brand of radios known to the purchasing public as "Majestic" radios, but are inferior to "Majestic" radios and of the type that is commonly known and referred to as a "gyp" radio, which means a radio not manufactured and distributed by a reputable and responsible concern.

Retailers have no opportunity to learn, prior to the time of full payment of the money to the respondents for their participation in the plan, that the representations made by the respondents in regard to the envelopes, circulars, and brand of radios furnished are not true, for respondents demand and receive a substantial deposit at the time the retailer agrees to participate in the plan, and the prize merchandise, paraphernalia, and devices used in the plan are shipped to the retailer cash on delivery, and full payment is made by the retailer before inspection. Respondents fail and refuse to return to retailers the moneys paid when discovery of the misrepresentations of the respondents is made, and a demand is made upon the respondents for such refund.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid representations and implications of the respondents are false and misleading, and have the tendency and capacity to, and do, cause many retailers erroneously to believe that said representations are true, and cause a substantial portion of such retailers to participate in said plan and to purchase merchandise from the said respondents, because of such erroneous belief, thereby unfairly diverting substantial trade in said commerce to the respondents from their competitors, who truthfully represent their merchandise and sales plans, to the injury of said competitors in said commerce, and to the injury of the public.

PAR. 7. The acts, practices, and methods of the respondents, as hereinabove alleged, are all to the prejudice of the public and the respondents' said competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

vidual, charging them with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint (the respondents never having filed answer thereto), a stipulation as to the facts was entered into by and between the respondents and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, by which it was agreed that, subject to the approval of the Commission, the statement of facts so agreed upon should be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint or in opposition thereto; and by which stipulation it was further agreed that the Commission might proceed upon said statement of facts to issue its report stating its findings as to the facts (including inferences which it might draw from the said stipulated facts) and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of arguments or the filing of briefs. Said stipulation as to the facts has been duly filed in the office of the Commission and approved by it. Thereafter the proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint, and the statement of facts as agreed upon in lieu of testimony, briefs and argument having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

PARAGRAPII 1. The respondent, Standard Distributors, Inc., is a corporation organized and operating under the laws of the State of New York. The respondent, Louis H. Gellar, an individual, is president of the respondent corporation, and manages and directs its policies and practices. Both respondents have their principal place of business located at 114 E. 32nd Street, in the city of New York, in the State of New York.

The respondents are now, and for more than one year last past have been, engaged in the business of distributing and selling radios, food beaters and food mixers and have also been engaged in selling lottery schemes in connection with the sale of said products to retail merchants located at points in various States of the United States. They cause and have caused their said products and merchandising plan, when so sold, to be transported from their principal place of business in the city of New York, State of New York, and distributed to purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States at their respective places of business. There is now, and has been for more than one year last past, a constant current of trade and commerce by said respondents, in such products and merchandising plan, between and among the States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are in competition with other corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of radios, food beaters and food mixers, and also engaged in the manufacture of cards, trade cards, discount cards, premium cards, coupons, trading stamps, and merchandising plans, in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of their business, as aforesaid, the respondents sell and distribute to retail merchants located at various points throughout the United States, radios, food beaters and food mixers, and, in connection therewith, sell and distribute to such merchants a lottery scheme and sales plan, whereby said radios, food beaters and food mixers are distributed among the customers of such merchants by chance. Respondents sell and distribute to such merchants the paraphernalia and devices necessary to the carrying out of said lottery scheme and the distribution of said merchandise by chance, a part of which is a large number of keys, usually 4,500, and a padlock. One of said keys is distributed by the merchants to customers with each purchase of a given amount of merchandise, usually 25¢ worth. Since on or about May 1, 1936, the said sales promotion plan and the form of contract incident thereto was changed so as to provide that the retail merchant purchasing said sales promotion plan would distribute said keys to customers without additional charge. When a fixed number of said keys, usually the entire number furnished by the respondents, have been distributed among the customers of the merchants, the keys so distributed are collected by the merchant and fitted into the said padlock. Two of the keys so distributed will fit the padlock, and to the holders of each of these two keys the merchant delivers a radio, food beater, or food mixer, as the case may be, furnished by the said respondents. Said radios, food beaters, and food mixers are thus distributed to the customers of said retail merchants by lottery, gift enterprise, or game of chance.

Respondent thus supplies to and places in the hands of others the means of conducting lotteries in the sale or distribution of its said radios, food beaters and food mixers in accordance with the plan hereinabove set forth. The use by the respondents of said method in the sale and distribution of its said radios, food beaters and food mixers is a practice of the sort that is contrary to the established public policy of the United States, and contrary to the laws of many of the States of the United States, and because of said facts many competitors of said respondents are unwilling to offer for sale or sell their merchandise so as to involve a game of chance, and such competitors refrain therefrom.

Many retail merchants who are prospective purchasers of merchandising plans and sales promotion plans are attracted by the element of chance involved in respondents' sales method as above described, and are thereby induced to purchase respondents' merchandise, and participate in said plan, in preference to purchasing the same or similar merchandise and in preference to purchasing or using other merchandising or sales promotion plans from respondents' competitors, who do not use the same or equivalent methods in selling or distributing their merchandise.

PAR. 3. The use of the method above set forth by the respondents has a tendency and capacity unfairly to divert to the respondents, because of the use of said lottery or game of chance, trade and commerce from their competitors who do not use the same or equivalent methods, to exclude from said trade all competitors who are unwilling to and who do not use the same or equivalent methods, to lessen competition in said trade, and to tend to create a monopoly of said trade in respondents and such other competitors who use the same or equivalent methods, and to deprive the purchasing public of the benefits of free competition in said trade. The use of said methods by the respondents has the tendency and capacity unfairly to eliminate from said trade all actual competitors, and to exclude therefrom all potential competitors who do not adopt and use said method, or any method involving a game of chance or the sale of a chance to win radios, food beaters or food mixers by chance, because such method is contrary to the public policy of the United States or to the laws of many of the States of the United States or because they are of the opinion that such method is detrimental to public morals and to the morals of the persons among whom said chances are distributed, or because of any or all of said reasons.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of respondents' business, as aforesaid, the agents and field representatives of the said respondents, in the course of their employment have from time to time represented to retailers that the lottery plan or scheme as above set out is a sales promotion plan, devised by the respondents to get their radios, food beaters and food mixers before the public, and that the retailer participating in the plan may do so without cost, in that the respondents "sell" such retailer the plan, including the merchandise given as a prize, at a price which is equivalent to one cent per key for the keys furnished, and represent that respondents, when the prize merchandise has been distributed, will pay to the retailer the sum of one cent for each key returned to the respondents for refund, thereby returning to the retailer all of the money paid to the respondents, if all of the keys are returned, and that the retailer thereafter will have the agency for, and receive a commission on the sales of, respondents' radios, food beaters and food mixers distributed in the particular territory where the retailer is located. Respondents' said agents and field representatives, in the course of their employment further represent that respondents will furnish envelopes within which the customers of the retailers are to place their keys, and upon which they are to place their names and addresses, to be returned to the retailer so that the keys may be fitted into the padlock, thus securing for the retailer and respondents a list of prospective purchasers of radios, food beaters, and food mixers. Respondents' said agents and field representatives, in the course of their employment, further represent that respondents will supply to the retailer five thousand circulars descriptive of the plan, and will furnish a corps of girls to distribute such circulars.

Respondents further represent through the use of contract forms, circulars, and other printed matter, and through their agents and field representatives that the radios to be distributed are "Majestic" radios. Said word "Majestic" is a trade name for radios manufactured by Grigsby-Grunow Company, which are well and favorably known to the purchasing public, and preferred by a substantial portion of the purchasing public to radios not of an established brand or sold under a recognized trade name.

PAR. 5. In truth and in fact, the lottery plan or scheme so distributed by the respondents is not a sales promotion plan to get their products before the purchasing public, but is a scheme to dispose of their said products to retailers. The respondents do not redeem the keys returned to them by retailers participating in the plan at the rate of one cent each, and do not return to such retailers all, or a substantial part, of the money paid the respondents. In truth and in fact, the respondents do not furnish envelopes in which the keys are to be placed and returned to the retailers by customers, nor do they supply to retailers 5,000 circulars and a corps of girls to distribute such circulars. The representations made by the respondents in regard to the envelopes, circulars and brand of radios furnished are not true, for respondents demand and receive a substantial deposit at the time the retailer agrees to participate in the plan, and the prize merchandise, paraphernalia, and devices used in the plan are shipped to the retailer cash on delivery, and full payment is made by the retailer before inspection.

The radios distributed by the respondents are not the brand of radios known to the purchasing public as "Majestic," manufactured by Grigsby-Grunow Company. Said so-called "Majestic" radios are inferior to the real MAJESTIC radios manufactured by the Grigsby-Grunow Company and are of the type that is commonly known as a "gyp" radio, which means a radio not manufactured and distributed by a reputable and responsible firm.

Respondents fail and refuse to return to retailers the moneys paid when discovery of the misrepresentations of the said respondents' agents and field representatives is made, and a demand is made upon the respondents for such refund.

PAR. 6. The aforesaid misrepresentations of respondents' said agents and field representatives are false and misleading, and have the tendency and capacity to, and do, cause many retailers erroneously to believe that said representations are true, and cause a substantial portion of such retailers to participate in said plan, and to purchase merchandise from the said respondents, because of such erroneous belief, thereby unfairly diverting substantial trade in said commerce to the respondents from their competitors, who truthfully represent their merchandise and sales plans, to the injury of said competitors in said commerce, and to the injury of the public.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Standard Distributors, Inc., a corporation, and Louis H. Gellar, an individual, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission (the respondents never having filed answer thereto), and the agreed Stipulation of Facts entered into between the respondents herein, Standard Distributors, Inc., a corporation, and Louis H. Gellar, an individual, and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Commission, which provides, among other things, that without further evidence or other intervening procedure, the Commission may issue and serve upon the respondents herein findings as to the facts and conclusion based thereon and an order disposing of the proceeding, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and conclusion that said respondents have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September

Order

26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Standard Distributors, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and the respondent, Louis H. Gellar, individually, and as president of the aforesaid Standard Distributors, Inc., in connection with the sale, offering for sale, or distribution of radios, food beaters, food mixers, or other articles of merchandise in interstate commerce, cease and desist from:

1. Furnishing, supplying, or selling any device or paraphernalia which is to be used, or which may be used, in the distribution of said articles of merchandise to the public by means of lottery scheme, lottery sales plan, game of chance, or gift enterprise;

2. Furnishing, supplying to, or selling retail merchants paraphernalia and devices, a part of which is a large number of keys and a padlock, one of which said keys is to be distributed by said merchants to each of their customers with the purchase of a given amount of merchandise, and when a fixed number of such keys has been so distributed, said keys are to be collected by the said merchant and fitted, or tried to be fitted, into the said padlock, a small number of which keys only will fit or unlock said padlock, the holders of such keys being entitled to receive and to be given without additional charge one of said radios, food mixers, food beaters, or other articles of merchandise.

It is further ordered, That the respondent, Standard Distributors, Inc., a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, and the respondent, Louis H. Gellar, individually, and as president of the aforesaid Standard Distributors, Inc., in connection with the sale, offering for sale, or distribution of merchandising and sales promotion plans or lottery schemes, cease and desist from:

1. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, retail merchants, devices or paraphernalia which are to be used, or which may be used, to promote or increase the local sales of such retail merchandise by means of a lottery, gift enterprise, or game of chance;

2. Supplying to, or placing in the hands of retail merchants, a padlock and a number of keys, a small number of which keys only will unlock said padlock for use, or which are to be used, for increasing the sales of said retail merchants by means of a lottery scheme, gift enterprise, or game of chance.

And it is further ordered, That the said respondents, Standard Distributors, Inc., a corporation, its officers, agents, and employees, and Louis H. Gellar, individually and as president of the aforesaid Standard Distributors, Inc., in connection with the sale and offering for

HOGAN ADVERTISING COMPANY, TRADING AS THE SENDOL COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2381. Complaint, July 24, 1936—Decision, May 14, 1937¹

Where a corporation engaged in the sale and distribution of a proprietary medicine designated and known as "Sendol" and as alleged remedy for colds, headaches, and pains; in advertising the same in newspapers, magazines, pamphlets, by radio, and through testimonials and otherwise—

- (a) Falsely represented that said product was a safe medicine to administer in all cases and was a safe remedy to give to children; and
- (b) Falsely represented that it was effective and reliable in all cases of muscular, rheumatic or neuralgic aches and pains, and afforded quick relief in all cases of headaches, colds, aches or pains, and was an efficacious remedy in cases of nervousness or nervous exhaustion;

With effect of misleading and deceiving substantial portion of purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations were true, and with result that consuming public, as a direct consequence of mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by such false and misleading statements and representations, purchased substantial volume of its said product, and trade was unfairly diverted to it from those of its competitors engaged in sale and distribution of products prepared for and sold as remedies for colds, headaches, and muscular aches and pains, and who truthfully advertise and represent the therapeutic value, and the effects to be derived from the use of, their said products; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission having reason to believe that the Hogan Advertising Company, a corporation, doing business under the firm name and style of the Sendol Company, hereinafter referred to as the respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Hogan Advertising Company is a corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the State of Missouri, and trading and doing business under the firm name of the Sendol Company, with its office and principal place of business located at Room 129 Coates Building, 1008-1010 Walnut Street, in the city of Kansas City and State of Missouri. Respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been engaged in the sale and distribution, in constant course of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, of a proprietary medicine, designated "Sendol," an alleged remedy for colds, headaches, and pains. In the course and conduct of its business respondent causes said medicine, when sold, to be transported from its place of business in the State of Missouri, into and through various other States of the United States to the purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been in substantial competition with other corporations, individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling remedies and proprietary medicines in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, by means of statements and testimonials, published in magazine and newspaper advertisements, pamphlets, folders, labels, radio broadcasting, and otherwise, respondent falsely makes to the general public the following and many other similar and equivalent statements and representations with reference to the efficacy and therapeutic value of its said product and its effect upon the users thereof:

You will like the quick, pleasant action of Sendol and the effective way in which it starts to work to give quick relief from a simple cold, ache or pain . . . Sendol soothes tired, overworked, frayed nerves, and one or two tablets give relief in just a few minutes.

It dissolves almost instantly in the stomach and starts to work immediately to give relief from simple colds, as well as simple headaches, muscular rheumatic and neuralgic aches and pains.

Sendol dissolves almost instantly in the stomach—and the relief is immediate.

They are perfectly safe to take or to give—even to children.

They are safe—pleasant—effective—reliable.

In truth and in fact said statements and representations were and are false and misleading, in that said "Sendol" is not a safe medicine to give or to take in all cases, and is not a safe medicine to give to children; it is not effective and reliable in cases of muscular rheumatic or neuralgic aches and pains; it does not afford quick relief in all cases of headaches, colds, aches or pains and it is not an efficacious remedy in cases of nervousness or nervous exhaustion. Said preparation contains aspirin and digitalis and is therefore not safe to administer to all persons or to children.

There are among the competitors of respondent, as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, dealers and distributors of products similar in kind and purpose, who do not in any way misrepresent the efficacy or therapeutic value of their products.

PAR. 4. The above and foregoing representations as to the therapeutic value and effects of its product as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof in the course of its advertising, offering for sale and selling its product in commerce as aforesaid, have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said product is an effective remedy for the treatment or relief of headaches, colds, aches and pains and have the capacity and tendency to and do induce the said purchasing public, acting in such erroneous belief, to purchase respondent's product, thereby diverting trade to the respondent from those of its competitors who do not misrepresent the efficacy and therapeutic value of their products, and in this way respondent does substantial injury to competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 5. The above acts and things done or caused to be done by the respondent corporation were and are each and all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

mission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer, filing of briefs having been waived and no request having been made for oral argument, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Hogan Advertising Company, is a Missouri corporation, doing business under the firm name of The Sendol Company. Its place of business is at Room 129 Coates Building, 1008-1010 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Mo.

It is now and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in the sale and distribution of a proprietary medicine designated and known as "Sendol," an alleged remedy for colds, headaches, and pains. When orders are received for Sendol, respondent causes said product to be shipped and transported from its place of business in Kansas City, Mo., to the purchasers thereof located in various States of the United States other than the State of Missouri and in the District of Columbia.

At all times since respondent has been in said business there have been other corporations, and firms and individuals, likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of products prepared for and sold as remedies or treatments for colds, headaches, and pains, in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Respondent, in the sale and distribution of its product, is in competition with such other corporations, firms and individuals in such commerce.

PAR. 2. The respondent advertises its said product in newspapers, magazines, pamphlets, by radio, through testimonials, and otherwise.

Representative of its advertising claims are the following:

You will like the quick, pleasant action of Sendol and the effective way which it starts to work to give quick relief from a simple cold, ache or pain . . . Sendol soothes tired, overworked, frayed nerves, and one or two tablets give relief in just a few minutes.

It dissolves almost instantly in the stomach and starts to work immediately to give relief from simple colds, as well as simple headaches, muscular rheumatic and neuralgic aches and pains.

Order

24 F. T. C.

Sendol dissolves almost instantly in the stomach—and the relief is immediate. They are perfectly safe to take or to give—even to children.

They are perfectly safe to take or to give—even to children.

The representations set forth above are untrue in that Sendol is not a safe medicine to administer in all cases and is not a safe remedy to give to children; it is not effective and reliable in cases of muscular rheumatic or neuralgic aches and pains; it does not afford quick relief in all cases of headaches, colds, aches or pains and it is not an efficacious remedy in cases of nervousness or nervous exhaustion.

PAR. 3. The false and misleading statements and misrepresentations made by respondent, in its said advertising, as to the therapeutic value and effects of its said product, have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and have misled and deceived a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said representations are true. As a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the false and misleading statements and representations above referred to, the consuming public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's product and as a result thereof, trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondent from those of its competitors, likewise engaged in the business of selling and distributing products prepared for and sold as remedies for colds, headaches, and muscular aches and pains, who truthfully advertise and represent the therapeutic value of and the effects to be derived from the use of their said products. As a result thereof substantial injury has been and is now being done by respondent to competition, in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent Hogan Advertising Company, trading as The Sendol Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

herein on May 11, 1937, by respondent admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Hogan Advertising Company, a corporation, doing business under the firm name and style of The Sendol Company, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of a product now known as "Sendol," or any product containing the same, or substantially the same, ingredients, sold under that name, or any other trade name, in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from representing that said product:

1. Is a safe medicine to give or to take in all cases;
2. Is a safe medicine to give to children;
3. Is an effective and reliable remedy in cases of muscular, rheumatic or neuralgic aches and pains;
4. Affords quick relief in all cases of headaches, colds, aches or pains;
5. Is an effective remedy for nervousness or nervous exhaustion.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

 OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914.

Docket 2952. Complaint, Oct. 20, 1936—Decision, May 15, 1937.

Where an individual engaged in promoting sale of mushroom spawn, in competition with others selling such products in interstate commerce, or with legitimate trade associations of growers, or with those who do not represent that such products may be grown in any idle space about the home or raised there in small quantities with tremendous financial returns, or make other representations as hereinafter set forth—

- (a) Represented, through trade name "Mushroom Growers of America," and featuring thereof in his correspondence, advertisements, and trade literature, and as signature to correspondence and circulars, together with signature by "Managing Director," and through use of such name on cards issued to persons making their initial purchase from him, certifying such person was entitled to the benefits of "our Growers Service Bureau at all times," and requesting such person, whenever a problem presented itself, "to communicate with us and we will give you the best possible advice," without charge, and through statement in correspondence, advertisements and trade literature to the effect that "Your M. G. A. membership card entitles you to the prompt and efficient advisory service of the M. G. A. Service Bureau entirely without cost to you," that business operated by him was a large and substantial organization or trade association of many persons, mutually cooperating with each other in the industry in growing and marketing mushrooms, and that it maintained a staff of expert personnel who might be consulted for advice as to technical questions arising in connection with said industry, facts being it was not such an organization, was not incorporated, had no board of directors or managing director, and was simply a firm name or style adopted by individual in question to induce members of public to patronize such individual under false impression that they were dealing with a bona fide trade organization or association, and neither said individual nor any of his employees were expert in growing mushrooms or competent to give technical advice concerning the same; and
- (b) Represented that mushrooms might easily be grown in any idle space in or about the home and without unpleasant odors, and that such growing was a simple and highly remunerative industry in which anyone might successfully engage for profit without previous experience or technical skill, and that there was a shortage on the market of mushrooms and amateurs might make a fortune or a substantial profit, through such statements, among others, as "Almost any vacant, idle space about your home can be quickly and inexpensively converted into an ideal Mushroom bed. * * ," "Just a few dollars will get you well on your way to success," "Almost any vacant space yields big money in mushroom growing," " * * one of the SIMPLEST and most REMUNERATIVE of industries * * ," " * *

In truth and in fact, respondent's firm name and style, "Mushroom Growers of America," is not an association or trade organization of many individual growers or producers of mushrooms, is not incorporated, has no board of directors or managing director; but is simply a firm name or style adopted by the said respondent, Maurice Willens, an individual, for the purpose of inducing members of the public to patronize him under the false impression that they are dealing with a bona fide trade organization or association, and neither respondent nor any employee is an expert in growing mushrooms or competent to give technical advice concerning the same.

There is a fortune in Mushrooms.

Thus you see, lack of personal experience is no handicap in this amazing business if you put yourself under the guidance of competent, sympathetic advisors.

A DIGNIFIED BUSINESS FOR WOMEN ALSO. Many women also are searching for remunerative and pleasant employment and what can be more dignified than Mushroom Growing? It is clean work and there is nothing menial about it.

M. G. A. Mushroom beds emit no unpleasant odor.

Said statements serve as representations on the part of respondent to a substantial portion of the purchasing public that there is a tremendous demand for mushrooms and that the respondent's mushroom spawn will produce extraordinary financial remuneration to growers thereof, and that said spawn may be planted in any idle space about the home; that said mushroom growing may be accomplished without odors; that it is an easy and pleasant occupation and may be successfully accomplished by persons of no experience whatsoever.

In truth and in fact, there is no unusual demand for mushrooms, and the production of mushrooms by amateur growers at home in small beds is not highly remunerative financially. Mushrooms cannot be successfully raised in any idle space about the home, but can only be grown in properly constructed places kept at a definite temperature, ventilated in a precise manner, accompanied by the exclusion of light. The raising of mushrooms cannot be accomplished without disagreeable odors, as the preparation of the beds involves the use of a compost made from manure. Mushrooms cannot be successfully grown without experience, as production requires a high degree of technical skill. It is not an easy and pleasant occupation, due to the hard work and disagreeable odor incident to preparing the compost, erecting the beds, and the constant care and attention required in regulating the temperature, humidity, and ventilation.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent, as set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, other individuals, firms, corporations, or partnerships who do sell mushroom spawn in interstate commerce or who are legitimate trade associations of mushroom growers, or who do not represent that mushrooms may be grown in any idle space about the home, or that mushrooms can be raised in small quantities at home with tremendous financial returns, and in the other ways set forth in paragraphs 2 and 3 hereof.

PAR. 5. The acts and practices of respondent in using a firm name or style calculated to falsely induce the public to believe that respondent's business, conducted under the name of Mushroom Growers of America is, in fact, a trade organization or association of bona fide mushroom growers, and in falsely representing and advertising that there is a tremendous demand for mushrooms, and that they may be grown in any idle space about the home, to the great financial advantage of the person so doing; that the raising of mushrooms may be accomplished without odors in the home; that the same are easy to plant and grow without any experience or technical skill; that respondent is personally an expert in the growing of mushrooms, and maintains personnel skilled in advising customers how to raise mushrooms, are all calculated to mislead and deceive, and have, and have had, the capacity, tendency and effect of misleading and deceiving, and have misled and deceived, a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true and into the purchase of respondent's mushroom spawn, in reliance on said representations.

By means of these false and misleading representations, made to the purchasing public as above described, respondent has increased his own sales of said mushroom spawn, so dishonestly promoted, advertised, or represented, thereby lessening the market for similar spawn sold by other growers, merchants, or dealers, who truthfully represent the nature, advantage, or expectant financial return from planting or the desirability of becoming mushroom growers, and their true size and character as commercial concerns, by their trade or corporate name or style.

As a result thereof, trade is unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in interstate commerce of similar mushroom spawn, who truthfully represent the true nature of their firm or corporate structure, or the true nature of the mushroom business, or the desirability of becoming mushroom growers, or the demand for mushrooms, and the financial returns obtainable thereby. Further, as a result thereof, substantial injury has been and is being done by respondent to the purchasing public and to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia.

PAR. 6. The above and foregoing acts, practices, and representations of the respondent have been and are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, as aforesaid, and have been, and are, unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Thereafter, the respondent filed a motion to withdraw his answer to the complaint theretofore filed with the Commission under date of November 24, 1936, and submitted a substitute answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true. The Commission, by order entered herein, has granted respondent's request for permission to withdraw his original answer and to substitute therefor his answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true, and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substituted answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission.

Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, and the substitute answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence, briefs having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

Said statements serve as representations on the part of the respondent, Maurice Willens, to a substantial portion of the purchasing public that his said firm, Mushroom Growers of America, is a large and substantial organization or trade association of many persons mutually cooperating with each other in the industry of growing and marketing mushrooms, and that said association maintains a staff of expert personnel who may be consulted for advice as to technical questions arising in connection with this industry.

"Mushroom Growers of America" is not an association or trade organization of many individual growers or producers of mushrooms, is not incorporated, has no board of directors or managing director; but is simply a firm name or style adopted by the said respondent, Maurice Willens, an individual, for the purpose of inducing members of the public to patronize him under the false impression that they are dealing with a bona fide trade organization or association. Neither respondent nor any of his employees are expert in growing mushrooms or competent to give technical advice concerning the same.

PAR. 3. In the conduct of his business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, and for more than one year last past, the respondent herein, in selling his mushroom spawn as herein set out, states in his correspondence, advertisements, or trade literature, among other things, that:

A DIGNIFIED BUSINESS FOR WOMEN ALSO. Many women also are searching for remunerative and pleasant employment and what can be more dignified than Mushroom Growing? It is clean work and there is nothing menial about it.

M. G. A. Mushroom beds emit no unpleasant odor.

These statements serve as representations on the part of the respondent to the purchasing public that there is a tremendous demand for mushrooms and that the respondent's mushroom spawn will produce extraordinary financial remuneration to growers thereof, and that said spawn may be planted in any idle space about the home; that said mushroom growing may be accomplished without ordors; that it is an easy and pleasant occupation and may be successfully accomplished by persons of no experience whatsoever.

Investigation discloses that there is no unusual demand for mushrooms, and the production of mushrooms by amateur growers at home in small beds is not highly remunerative financially. In fact, it has not been financially remunerative to professional mushroom growers for a number of years as the price of mushrooms has been steadily declining and many mushroom growers have become bankrupt. In the opinion of one expert, who testified in this case, no amateur could possible pay $5.00 per one-quart unit for spawn, the price charged by the respondent for sufficient to plant fifty square feet as against fifty cents per quart unit paid by professional growers for the same spawn and hope to make money on his product even if a successful crop were grown. Although the bulk of respondent's business was in the $5.00 unit class he also made other offers for the sale of his spawn such as $10.25 for sufficient to plant 200 square feet, but the price was in every instance entirely exorbitant as compared with the price paid therefor by commercial growers with whom the amateur would be obliged to compete in the sale of his product. Mushrooms cannot be successfully raised in any idle space about the home, but can only be grown in properly constructed places kept at a definite temperature, ventilated in a precise manner, accompanied by the exclusion of light. The great majority of people would not care to have a bed of manure in their attics or other places in their homes, and the conversion of a garage or basement into a satisfactory location for mushroom growing would usually entail considerable expense due to the cost incident to remodeling to secure maintenance of the correct temperature and ventilation. Mushroom growing cannot be considered a year-round occupation due to the necessity of maintaining a constant temperature of from 48 to 65 degrees Fahrenheit during the four months' period from the time the bed is planted to completion of the growing period. This could not readily be accomplished during the summer months while during the winter months, in most sections, heat would be required. The raising of mushrooms cannot be accomplished without disagreeable odors, as the preparation of the beds involves the use of a compost made from manure which is highly odoriferous and which requires thirty days to decompose and prepare. Many women would not care to undertake the preparation of this compost. Mushrooms cannot be successfully grown without experience, as production requires a high degree of horticultural skill and is one of the most difficult of all crops to raise. It is not an easy and pleasant occupation, due to the hard work and disagreeable odor incident to preparing the compost, erecting the beds, and the constant care and attention required in regulating the temperature, humidity, and ventilation.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent, as set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, other individuals, firms, corporations, or partnerships who do sell mushroom spawn in interstate commerce or who are legitimate trade associations of mushroom growers, or who do not represent that mushrooms may be grown in any idle space about the home, or that mushrooms can be raised in small quantities at home with tremendous financial returns, and who do not make the other representations set forth in paragraphs 2 and 3 hereof.

PAR. 5. The acts and practices of the respondent in using a firm name or style calculated to falsely induce the public to believe that his business, conducted under the name of Mushroom Growers of America is a trade organization or association of bona fide mushroom growers, and in falsely representing and advertising that there is a tremendous demand for mushrooms, and that they may be grown in any idle space about the home, to the great financial advantage of the person so doing; that the raising of mushrooms may be accomplished without odors in the home; that the same are easy to plant and grow without any experience or technical skill; that respondent is personally an expert in the growing of mushrooms; and that respondent maintains personnel skilled in advising customers how to raise mushrooms, are all calculated to mislead and deceive, and have, and have had, the capacity, tendency and effect of misleading and deceiving, and have misled and deceived a substantial portion of the purchasing and consuming public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true and into the purchase of respondent's mushroom spawn, in reliance of said representations.

By means of these false and misleading representations, made to the purchasing public as above described, respondent has increased his own sales of said mushroom spawn, so dishonestly promoted, advertised, or represented, thereby lessening the market for similar spawn sold by other growers, merchants, or dealers, who truthfully represent the nature, advantage, or expectant financial return from planting mushroom spawn or the desirability of becoming mushroom growers, and their true size and character as commercial concerns, by their trade or corporate name or style.

As a result thereof, trade is unfairly diverted to the respondent from competitors engaged in the sale in interstate commerce of similar mushroom spawn, who truthfully represent the true nature of their firm or corporate structure, or the true nature of the mushroom business, or the desirability of becoming mushroom growers, or the demand for mushrooms, and the financial returns obtainable by growing mushrooms. Further, as a result thereof, substantial injury has been and is being done by respondent to the purchasing public and to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Maurice Willens, an individual doing business under the firm name and style of Mushroom Growers of America, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Maurice Willens, as an individual and doing business under the firm name and style of Mushroom Growers of America, or under any other trade name, his representatives, agents, and employees in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of mushroom spawn in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, through the use of any trade name, or through the use of any purported membership cards issued to his customers, or through any other means or device, or in any manner, that the business operated by him is a cooperative, or other, trade association or is other than a private business;

2. Representing, in any manner, that said business is larger in size and scope than it actually is or that he maintains a staff of mushroom experts when such is not the case;

3. Representing in any manner that mushrooms may be easily grown in any idle space in or about the home; that mushroom growing is a simple and highly remunerative industry; that any person can successfully grow mushrooms for profit without previous knowledge, experience or technical skill; that there is a shortage of mushrooms on the market; that amateurs may make a fortune, or substantial profits, in growing mushrooms; that the business of mushroom growing may be accomplished without unpleasant odors.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 30 days after the service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing, setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

Complaint

IN THE MATTER OF
 JOSEPH H. SELD, TRADING AS SELD LEATHER COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
 OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2636. Complaint, Nov. 20, 1935—Decision, May 17, 1937

Where an individual engaged in the manufacture and sale of certain leather products made from cheap and inferior leathers having the general appearance of "chamois," in competition with manufacturers of similar products who do not in any wise designate same as "chamois" or associate said word with some other descriptive word, and with manufacturers who make and sell the skin of the chamois antelope or oil-tanned skin of the sheep, and truthfully do represent their said products as "chamois"—

Represented, through designations "Pigskin Chamois," "Pigskin Chamols Se-leco," "Chamois, Rose Brand," and "Genuine Pigskin Chamois," in advertisements, price lists, letterheads, invoices, and in other ways, that said products were "chamois," notwithstanding the fact they were not made from the skin of the practically extinct chamois antelope nor from the oil-dressed and suede-finished flesh of undersplit of sheepskin, and were not, as commercially now known, chamois, and would not serve as a satisfactory substitute for such sheepskin as thus known;

With effect of misleading and deceiving purchasers of aforesaid products into belief that they were chamois, as hereinabove set forth, and to purchase same in such erroneous belief, and of placing in the hands of dealers and retailers means of misleading and deceiving aforesaid public, and of unfairly diverting trade to him from competitors who do not misrepresent their products; to the substantial injury of substantial competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. James M. Hammond for the Commission.

Mr. H. Andrew Schlusberg, of Gloversville, N. Y., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Joseph H. Seld, an individual, doing business under the firm name and style of Seld Leather Company, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and now is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent herein, Joseph H. Seld, is an individual, doing business under the firm name and style of Seld Leather Company, with his office and principal place of business in the city of Gloversville, N. Y. He is now, and has for more than one year last past been engaged in the business of manufacturing certain leather products, designated by him as "Pigskin Chamois," "Pigskin Chamois Seleco," "Chamois, Rose Brand," "Genuine Pigskin Chamois," "Carpincho Splits," "Peccary Splits," "Deerskin Splits," "Buckskin Splits," and other cheap and inferior leather products having the general appearance of "chamois," some of which are marked "chamois" or have the word "chamois" used as a descriptive word or part of a trade name or designation in connection with their selling and marking, and in the sale thereof between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, shipping such products, or causing same to be shipped when sold, from respondent's place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof, some located in the State of New York and others located in the other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and there is now, and has been for more than one year last past, a constant current of trade and commerce by respondent in the aforesaid leather products. In the course and conduct of his business respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been in substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships engaged in the sale and distribution of leather products between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent, in selling and offering for sale his aforesaid leather products between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, now represents, and for more than one year last past has represented, through the designation of his leather products hereinbefore mentioned, by advertisements, price lists, letterheads, invoices, and in other ways, that the aforesaid leather products are chamois. Chamois has its origin in the name of an European antelope, the skin of which is made into a soft, pliable leather which is used in the manufacture of gloves and for the polishing of silver and metals. The chamois antelope is now practically extinct, and its skin is no longer an article of commerce. At the present and for a long time last past, the word "chamois" as conmercially known is used to designate the inner part of a sheepskin, which when oil dressed is a very soft and pliable product sold commercially under the name of "chamois." Said product is likewise valuable for polishing and cleaning purposes, possessing particularly the power of quickly absorbing moisture and returning thereafter, when dried, to its original softness and pliable quality. The only trade name and designation given to the skin of a chamois antelope and to oil dressed sheepskin is the word "chamois," and the word "chamois" means to the retail trade and to the public either the skin of a chamois antelope or the oil-tanned skin of a sheep.

PAR. 3. In truth and in fact, the leather products dealt in by the respondent, as described in paragraph 1 herein, and represented by him as set out in paragraphs 1 and 2 to be chamois, are not in fact the skin of the chamois antelope or the oil-tanned skin of the sheep, but are articles manufactured from pigskin, peccary, carpincho, and skins other than oil-tanned sheepskin or the chamois antelope, and have the same general appearance but not the peculiar qualities or properties of articles known to the public and trade, and properly designated as "chamois."

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid designations of its leather products, and of other similar designations, and of the advertisements, letterheads, invoices, and price lists described in paragraph 2 hereof, has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived purchasers of the aforesaid products of respondent into the belief that such products are chamois, to wit: the skin of the chamois antelope or the oil-tanned skin of the sheep, and to purchase such products of respondent in such erroneous belief, and has placed, and places in the hands of dealers and retailers the means of misleading and deceiving the purchasing public.

Among the competitors of respondent mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, are manufacturers of leather products similar to those made and sold by respondent, but who do not in any wise designate such products as "chamois." There are also, among such competitors, manufacturers who manufacture and sell the skin of the chamois antelope or the oil-tanned skin of the sheep, and who truthfully represent their said products as "chamois." By the aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, trade is unfairly diverted by respondent from its competitors, who do not misrepresent their products, whereby substantial injury is being done and has been done by respondent to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 5. That the above methods, actions, and practices of the respondent are all to the prejudice of the public and to respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on November 20, 1935, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Joseph H. Seld, an individual trading under the firm name and style of Seld Leather Company, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After issuance of the said complaint and filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of the complaint were introduced by James M. Hammond, attorney for the Commission before Millard F. Hudson and Charles F. Diggs, examiners for the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it; and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by H. Andrew Schlusberg, attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and answer thereto, the testimony and other evidence and brief in support of the complaint, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent herein, Joseph H. Seld, is an individual doing business under the firm name and style of Seld Leather Company, with his office and principal place of business in the city of Gloversville, N. Y. He has been engaged for several years in the manufacture and sale of certain leather products made from leathers variously designated by him as "Pigskin Chamois," "Pigskin Chamois Seleo," "Chamois, Rose Brand," "Genuine Pigskin

Chamois," and from other cheap and inferior leathers having the general appearance of "chamois." He ships said products, or causes the same to be shipped, when sold, from his place of business in the State of New York to the purchasers thereof, some located in the State of New York and others located in other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been for more than one year last past, a constant current of trade and commerce by respondent in the aforesaid leather products among and between the various States of the United States. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, in substantial competition with other individuals and with corporations, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of leather products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Respondent, in selling and offering for sale his aforesaid leather products between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, now represents, and for more than one year last past has represented, through the designation of his leather products hereinbefore mentioned, by advertisements, price lists, letterheads, invoices, and in other ways, that the aforesaid leather products are chamois. Chamois has its origin in the name of an European antelope, the skin of which was made into a soft, pliable leather which was used in the manufacture of gloves and for the polishing of silver and metals. The chamois antelope, however, has become practically extinct, and its skin is no longer an article of commerce. At the present and for a long time last past, the word "chamois" as commercially known is used to designate the inner part of a sheepskin, which when oil-dressed is a very soft and pliable product sold commercially under the name of "chamois." It is defined in the Dictionary of Leather Terminology, published by a Joint Committee appointed by the Tanners Council of America functioning in conjunction with Committee members representing other branches of the leather goods industry, as follows:

Chamois Leather. A soft leather originally made from the skins of the Alpine antelope, or chamois, now practically extinct, but at the present time from the fleshers or under-split of sheepskin, oil-dressed, suede-finished, principally used for cleaning and polishing purposes and for gloves. "White Chamois" is a flesher tanned by a formaldehyde and alum process.

The same work describes the term "Flesher" used in the above definition, as follows:

Flesher. Term used to describe a suede-finished flesh side or undercut of a sheepskin, split before tanning.

Chamois, so manufactured and tanned from sheepskin as described above, is valuable for polishing and cleaning purposes. It possesses the peculiar power of quickly absorbing moisture and returning thereafter when dried to its original soft and pliable quality. The skin of the Chamois or Alpine antelope became exhausted for commercial purposes over forty years ago. Tanners, in their search for a substitute, discovered that the inner splits of sheepskin tanned by the oil process produced a skin possessing approximately the same qualities. Sheepskin so tanned has been in use for many years and is the article now known commercially as "chamois." During the course of the hearings held in connection with this case, a number of old and experienced tanners were summoned for the purpose of defining the present meaning of the term "chamois." None of them had ever seen a real Chamois antelope skin. All defined the term "chamois" in the same manner, as set out in the Dictionary of Leather Terminology quoted above.

PAR. 3. Tests were made of the respondent's products at the United States Bureau of Standards and it was found that they would not serve as a satisfactory substitute for oil-tanned sheepskin, as chamois, because they will not absorb water with facility and will not return when dry to their original soft and pliable quality. A number of practical automobile and window washers of many years' experience appeared and testified that these scientific conclusions were true; that the article known to and used by them as "chamois" was sheepskin manufactured as described in the Dictionary of Leather Terminology quoted above; that they had tried to use leather similar to respondent's product but that it would not give satisfactory results. The testimony taken shows that the general public does not know what a chamois skin as now known is made from, so that the use of a descriptive word such as "Pigskin" or "Carpincho" in connection with the word "Chamois" is entirely uninformative.

PAR. 4. The use by the respondent of the aforesaid designations for his leather products, and of other similar designations and of the advertisements, letterheads, invoices and price lists described in paragraph 1 hereof, has the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive, and has misled and deceived purchasers of the aforesaid products of respondent into the belief that such products are chamois, to wit: the skin of the chamois antelope or the oil-tanned flesher or under-split of sheepskin and to purchase such products of respondent in such erroneous belief, and has placed and places in the hands of dealers and retailers the means of misleading and deceiving the purchasing public.

Order

Among the competitors of respondent mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof, are manufacturers of leather products similar to those made and sold by respondent, who do not in any wise designate such products as "chamois" or associate the word "chamois" with some other descriptive word. There are also, among such competitors, manufacturers who manufacture and sell the skin of the chamois antelope or the oil-tanned skin of the sheep and who truthfully represent their said products as "chamois." By the aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, trade is unfairly diverted to respondent from his competitors, who do not misrepresent their products, whereby substantial injury is being done and has been done by respondent to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent Joseph H. Seld, an individual trading under the firm name and style of Seld Leather Company are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Joseph H. Seld, an individual doing business under the firm name and style of Seld Leather Company, his representatives, agents, and employees in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of leather products, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Using the word "chamois," alone, or in conjunction with any other word or words, in any manner whatever, to describe, designate, or refer to leather products not made (1) from the skin of the Alpine Antelope or Chamois, or (2) from the fleshers or under-split of sheepskin, oil-dressed and suede-finished, provided, however, leather products made from the fleshers or under-split of sheepskin tanned by a formaldehyde and alum process may be designated as "white chamois."

It is hereby further ordered, That the respondent shall within 30 days from the date of the service upon him of this order file with this Commission his report in writing stating the manner and form in which he shall have complied with this order.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2830. Complaint, June 2, 1936—Decision, May 17, 1937

Where a corporation and an individual, principal, if not sole, stockholder thereof and director and in control of its business practices and sales policies, engaged in the offer and sale of a stomach tablet designated "Udga Treatment," for use in treating stomach ulcers and other stomach ailments and diseases caused, or reputedly caused, by hyperacidity, in advertising their said product in various newspapers, trade magazines and other periodicals of interstate circulation, and in letters and copies of purported testimonials, and other matter forwarded to prospective customers throughout the various States and in the District of Columbia—

Represented, as aforesaid, that their said treatment would cure such ulcers, gastritis, indigestion, dyspepsia, and various other stomach ailments and diseases, including those caused, or reputedly caused, as above set forth, through such statements as "*Stomach Ulcers—Thousands of sufferers, many cases of years' standing, after using the Udga Treatment report amazing recovery. * * * highly recommended for ulcers, severe, chronic gastritis, acidosis, dyspepsia, indigestion * * ," etc., and through numerous other statements of like tenor and effect, facts being that said tablets could not cure the various ailments and diseases represented by them, and majority of persons who gave testimonials were not capable of diagnosis and were not registered physicians and could not affirmatively state that aforesaid treatment effected cures of diseases from which they suffered;

With result of misleading and deceiving members of the purchasing public into the false belief that such representations were true, and of inducing such members to buy substantial quantities of its product, and, as a result thereof, of unfairly diverting trade to them from competitors who do not falsely advertise or represent the capacity of the pills or other medicines vended by them to cure ailments and diseases hereinbefore indicated; to the injury of competition in commerce:

COMPLAINT

Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Udga Incorporated, and William Fraser and Mary Fraser, individuals, hereinafter referred to as respondents, have been and now are using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Udga Incorporated, is a corporation, existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Minnesota, having its principal office and place of business in St. Paul, Minn. Respondents, William Fraser and Mary Fraser, respectively, are individuals having their offices and principal places of business in St. Paul, Minn.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Udga Incorporated, is the direct successor to William Fraser and Mary Fraser, formerly copartners doing business under the firm name and styled Udga Medicine Company, Udga Laboratories, and other names similar thereto. Said respondents, William Fraser and Mary Fraser, owned and now own virtually all, if not all, of the capital stock of respondent corporation, and have so owned such stock since the procurement of the charter thereof, and have at all times herein related directed and dominated the practices and policies of the respondent corporation.

PAR. 3. Respondents, as individuals and as a corporate entity, as aforesaid, for a period in excess of six years have been engaged in selling and in offering for sale, a stomach tablet designated "Udga Treatment," intended by the respondents and directed by them to be used in the treatment of stomach ulcers, gastritis, indigestion, dyspepsia, and various other stomach disturbances, including those caused or reputed to be caused by hyperacidity, and in the course and conduct of the business of respondents as aforesaid, they have sold and transported, and caused to be sold and transported, such stomach tablet into and through the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, and have in the manner aforesaid maintained a constant current of trade and commerce in interstate commerce of such commodity.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of their said business, respondents are now and have been in competition with other corporations, firms and individuals likewise engaged in the business of selling, distributing and transporting throughout the various States of the United States, and the District of Columbia, pills and medicines for the treatment of the ailments above set forth.

PAR. 5. The respondents in the course and conduct of their business advertise and cause to be advertised in various daily newspapers, trade magazines and other periodicals having interstate circulation, and have forwarded to prospective or potential customers of respondents throughout the various States of the United States and the District of Columbia, circulars, letters, and copies of purported testimonials seemingly illustrative of the efficacy of the "Udga Treatment," which said statements were and are in part as follows:

Respondents have issued numerous other statements of like tenor and effect, each and all of which have the tendency and capacity to and do, and are by respondents intended to, create in the minds of the purchasing public, and in the minds of potential customers, the belief that the treatment referred to has a curative value for each and all of the afflictions and ailments above set forth.

PAR. 6. The testimonials used by the respondents above referred to consist of purported copies of numerous letters, claimed by respondents to have been received from persons who had taken the "Udga Treatment" for various and sundry ailments, and who represent in such testimonials that such treatment effected cure of the ailments complained of.

The majority of the persons purporting to have attested the efficacy of this remedy are not capable of diagnosis, are not registered physicians, and cannot affirmatively state the therapeutic or curative value of such treatment.

PAR. 7. In truth and in fact the stomach tablet known and designated as "Udga Treatment" has no therapeutic or curative value and cannot remedy or cure the various ailments or diseases claimed, as herein stated.

PAR. 8. There are among competitors of the respondents, persons, individuals, firms, copartnerships, and corporations, who sell, offer for sale and transport in interstate commerce, pills and other medicines for the treatment of the ailments hereinabove set forth, who do not falsely represent or exaggerate the therapeutic or curative value of the same.

PAR. 9. Each and all of the above acts and practices of the respondents have a capacity to and do in fact mislead a substantial number of the members of the purchasing public into the false belief that the use of this treatment will effect a cure of the various diseases herein enumerated and referred to, and who, relying upon such belief have purchased substantial quantities of such stomach pill. Such acts and practices likewise cause a substantial diversion of trade to the respondents from competitors of respondents as herein described who do not falsely represent the therapeutic or curative value of the pill or other medicines vended by them, thereby causing injury to competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 10. The above acts and practices of the respondents are all to the injury and prejudice of the public, and to competitors of the respondents in interstate commerce, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Thereafter the proceeding regularly coming on for consideration before the Commission on said complaint, the answer thereto, said stipulation as to the facts and brief in support of the complaint; and the Commission, having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

Respondents have issued numerous other statements of like tenor and effect, each and all of which have the tendency and capacity to, and do, and are by respondents intended to, create in the minds of the purchasing public, and in the minds of potential customers, the belief that said product referred to will cure each and all of the ailments and diseases above set forth in paragraph 3.

PAR. 6. The testimonials used by the respondents above referred to consist of purported copies of numerous letters, claimed by respondents to have been received from persons who had taken the "Udga Treatment" for various and sundry ailments and diseases and who represent in such testimonials that such treatment effected cures of the ailments and diseases from which they suffered.

The majority of persons who gave such testimonials are not capable of diagnosis, are not registered physicians and cannot affirmatively state that such treatment effected cures of the ailments and diseases from which they suffered.

PAR. 7. The stomach tablet known and designated as "Udga Treatment" cannot cure the various ailments and diseases as represented by the respondents.

PAR. 8. Among the competitors of respondents are individuals, firms and corporations who sell and transport in interstate commerce pills and other medicines for the treatment of the ailments and diseases described in paragraph 3 hereof and do not misrepresent or exaggerate the capacity of such pills and other medicines to cure such ailments and diseases.

PAR. 9. The use by the respondents of the statements and representations described in paragraphs 5 and 6 hereof and other statements similar thereto in offering for sale and selling such products in commerce as herein set out has had and now has the tendency and capacity to and do mislead and deceive members of the purchasing public into the false belief that the representations so made are true and has induced such members to purchase substantial quantities of respondent's products. As a result thereof trade has been unfairly diverted to the respondents from competitors referred to in paragraph 8 hereof who do not falsely advertise or represent the capacity of the pills or other medicines vended by them to cure the ailments and diseases described in paragraph 3 hereof. In consequence thereof injury has been done by the respondents to competition in commerce between and among the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents, Udga, Incorporated, a corporation, and William Fraser, an individual, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondents, Udga, Incorporated, a corporation, its officers, and William Fraser and their respective representatives, agents, and employees in connection with the sale and distribution in interstate commerce and in the District of Columbia of any medicinal tablets now known as "Udga Treatment" or of any other medicinal product having substantially the same ingredients or the same effect sold under that name or under any other name forthwith cease and desist from:

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2958. Complaint, Nov. 16, 1936¹—Decision, May 18, 1937

Where a trade organization or group, the members of which were engaged at their respective places of business in the manufacture of water-gate valves, hydrants, fittings and similar products, and in the sale thereof chiefly to towns, cities, and other municipalities, to State Governments and divisions thereof, to the Federal Government and divisions thereof, and to State and Federal institutions, and which members constituted substantially all manufacturers in the United States of such products for water supply systems and were originally and still would have been, but for the matters and things hereinafter set forth, in price competition with one another; certain individuals constituting the governing committee of said organization or group; an individual, as president commissioner of the institute of group in question and as administrative officer of the Code Authority of the Code of Fair Competition for Industry in question; second individual, as assistant secretary of said institute and also as administrative officer of said authority; and the aforesaid members—

- (a) Entered into and carried out an agreement, combination, understanding and conspiracy to fix and maintain, and did fix and maintain thereby, enhanced uniform delivered prices to be exacted by said members from their purchasers of water-gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and similar products, in commerce between and among the various States and in the District of Columbia; and in pursuance of their said understanding and conspiracy—
 - (1) Agreed to and did fix and maintain enhanced uniform delivered prices for products in question sold by said members;
 - (2) Agreed to and did divide the United States into zones and fixed and maintained therein enhanced delivered prices to be exacted by the members, as above set forth, from the purchasers of their said products;
 - (3) Agreed to and did fix uniform discounts allowed by the members in the sale of their said products to jobbers and distributors; and
 - (4) Agreed to and did fix and establish uniform delivered prices at which jobbers and distributors purchasing their said products from them should resell same, and refused to continue selling to such jobbers and distributors as refused to or did not resell at enhanced uniform delivered prices as fixed; and

Where the aforesaid officer individuals, to wit, said Institute's president commissioner and code authority's administrative officers, acting for and in behalf of the others hereinbefore referred to, and for the purpose of accomplishing the aforesaid combination, agreement, etc.—

(b) Induced certain of such others, by intimidation and persuasion, to raise their quoted prices to the uniform enhanced delivered prices fixed, as above set forth, by said combination, conspiracy, etc.; and

Where a corporation engaged as jobber and distributor of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and similar products, and the officers thereof—

(c) Assisted the others hereinbefore set forth in carrying out their said agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy, with full knowledge thereof, and thereby became parties thereto;

With a dangerous tendency to, and with effect of, actually hindering and preventing price competition in sale and resale, between and among the various States and in the District of Columbia, of said various products, of increasing the prices therefor paid by jobbers and distributors thereof, and by towns, cities, and other municipalities, and by State and Federal governments and divisions thereof, and by State and Federal institutions, as consequence thereof, and of creating in such various members a monopoly in the sale and resale in interstate commerce of aforesaid products and of unreasonably restraining interstate commerce therein:

Held, That such acts and practices were all to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Edward L. Smith for the Commission.

it in respect thereof would be to the public interest, hereby issues its amended complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents Charles H. Becker, Dennis O'Brien, Frank A. Miller, Earnest Cochran, and Marshall L. Hough are now and have been for more than three years last past the governing committee of the Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the Valve and Fittings Institute, a New York corporation, with its principal office and place of business in the city of New York in said State. Respondent George V. Denny is and has been for more than three years last past president commissioner of said Valve and Fittings Institute and was from December 15, 1933, or thereabouts until June 3, 1935, or thereabouts, an administrative officer of the Code Authority of the Code of Fair Competition for the Valve and Fittings Manufacturing Industry approved by the President of the United States December 15, 1933, under and by virtue of the National Industrial Recovery Act, approved June 16, 1933. Respondent Sam G. Moyers is now and has been for more than three years last past assistant secretary of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute and was from on or about December 15, 1933, until on or about June 3, 1935, an administrative officer of the Code Authority for the aforesaid Code.

The Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute, now is and for more than three years last past has been constituted of the following respondent corporations, whose respective officers are now and have been for more than three years last past the following, such officers being also respondents herein: [Extended list which follows and which is set forth verbatim in the findings, infra, at page 1260 and again in the order is here omitted in the interest of brevity.]

PAR. 2. Respondent Rundle Spence Company is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Wisconsin with its principal place of business at Milwaukee, in said State. Its officers, respondents herein, are now and for more than three years last past have been B. R. Spence, president, and Tom M. Spence, secretary-treasurer. It is a subsidiary of respondent The Crane Company, and now and for more than three years last past has been engaged as a jobber and distributor of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and similar products, causing the same when sold by it to be transported from its place of business in Milwaukee, aforesaid, to the purchasers thereof, some located in the State of Wisconsin and others located in various other States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. The aforesaid members of the aforesaid Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute named in paragraph 1 hereof are now and for more than three years last past have been engaged at their respective places of business in the manufacture of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and similar products and in the sale thereof, chiefly to towns, cities, and other municipalities, to State Governments and divisions thereof, to the Federal Government and divisions thereof, and to State and Federal institutions.

In the course and conduct of their business, all of the said respondents for more than three years last past have caused and still cause such water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and similar products, when sold by them to be transported in interstate commerce from their respective places of business to, into and through the District of Columbia and the various States of the United States other than the States in which they respectively have their factories and places of business, to the purchasers thereof in such other States and in the District of Columbia.

The said respondents now constitute and for more than three years last past have constituted substantially all of the manufacturers in the United States of water gate valves, hydrants, and fittings and other articles used for water supply systems. The said respondents were prior to December 1933, or thereabouts, in competition among themselves, as to price, in the sale of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and other similar products between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia and but for the combination, agreement, understanding, and conspiracy hereinafter described would have been at all times since December 1933 or thereabouts and would now be in such price competition with one another.

PAR. 4. In December 1933 or thereabouts, the respondents named in paragraph 1 hereof for the purpose of eliminating price competition among the aforesaid members of the Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute in the sale of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and other similar articles between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, entered into, and have since carried out and are still carrying out an agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy among themselves to fix and maintain and by which they have fixed and maintained enhanced uniform delivered prices to be and which have been and are still being exacted by the aforesaid members of the Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute from their purchasers of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Pursuant to and for the purpose of carrying out aforesaid agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy, the said respondents have, among other things, done the following:

(a) Agreed among themselves to fix and maintain, and pursuant to such agreement have fixed and maintained and still fix and maintain enhanced uniform delivered prices for water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and similar products sold by the aforesaid members of the aforesaid Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute and each of them.

(b) Agreed to divide and pursuant to such agreement have divided the United States into zones in which zones the said respondents have by agreement fixed and maintained and still fix and maintain enhanced uniform delivered prices exacted by the aforesaid members of the aforesaid Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute from their purchasers of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and similar products.

(c) Agreed to fix and pursuant to such agreement have fixed and still fix uniform discounts allowed by the aforesaid members of the aforesaid Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute in the sale of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and similar products, to their jobbers and distributors.

(d) Agreed to fix and pursuant to such agreement have fixed and established and still fix and establish uniform enhanced delivered prices at which jobbers and distributors buying water gate valves, hydrants, and fittings and similar products from the aforesaid members of the aforesaid Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute should resell the same and, by agreement have refused to continue selling to jobbers and distributors who would refuse to resell or who have not resold at the enhanced uniform delivered prices so fixed.

(e) For the purpose of accomplishing the aforesaid agreement, combination, understanding and conspiracy, the aforesaid George V. Denny, individually and as president commissioner of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute and as administrative officer of the Code Authority for the Valve and Fittings Manufacturing Industry, and the aforesaid Sam G. Moyers, individually, and as administrative officer of the Code Authority for the Valve and Fittings Manufacturing Industry, acting for and in behalf of the other respondents named in paragraph 1 hereof, by intimidation and persuasion induced certain of the aforesaid other respondents to raise prices quoted by them to the uniform enhanced delivered prices fixed as aforesaid by the aforesaid combination, conspiracy, understanding and agreement.

PAR. 5. Respondent Rundle Spence Company and its respondent officers having full knowledge of the agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy, described in paragraph 4 hereof assisted the other respondents in carrying out such agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy. By such assistance they became parties to the said conspiracy and for that reason are made parties respondents herein.

PAR. 6. The acts and practices of the respondents as herein alleged are all to the prejudice of the public and to the prejudice of the competitors of those of the respondents who constitute the aforesaid membership of the aforesaid Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute; have a dangerous tendency to and have actually hindered and prevented price competition in the sale and resale between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and similar products; have increased the prices of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and similar products paid by jobbers and distributors thereof and by towns, cities, and other municipalities, State Governments and divisions thereof, the Federal Government and divisions thereof, State and Federal institutions, and consequently by the public; have created in the respondent members of said Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute, a monopoly in the sale and resale in interstate commerce of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings and similar products; have unreasonably restrained interstate commerce in water gate valves, hydrants, fittings and similar products; and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

tion in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. Subsequent to the issuance and service of said amended complaint, the respondents, excepting the Pittsburgh Valve & Fittings Company and its officers, and H. M. Kessler, Trustee in Bankruptcy for The Vogt Brothers Manufacturing Company, filed their answers thereto in which answers (some of such answers being substituted answers) they stated that they desired to and thereby waived hearing on the charges set forth in the amended complaint insofar as the same refer to alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of the Act of Congress entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914, commonly called the Federal Trade Commission Act, that they and each of them for the sole purpose of avoiding the trouble and expense incident to further continuation of this proceeding refrained from contesting the proceeding, that they and each of them consented that all the material facts alleged in said amended complaint might be deemed to be admitted but not within the intent and meaning of any law of the United States other than the Federal Trade Commission Act, such answers not constituting an admission of any conclusions of law and not constituting an admission of fact for any other purpose nor to be used against them in any other proceeding, suit or action, and that they and each of them consented that the Commission might without trial and without further evidence and without any intervening proceeding, make and enter its findings as to the facts and issue and serve upon them and each of them an order to cease and desist from any methods of competition alleged in the amended complaint which constitute violations of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said amended complaint and the said answers thereto, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

Findings

The said respondents now constitute and for more than three years last past have constituted substantially all of the manufacturers in the United States of water gate valves, hydrants, and fittings and other articles used for water supply systems. The said respondents were prior to December 1933, or thereabouts, in competition among themselves, as to price, in the sale of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and other similar products between and among various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia and but for the combination, agreement, understanding, and conspiracy hereinafter described would have been at all times since December 1933 or thereabouts and would now be in such price competition with one another.

PAR. 4. In December 1933 or thereabouts, the respondents named in paragraph 1 hereof for the purpose of eliminating price competition among the aforesaid members of the Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute in the sale of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and other similar articles between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, entered into, and have since carried out and are still carrying out an agreement, combination, understanding and conspiracy among themselves to fix and maintain and by which they have fixed and maintained enhanced uniform delivered prices to be and which have been and are still being exacted by the aforesaid members of the Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute from their purchasers of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings and similar products in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. Pursuant to and for the purpose of carrying out aforesaid agreement, combination, understanding and conspiracy, the said respondents, have, among other things, done the following:

(a) Agreed among themselves to fix and maintain, and pursuant to such agreement have fixed and maintained and still fix and maintain enhanced uniform delivered prices for the water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and similar products sold by the aforesaid members of the aforesaid Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute and each of them.

(b) Agreed to divide and pursuant to such agreement have divided the United States into zones in which zones the said respondents have by agreement fixed and maintained and still fix and maintain enhanced uniform delivered prices exacted by the aforesaid members of the aforesaid Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute from their purchasers of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings and similar products.

Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute, a monopoly in the sale and resale in interstate commerce of wate gate valves, hydrants, fittings and similar products; have unreasonably restrained interstate commerce in water gate valves, hydrants, fittings and similar products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondents are all to the prejudice of the public and of competitors of those of the respondents who constitute the aforesaid membership of the aforesaid Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended complaint of the Commission and the answers thereto (some of such answers being substituted answers) filed herein by all of the respondents, excepting the Pittsburgh Valve & Fittings Company and its officers and H. M. Kessler, Trustee in Bankruptcy for The Vogt Brothers Manufacturing Company, in which said answers they stated that they desire to and hereby waive hearing on the charges set forth in said amended complaint insofar as the same refer to alleged unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of the Act of Congress, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914, commonly called the Federal Trade Commission Act, that they and each of them for the sole purpose of avoiding the trouble and expense incident to further continuation of this proceeding refrained from contesting the proceeding, that they and each of them consented that all of the material facts alleged in said amended complaint might be deemed to be admitted, but not within the intent and meaning of any law of the United States other than the Federal Trade Commission Act, such answers not constituting an admission of any conclusions of law and not constituting an admission of fact for any other purpose nor to be used against them in any other proceeding, suit or action, and that they and each of them consented that the Commission might without trial and without further evidence and without any intervening proceeding, make and enter its findings as to the facts and issue and serve upon them and each of them an order to cease and desist from any methods of competition alleged in the said amended complaint which constitute violations of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act; and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that all of the said respondents (excepting the Pittsburgh Valve & Fittings Company and its officers, and H. M. Kessler, Trustee in Bankruptcy for The Vogt Brothers Manufacturing Company), have violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That said respondents, The Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of The Valve and Fittings Institute and its Governing Committee, Charles H. Becker, Chairman, Dennis O'Brien, Frank A. Miller, Earnest Cochran, and Marshall L. Hough, and as individuals; George V. Denny, and Sam G. (a) Agreeing among themselves to fix and maintain uniform delivered prices for water gate valves, hydrants, fittings and similar products sold by the members of the aforesaid Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of The Valve and Fittings Institute, and each of them;

(b) Agreeing to divide and dividing the United States into zones and in which zones fixing and maintaining by agreement, uniform delivered prices to be paid by purchasers of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and similar products;

(c) Agreeing to fix uniform discounts allowed by the members of the aforesaid Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute in the sale of water gate valves, hydrants, fittings and similar products, to their jobbers and distributors;

(d) Agreeing to fix uniform delivered prices at which jobbers and distributors purchasing water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and similar products from the members of the aforesaid Water Works Valve and Hydrant Group of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute should resell the same, and from refusing by agreement among themselves to continue selling to jobbers and distributors who refuse to resell or who have not resold at the uniform delivered prices so fixed.

And it is further ordered, That the aforesaid George V. Denny, individually, and as president commissioner of the aforesaid Valve and Fittings Institute, and the aforesaid Sam G. Moyers, their respective agents, servants, and employees, forthwith cease and desist by means of intimidation, persuasion, or any other method, from inducing any of the respondents offering water gate valves, hydrants, fittings, and similar products for sale in interstate commerce, to raise prices quoted by them to uniform delivered prices fixed in combination, conspiracy, understanding, and agreement among and between the respondents, or any of them.

And it is further ordered, That respondent, Rundle Spence Manufacturing Company, its agents, servants, and employees, and its respondent officers, E. R. Spence, president and T. M. Spence, secretary, and their successors, cease and desist from assisting any of the aforesaid respondents in entering into and carrying out any agreement, combination, understanding, and conspiracy from which the aforesaid respondents are herein and hereby ordered to cease and desist.

And it is further ordered, That all of the respondents hereinabove mentioned shall, within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

And it is further ordered, Because of the dissolution of respondent, Pittsburgh Valve & Fittings Company on March 18, 1936, that the complaint herein be, and the same is hereby dismissed as to said respondent, Pittsburgh Valve & Fittings Company and its respondent officers, E. C. Bostock, president, C. L. Silkregg, vice president, and B. F. Donahue, secretary-treasurer.

And it is further ordered, Because of the discharge on or about August 19, 1935, by the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky of respondent H. M. Kessler, Trustee in Bankruptcy for The Vogt Brothers Manufacturing Company, that the complaint herein be, and the same is hereby dismissed as to said respondent H. M. Kessler, Trustee in Bankruptcy for The Vogt Brothers Manufacturing Company.

IN THE MATTER OF
 TYRRELL H. DUNCOMBE, TRADING AS DUNCOMBE
 RESEARCH LABORATORY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
 OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 20, 1914

Docket 2580. Complaint, Oct. 11, 1935—Decision, May 19, 1937

Where an individual engaged in sale and distribution, to physicians, hospitals, laboratories, and individuals, of a preparation made or compounded by him and generally designated "Germex"—

- (a) Represented, in folders, circulars, pamphlets, and cards distributed by him, that said preparation was a safe, non-poisonous, antiseptic which might safely be used internally, externally, and intravenously, and that it would kill or prevent growth of, or drive from the body, pathogenic or disease-bearing or forming parasites, bacteria, germs, or microbes; and
- (b) Represented that cancer cures attained by said preparation were "beyond all comprehension," and that it was a cure for syphilis, arthritis, pernicious anemia, and gangrene, and a remedy for tuberculosis, and that notable results were being obtained by use thereof in such diseases as cancer, sinus, catarrh, etc., and that it was used most successfully for various other diseases and was recommended for or effective in various other ailments, including kidney and liver trouble, pyorrhea, etc., and variously recommended same as a competent cure and remedy for everything that local doctors are called upon to treat and for any diseases caused by parasites or bacteria, and made use of circulars and other literature containing purported testimonials by various people to the effect that they had been suffering from cancer, ulcers and other diseases and had been relieved or cured thereof or completely restored to health by use of said preparation, and represented that he had thus cured numerous people;

Facts being said individual never took a course in medicine, was without personal or scientific knowledge as to the origin, course, etc., of the diseases which he claimed to be able to cure or to have cured, and for which he recommended his said remedy, as hereinabove set forth, preparation in question was not antiseptic, but highly contaminated and non-sterile and unsafe and unfit for intravenous use, would not kill or drive out disease-bearing or forming bacteria and had no therapeutic value or qualities whatever, and was of no benefit in the treatment of the aforesaid various diseases thus indicated;

With tendency and capacity to cause members of the purchasing public to form mistaken and erroneous beliefs that his said aforesaid product was a true and genuine antiseptic and sterile, and might safely be taken intravenously, had therapeutic value in the treatment of various diseases, and would relieve pain and produce beneficial results in connection therewith, and constituted a remedy or cure therefor, as above set forth, and with result that many members of the public, acting under such erroneous beliefs, induced by such various misrepresentations, purchased his said product, and with capacity and tendency unfairly to divert to him trade of competitors engaged in selling in interstate commerce drugs, preparations, or remedies which are truthfully advertised and represented and recommended for use in connection with the treatment of the various diseases and ailments enumerated by said individual; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. Marshall Morgan for the Commission.

Mr. Robert M. Drysdale, of Detroit, Mich., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Acting in the public interest pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission charges that Tyrrell H. Duncombe, trading as Duncombe Research Laboratory, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce, as commerce is defined in said act, in violation of the provisions of Section 5 of said act, and states its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent Tyrrell H. Duncombe is an individual, residing at 14049 Woodward Avenue, Highland Park, Mich., and maintaining an office and conducting a laboratory at said address under the name and style Duncombe Research Laboratory. Respondent is now and for more than two years last past has been engaged, as hereinafter described, in the sale and distribution in commerce among the several States of the United States, and more particularly in the States of Ohio and Florida, of a preparation manufactured at the above stated address, and variously termed "Germex," "Epi-Phi," and "Hindoo Prescription." Said preparation so manufactured and sold by respondent has been described by respondent as a cure or remedy for cancer, arthritis, ulcers, pernicious anemia, syphilis, fistula, eczema, pyorrhea, catarrh, trench mouth, athlete's foot, diabetes, scarlet fever, sinus, tuberculosis, tumor, gangrene, and other diseases and maladies, as will be more fully and hereinafter shown. In the course and conduct of such selling respondent has been and now is engaged in competition with corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals offering for sale or selling in like commerce preparations or compounds or medicines for use in the treatment of the same or similar ailments or diseases.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business respondent has offered for sale and sells in interstate commerce his product called "Germex," "Epi-Phi," and "Hindoo Prescription," as described in paragraph 1 hereof, by means of letters, circulars, leaflets, and otherwise, and has caused various false, deceptive, and misleading statements to be inserted and to appear in said letters, circulars, and leaflets so distributed by him. The statements contained in said letters, circulars, and leaflets are addressed to and are and have been distributed among doctors, laboratories, and individuals. Said physicians, laboratories, and individuals have been induced to purchase the goods offered for sale and sold by Tyrrell H. Duncombe, trading as Duncombe Research Laboratory under the erroneous belief, that said false and misleading statements and representations were true.

Complaint

In the course and conduct of his said business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent Tyrrell H. Duncombe, trading as Duncombe Research Laboratory, has offered his product for sale and has sold and transported or caused the same to be transported in commerce among the several States of the United States, direct to consumers. Said goods are and were shipped in response to orders received through the mail and transported or caused to be transported in commerce among the several States of the United States. Respondent has further planned and undertaken to sell his product throughout the United States, among other methods, by the granting, by contract, of exclusive sales rights covering an entire State.

PAR. 3. Respondent Tyrrell H. Duncombe, trading as Duncombe Research Laboratory, in further connection with the sale and distribution of the aforementioned product has printed, and has distributed and distributes in interstate commerce, folders or circulars and letters in which it is represented that the aforesaid product "Germex" was and is a cure and remedy for numerous dangerous and malignant diseases of the body, some of which are regarded by medical science as incurable.

Among the representations made through such media were the following:

Hindoo Prescription (Genital)
Epi-Phi (Athletic Foot)

Non-Poisonous Antiseptic Germex
External and Internal (Carcinoma)

GERMEX

A Non-poisonous Antiseptic Destroying Parasites and Bacteria and in which the following claims among others were made for Germex:

* * * We welcome your case, whether it is CANCER, ulcers of the stomach, pernicious anemia, syphilis, arthritis, or any other disease which has been caused by parasite or bacteria.

1270

Complaint

Can be applied externally, taken internally, and when especially prepared and administered by a qualified physician, used intra-venously.

Germex is not a patent medicine, but rather a pharmaceutical—a new discovery to be used by physicians and public as well.

In cancer cases the pain is relieved in 24 hours and the odor will disappear in 48 hours, according to the condition of the patient.

Where others have failed heretofore, Germex will do the trick.

The Research Laboratory has had many cases where no tissue examinations, or biopsies were made and have notable results, not only for cancer, also sinus, catarrh, trench mouth, eczema, difficult sores, syphilitic sores, ulcers of the stomach. It appears that it also is a remedy for tuberculosis, but little research has been made with this disease. It is also recommended for kidney and liver troubles, giving a yielding effect to bacterial and germ life when taken internally. Germex contains no alkaloids, is non-poisonous, and has no therapeutical action, having rather a mechanical action and is safely used externally, internally and intra-venously.

Germex is a non-poisonous antiseptic which may be used freely, with only beneficial effects.

It acts only as an antiseptic, destroying the pathogenic bacteria and parasites in the intestinal tract, liver, kidneys and etc. Most all of the diseases are caused by pathogenic bacteria, hence it is curing a great many diseases heretofore incurable.

For gastric ulcer we recommend the internal as well as the intra-venous. The internal dose would be one table-spoonful, clear three times a day and the intra-venous in two c. c. twice a week, Germex is a saprophyte that lives on dead tissues or substances and living pathogenic bacteria, and is used for antiseptic purposes possessing a peculiar action.

We are having success with diseases in general where diseases like arthritis, pernicious anemia, syphilis, septicemia, gangrene and many like diseases, including cancer, ulcers, fistula and rheumatic fever.

The preparation we are placing before the physicians is a non-poisonous antiseptic called Germex. It constitutes a saprophyte developed in a bitter media, which is harmless, yet it destroys the pathogenic, a harmful bacteria or parasite.

Germex covers a lot of territory in its action, having very distinct effect upon the following diseases, ulcers of all kinds, sores that usually are difficult to heal, fistula, syphilis, with a negative result, arthritis, pernicious anemia, cancer and septicemia, along with new results most every day reported.

At first thought the medical man thinks Oh a cure all. We have only the one preparation that covers also diabetes, as you mention in your letter, they are also using it for diphtheria.

We do not build an antibody as has been the custom by immunizing the phagocytes.

* * *

We believe it is a revolution in medicine, and would be the greatest seller in history. Germex is curing pernicious anemia, arthritis and many diseases heretofore known as incurable.

* * *

Complaint

24 F. T. C.

Germex, being a non-poisonous liquid antiseptic, is taken internally and applied externally. Bacteria and parasites live upon the saccharine fluids of the body and the young cells, which contain the nourishment (Islets). Germex deprives them of this food, due to its peculiar bitter contents, and renders them inactive, thus permitting nature to function, and allowing the cells to rebuild.

Germex does not contain alkaloids, alkalies, or acids and acts only as an antiseptic therapeutically.

* * *

We recommend Germex for pernicious anemia, various forms of ulcer, eczema, trench mouth and similar diseases that require a positive antiseptic.

* * *

Germex is a non-poisonous antiseptic for both internal and external use. Antiseptics usually may only be used externally.

It is conceded that most of the ills of men are due to bacteria.

Germex does not destroy the tissues; in fact, does not kill bacteria in a test tube, but acts as an agent to prevent the development of bacteria, thus driving them out. We do know that desired results have been obtained with many heretofore considered incurable diseases, such as cancer, pernicious anemia, ulcers, fistula, syphilis, and eczema, including pyorrhea, pink toothbrush, athlete's foot, catarrh, trench mouth, and more simple diseases.

Respondent Duncombe has further represented and represents that the product Germex is a cure likewise for such diseases and ailments as ringworm, Cuban itch, streptococcus throat, lice on cows, Florida itch, scarlet fever, Psoriasis Lingae and carcinoma eczema.

PAR. 4. Respondent had further, in the course and conduct of his business issued and distributed in interstate commerce circulars and other literature containing testimonials in which statements are made by various persons to the effect that they were or had been suffering from cancer, ulcers and other diseases and had been relieved or cured or completely restored to health, and has represented that he has cured numerous persons living in various States of the United States of cancer, ulcers, and similar diseases, by the use of his remedy Germex, when in truth and in fact respondent was and is without personal knowledge as to the disease, ailment or disorder from which said persons were or had been actually suffering.

PAR. 5. The truth and facts are that respondent's product Germex, advertised and represented by him as a remedy and cure for such diseases as cancer, ulcers of stomach, pernicious anemia, syphilis, arthritis, sinus, catarrh, trench mouth, eczema, sores, syphilitic sores, kidney and liver troubles, septicemia, fistula, rheumatic fever, diabetes, diphtheria, pyorrhea, and pink toothbrush, does not possess such therapeutic value or medicinal qualities as to be truthfully represented, designated or referred to as a cure or safe remedy for or as giving lasting relief to sufferers from cancers, arthritis, ulcers, and other diseases next above enumerated, or other similar ailments, there being no known remedy or cure for several of them, respondent's remedy being at most an antiseptic wash or application and possessing admittedly no therapeutic qualities and virtues.

PAR. 6. The above and foregoing representations of respondent in connection with the offering for sale and sale in interstate commerce of his product Germex as set forth in this complaint have and have had the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive and have misled and deceived the purchasing public into the belief that respondent's product known variously as "Germex," "Epi-Phi," and "Hindoo Prescription" is a remedy for cancer, ulcers of stomach, pernicious anemia, syphilis, arthritis, sinus, catarrh, trench mouth, eczema, sores, syphilitic sores, kidney and liver troubles, septicemia, fistula, rheumatic fever, diabetes, diphtheria, pyorrhea, and pink toothbrush, or "any other disease which has been caused by parasite or bacteria" and "everything that local doctors are called upon to treat," and have tended to induce, and have induced the purchase of respondent's so-called Germex in reliance upon such erroneous belief and have tended to divert from, and have diverted trade from the competitors of respondent who manufacture and sell in interstate commerce preparations intended for treatment of diseases and ailments enumerated by respondent but who refrain from making false representations in connection with the advertisement and sale thereof.

PAR. 7. The above false, misleading, and deceptive acts, practices and methods of respondent, under the circumstances and conditions herein alleged, are untruthful, are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Robert M. Drysdale, attorney for the respondent, and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, and the brief of the Commission in support of the complaint; and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, Tyrrell H. Duncombe, is an individual, residing at 14049 Woodward Avenue, Highland Park, Mich., and maintaining an office and conducting a laboratory at said address under the name and style of Duncombe Research Laboratory. Respondent is now and for more than two years prior to the issuance of the complaint herein had been engaged in the sale and distribution to physicians, hospitals, laboratories and individuals of a preparation manufactured or compounded by him at the above stated address, variously termed "Germex" and "Epi-Phi," but generally designated as "Germex."

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his said business as described in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent, Tyrrell H. Duncombe, has offered the said product for sale and has sold and transported or caused the same to be transported in commerce among the several States of the United States direct from the aforesaid place of business to consumers located at points in States of the United States other than the State of Michigan, in response to orders received through the mails. Respondent has further planned and undertaken to sell his product throughout the United States, among other methods, by granting, or attempting to grant by contract, exclusive sales' rights covering an entire State.

In the course and conduct of such selling, respondent has been, and now is, engaged in competition with corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals offering for sale and selling in like commerce preparations, compounds or medicines for use in the treatment of the same or similar ailments or diseases.

PAR. 3. Respondent, in connection with the sale and distribution of the aforementioned product, "Germex," has distributed and now distributes in interstate commerce, folders, circulars, pamphlets and cards, and letters in which he represents that "Germex" is a safe, non-poisonous antiseptic and is a cure or remedy for numerous dangerous and malignant diseases of the body, including many heretofore regarded as incurable. Typical of such recommendations are those to the effect that "Germex" is a non-poisonous antiseptic which may safely be used internally, externally and intravenously, and that it destroys pathogenic, or disease-causing bacteria, germs, and parasites. Respondent has further represented that the cancer cures attained by "Germex" are "beyond all comprehension"; that "Germex" is a cure for syphilis, arthritis, pernicious anemia, and gangrene; that said preparation is a remedy for tuberculosis; that notable results are being obtained by the use of "Germex" in such diseases as cancer, sinus, catarrh, trench mouth and ulcers of the stomach; that it is being used most successfully for diphtheria, scarlet fever and septicemia, fistula and rheumatic fever; that it is recommended for kidney and liver troubles; and that desired results are also being obtained in the treatment with "Germex" of fistula, pyorrhea, pink tooth brush, athlete's foot, catarrh, trench mouth, ring worm, eczema, Cuban and Florida itch, psoriasis lingae, streptococcus throat, and carcinoma. Respondent in his advertising has, in fact, variously recommended "Germex" as a competent cure and remedy for everything that local doctors are called upon to treat, and for any disease caused by parasites or bacteria and requiring a positive antiseptic.

Respondent has further, in the course and conduct of his business, issued and distributed in interstate commerce, circulars and other literature containing purported testimonials by various persons to the effect that they were, or have been, suffering from cancer, ulcers, and other diseases and have been relieved or cured, or completely restored to health by the use of respondent's "Germex." Respondent has represented that he has cured numerous persons living in various States of the United States of cancer, ulcers, arthritis and other diseases, by the use of his product "Germex."

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact, respondent is without personal or scientific knowledge as to the origin, course, nature, and characteristics of the diseases which he claims to be able to cure, or to have cured, and for which he recommends "Germex" as a remedy or cure in his literature and advertising material, and has no actual or scientific knowledge concerning either the diagnosis of or the proper treatment of such diseases.

Although respondent is, or at one time was, a pharmacist, he is not registered as such in Detroit or Wayne County, Mich. Respondent never took a course in medicine and holds no degree in medicine. Respondent, however, in written communications prescribing and selling "Germex" has signed himself "Dr. T. H. Duncombe." Respondent explains that he uses the word or title "Dr." because he is a chiropractor. When questioned in regard to chiropractic, respondent was unable to state accurately the number of vertebrae in the spinal column. The laws of the State of Michigan do not permit chiropractors or osteopaths to use the title "Doctor."

Respondent never read, nor could he give the name or title of, any book on the subject of arthritis, anemia, syphilis, trench mouth, or scarlet fever. Respondent could name no book or article he had ever read on septicemia, gangrene, ulcers, diabetes, tuberculosis, or other diseases enumerated in his advertising material.

Notwithstanding the fact that respondent is not a doctor and is without medical education, he has not hesitated to consult with patients, to undertake to diagnose their troubles and to prescribe his product "Germex" for them.

PAR. 5. Respondent claims to have discovered the preparation "Germex" accidentally about the year 1895. The preparation was first tried out on insect life, being sprayed on potato plants and being called "Bug Yellow." Respondent then recommended the preparation as being destructive to various kinds of insect life, including lice on cattle and vermin on men. Respondent thereafter recommended the preparation in the treatment of, and as a cure and remedy for, various diseases and ailments of the body, including cancer, arthritis, syphilis, and tuberculosis.

Bacteriological examinations of "Germex" disclose that it is not an antiseptic, is not sterile and contains pathogenic or disease-causing bacteria. Smears from "Germex" were found to contain, among others, such types of bacteria as the Monilia, or dangerous type of yeast, Gram-negative rods, Gram-positive rods and cocci. Healthy mice injected with the Gram-positive rods became sick the following day. The yeast culture was injected intravenously into a mouse; the mouse was killed, and the autopsy showed abscesses in the liver, spleen, and intestines, thus indicating that the yeast organisms obtained from "Germex" were pathogenic; that is, disease-forming to animals. Microscopic smears made from these abscesses were in turn positive for yeast. The tests showed that the yeast, Gram-positive rods, cocci, and Gram-negative rods increased in the fluid "Germex." The yeast test also revealed that "Germex" is not a bactericide; that is, that it does not kill or destroy bacteria. Organisms grew in specimens of "Germex" from which, theretofore, all organisms had been removed. The tests further disclosed that "Germex" is not a sterile product, but contains living micro-organisms, one of which at least, as stated, was pathogenic to animals. Bacteriological examinations made by a medical technologist of the Herman Kiefer Laboratory at

Findings

Detroit, Mich., disclosed that "Germex" does not inhibit or stop the growth of such organisms as bacillus typhosis, the typhoid fever bacteria, and staphylococcus, a type of bacteria containing various round pathogenic organisms. Further bacteriological examinations made by an expert employed by respondent resulted in the finding that "Germex" is not a sterile product and should not be used intravenously.

In a further test to determine the bacteriological qualities or aspects of "Germex," a prominent Detroit hospital planted tuberculosis bacilli in a culture and then added drops of "Germex" according to instructions given by respondent, with the result that the growth of the tuberculosis bacilli could not be determined because of the rapid overgrowth of other bacteria which were present in "Germex."

PAR. 6. The product "Germex" contains no therapeutic ingredients that would be helpful in the treatment or cure of the diseases enumerated by the respondent and the representations of respondent in such relations are false and misleading in their entirety. The record discloses that the respondent has steadfastly refused to inform anyone as to the nature or identity of the ingredients entering into the composition of "Germex." Respondent even refused to inform the American Medical Association, the Wayne County Medical Society, or the Michigan or Detroit Health authorities as to the contents of "Germex."

As a result of qualitative and quantitative analyses, the ingredients of "Germex" were determined. The analysis also indicated the absence of certain specific substances. Chemical analyses of a sample of "Germex" as made by the Laboratories of the Detroit Department of Health disclosed the product to be a brown liquid, cloudy in appearance, with a yellowish residue on the bottom and a scum on the surface of the liquid standing in the bottom. The sample contained 8.18% of ethyl alcohol by volume, a deficiency of .82%, had a musty odor, a slightly acid reaction, small amounts of resin and glucocides, total solids of .97% of this .14% representing a composition of ash, largely sodium carbonate, and a trace of potassium carbonate. The laboratory found "Germex" to be an aqueous-alcoholic solution of organic drug extractives with a very small percentage of inorganic solids. The drug extractives in "Germex" were found to be similar to, or identical with, the drug extractives of the echinacea root. The small amount of alcohol added was not found to be an efficient preservative.

The chemical analysis further disclosed the absence in "Germex" of a number of drugs, chemicals or metals commonly accepted and used by the medical profession in the treatment of various of the diseases for which the respondent recommends and administers his "Germex." No mercury or mercury salts, no bismuth or bismuth compounds, no iron or iron salts, no arsenic or arsenic compounds, no heavy metals, no salicylic acid or salicylates, and no chemical caustics were found in "Germex."

The drug echinacea was the subject of careful investigation and report by the Council on Pharmacy and Chemistry of the American Medical Association as far back as 1909. The drug had been used as a "blood purifier" by one Dr. H. F. C. Meyer of Pawnee City, Nebr., being guaranteed by that individual as an absolute cure for rattlesnake bite within twenty-four hours. The Council on Pharmacy and Chemistry of the American Medical Association referred to the claims of Dr. Meyer as the "absurd claims of an evidently ignorant man" and recommended the rejection of echinacea.

The Department of Agriculture in 1920 made exhaustive experimental studies of echinacea therapy. These studies reported that the use of echinacea as a remedy for various disorders in both humans and animals originated with the American Indians. Echinacea root, it was stated, has entered into the composition of a number of patent, proprietary and nonsecret mixtures, but has never been officially recognized in the United States Pharmacopoeia. Those using the root, the Department reported, had recommended it in the case of blood poison, snake bite, typhoid and malarial fevers, goiter, smallpox, anthrax, hydrophobia, tetanus, erysipelas, ulcers, gangrene, burns and syphilitic nodules. The department of Agriculture, after elaborate tests on animals, found that echinacea does not possess remedial value against tetanus, that results were negative in septicemia and that echinacea does not appear to be of value as a remedy for anthrax nor for rattlesnake bite, tuberculosis, botulism, or chronic dourine conditions.

PAR. 7. The various representations of the respondent in respect to the diseases he claims "Germex" to be a remedy or cure for were carefully considered and checked in connection with the ingredients found and those not found in "Germex" as disclosed by chemical analyses and in the light of a knowledge of medicine and the accepted methods of the treatment of such diseases. As a result of their investigations competent medical authorities state and report: That "Germex" cannot be considered as a remedy for arthritis, as it contains nothing that could be employed as an analgesic and does not show the presence of any salicylates; that "Germex" is not a remedy for anemia, as it contains no iron or iron salts; that "Germex" would not be effective in the treatment of syphilis, as it contains no arsenic or arsenic salts, no heavy metals, and no bismuth or mercury salts; that "Germex" would not be effective in the treatment of trench mouth, as it contains no substance used for such purpose; that "Germex" could not be used in the treatment of scarlet fever, as it is not a biological product and is not of a germicidal nature; that "Germex" contains nothing to combat the bacteria found in the condition of septicemia; that "Germex" cannot be used in the treatment of diphtheria, as it contains no antitoxin; that "Germex" could have no influence on the cause of gangrene or serve as a cure therefor and could only be used in any event as a wash for such condition; that "Germex" would have no value in the treatment of stomach ulcers as a neutralizer of hydrochloric acid, its alkaline content being very slight; that "Germex" could not be used as a remedy for diabetes, as nothing remotely approaching insulin is found in it; that "Germex" is not a remedy for streptococcus throat, as it is not a germicide, and for the same reason could not be used locally as a treatment for tuberculosis lesions on the surface and would be ineffectual in treating tuberculosis systematically; that nothing was found in the compound suggesting that it would be useful even as an eliminant in kidney and liver trouble; that "Germex" would not be effective in the treatment of rheumatic fever; that it could not even be used as a germicide applied locally to ulcerations of an eczematous nature; and that "Germex" could not be used in the treatment of even superficial forms of cancer, as it was not found to contain anything of a caustic nature.

"Germex" was found by medical experts to be an aqueous extract of an organic substance, probably of vegetable origin, possessing no indicated pharmaceutical properties and being highly contaminated with several types of bacteria. The intravenous use of "Germex" was condemned by medical experts as being dangerous. It would be taking a terrible risk to put it in the veins of an individual, due to its contaminated condition. The yeast cells of the Monilia type found in "Germex" would expose a person using it to possible infection, the Monilia type of yeast being pathogenic and having virulent characteristics when introduced into the tissues, frequently producing destruction of tissues and abscess formation.

Medical experts, in the light of their investigations, term the claims made for "Germex," either as a medicine or an antiseptic, as "highly exaggerated and not based on any actual fact;" as a "bid for business," "fallacious," "not supported by the facts," "contradictory in many respects," "not to be believed in the light of a knowledge of medicine and the accepted methods of treatment," "highly exaggerated," and "generally untrue." One prominent medical expert termed "Germex" as just a "sort of mess" and "entirely inert and without any pharmacological action whatsoever." As the outstanding requirement of a preparation for intravenous administration depends upon its being sterile, this expert would be very much opposed to having "Germex" get into the circulation of any patient he was responsible for.

PAR. 8. There are no positive cures known to the medical profession for cancer in an advanced state, but such profession does use or employ certain accepted treatments for cancer. It cannot be said that the cause of cancer is known. The successful eradication of a cancer is accomplished by its destruction. The accepted methods for the treatment and attempted destruction of cancer as known to medical science are three:

1. Surgical removal;
2. Destruction with X-ray;
3. Radium.

No cancer specialist would undertake to predict that a cancer would not recur. Antiseptics have no value in the treatment of cancer.

The respondent devoted more attention to the treatment of cancer than to any other diseases covered by the advertising claims and representations made by him for "Germex." The claims for cancer cure or cancer relief as made by respondent are not established. The record discloses the fact that the respondent in some instances thought or claimed that patients had cancer when they did not have it, and that those who did have cancer and were treated by respondent either died, or still have the cancer. The accepted method of diagnosing a cancer or suspected cancerous growth or condition is to cut or slice off a part of the diseased area and make an examination of such piece of tissue. This method is known as a biopsy. The respondent made or took no biopsies in connection with cancer cases treated by him with "Germex," did not diagnose the patient's trouble and frequently knew no one else who had. Nevertheless, respondent has made a practice of prescribing for patients, some of whom he has never seen, undertaking from time to time to treat them through the mails.

PAR. 9. The respondent is now selling "Germex" under the name "Neutro-Plasm" through the medium of a Detroit organization called "Neutro-Plasm Foundation," supplying the foundation with the product in 100-gallon lots. Advertisements are being run in six different medical magazines. The members of the foundation group do not know what "Germex" contains, the respondent being "unwilling at present to tell us exactly what is in it." "Neutro-Plasm" is being put out primarily as a cancer deodorant, but advertising used by the foundation in selling the product also contains the following statement:

1270

Findings

It would seem that Neutro-Plasm checks the development and the spread of various forms of carcinoma, sarcoma and endothelioma, and in some instances corrects the condition to effect a restoration to normal of the patient.

PAR. 10. The various statements and representations made by respondent, through the medium of letters, circulars, pamphlets, and other advertising media employed in selling and offering for sale his product "Germex" in the respective States of the United States were and are deceptive and misleading. "Germex" is not antiseptic, and is not a germicide. It will not kill, destroy or drive out disease-forming bacteria. It has no therapeutic value or qualities whatsoever. It is not a remedy or cure for, nor will it produce beneficial results in the treatment of such diseases as arthritis, pernicious anemia, syphilis, septicemia, gangrene, cancer, ulcer, fistula, rheumatic fever, trench mouth, diphtheria, scarlet fever, diabetes, cancer, catarrh, sinus, ulcers of the stomach, tuberculosis, kidney and liver troubles, rheumatic fever, or any other disease or ailment to which mankind is subject. "Germex," being highly contaminated, is not sterile and therefore is unsafe and unfit for intravenous use.

PAR. 11. There are among the competitors of respondent as referred to hereinbefore, corporations, partnerships, firms and persons who are engaged in the sale of preparations which are recommended for use in the treatment of such diseases or ailments as those mentioned by respondent in his advertising material but who truthfully represent their products and their therapeutic value and honestly vend the same.

PAR. 12. The use of the aforesaid false and misleading representations and practices on the part of the respondent in the sale and offering for sale of his product known and designated as "Germex" has had, and now has, the tendency and capacity to cause members of the purchasing public to form the mistaken and erroneous beliefs that respondent's said product "Germex" is a true and genuine antiseptic, is sterile, may be safely taken intravenously, has therapeutic value in the treatment of various diseases; and that it will relieve pain in connection with, will produce beneficial results in the treatment of, or is a remedy or cure for the diseases named in paragraph 3 herein. Acting under such erroneous beliefs, induced by the various misrepresentations of the respondent as herein detailed, many of said members of the public have purchased respondent's product "Germex." The aforesaid representations and practices on the part of respondent have and have had the capacity and tendency to unfairly divert to respondent the trade of competitors engaged in selling in interstate commerce, drugs, preparations, or remedies which are truthfully advertised and represented and which are recommended for use in connection with the treatment of the various diseases and ailments enumerated by the respondent. Thereby substantial injury has been done, and is being done, by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, Tyrrell H. Duncombe, an individual trading as Duncombe Research Laboratory, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the said respondent, Tyrrell H. Duncombe, individually, and trading as Duncombe Research Laboratory, or under any other trade name or through any corporate or other device, his servants, employees, or agents, individual or corporate, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, of a preparation or product in liquid, salve, or other form, designated as "Germex" or "Epi-Phi," or any other product of substantially the same ingredients so designated or designated by any other word, name, legend, or title, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1270

Order

1. That said product, "Germex" is sterile;
 2. That "Germex" is antiseptic in its action or is an antiseptic; that it will kill, destroy, prevent growth of, or drive from the human body, pathogenic or disease-bearing or forming parasites, bacteria, germs, or microbes; and that it may be used safely as an antiseptic or may be taken safely internally, externally, or used intravenously;
 3. That "Germex" is a cure or remedy for, will relieve pain in connection with, or will produce any beneficial results in the treatment of, such diseases or ailments as cancer, pneumonia, tuberculosis, scarlet fever, ulcer, syphilis, arthritis, pernicious anemia, gangrene, diphtheria, trench mouth, septicemia, fistula, eczema, streptococcus sore throat, diabetes, sinus, pyorrhea, catarrh, athlete's foot, rheumatic fever, or any other disease or ailment to which human beings are subject.
- It is further ordered,* That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
LASALLE EXTENSION UNIVERSITY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2654. Complaint, Dec. 11, 1935—Decision, May 19, 1937

Where a corporation, long since organized, and in business, for profit, and which (1) conducted a school for vocational training, principally, by both correspondence and classroom plans, (2) as thus engaged, offered correspondence courses, its chief concern and interest, in a large number of subjects falling, primarily, within the divisions of law and business management and accountancy, (3) sold or supplied, as incident thereto, textbooks, used to some extent by a large number of schools, colleges and universities, prepared by it and also for it by others, (4) advertised its said courses in business magazines, trade journals, and other periodicals of wide interstate circulation, and also extensively in the lower priced so-called "pulp" magazines, and solicited purchasers therefor through some 300 so-called "Registrars" on commission basis, (5) had no entrance requirements other than competency to master the courses, (6) conferred no degree other than that in its law course, and gave no courses leading to graduate degrees or available for credit for such degrees upon transfer of the student to college or university offering the same, and (7) in connection with its classroom courses provided no facilities for its pupils other than said classrooms—

Represented, through use of term "Extension University" in its corporate name and in its advertising literature, that it conducted a university or extension university, notwithstanding fact it was not a university and did not possess the qualities and attributes considered by educators and members of the public generally as requisites for an institution to make it such or to entitle it thus to be designated, such as being an institution (1) of higher learning with a nucleus of a college of arts and sciences, with courses in such subjects as music, painting, architecture, literature, history, etc., and surrounded by a graduate school and one or more professional schools, and conferring academic and graduate and professional degrees, and with a faculty of learned persons acting as instructors in the various branches of instruction involved, as attested to a considerable extent by number of degrees earned, and (2) one not operated to make a profit from its educational operations that does not go entirely back into its funds for upkeep or expansion, or engaged in securing registrations through paid salesmen, and (3) with, as a rule, dormitories, laboratories and research facilities, and with students already adequately trained by previous study in colleges of arts and sciences leading into special fields of learning through study and seminar and laboratory instruction and research work, and notwithstanding fact it was not engaged in extension activities of a university, as indicated by said word;

With tendency and capacity to create in the minds of a part of the public, and especially those interested in obtaining education by correspondence courses, an erroneous and mistaken conception and belief as to its true character and nature and that of its courses of instruction, and to cause various persons to enroll as pupils with it and to subscribe to its textbooks and courses in the mistaken and erroneous belief that it was a university and possessed the attributes hereinabove indicated, and with effect of causing prospective pupils to purchase its said courses and textbooks in preference to those sold by similar institutions which do not make use of word "university" in their corporate name or otherwise, and of diverting trade to it from its said competitors which do not make similar misuse of term "extension university" or word "university", and also from recognized colleges and universities which operate and maintain extension divisions or departments offering correspondence courses similar to those offered by it; to the injury of all said competitors in the sale and distribution of correspondence courses of instruction in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. W. W. Sheppard, trial examiner.

Mr. John W. Hilldrop for the Commission.

LaRochelle, Brooks & Walrath, of Chicago, Ill. and Mr. George L. Schein and Mr. H. B. Cox, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, and entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that the LaSalle Extension University, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act of Congress, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, LaSalle Extension University, a corporation, is a corporation chartered and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, and with its principal place of business in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. It is and has been for some time past engaged in conducting a school for vocational training on both the correspondence and residential plans, and in the selling and distribution of its courses of instruction on the subjects embraced in its curriculum, to wit, Business Management, Higher Accountancy, Traffic Management, Modern Salesmanship, Banking and Finance, Modern Business Correspondence, Credit and Collection Correspondence, Modern Foremanship, American Law and Procedure, Paper Salesman's Training, Railway Station Management, Industrial Management, Railway Accounting, Personnel Management, Commercial Law, Telegraphy, Stenotyping, Elements of Accounting, Effective Speaking, Certified Public Accountancy Coaching, Business English and Commercial Spanish, in interstate commerce, and in the course and conduct of its business it sells and delivers to various persons in the several States of the United States other than Iowa courses and textbooks, causing same when sold to be shipped to the purchasers thereof into and through States of the United States other than Iowa.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent, LaSalle Extension University, a corporation, was and is in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of similar products.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business, respondent, LaSalle Extension University, a corporation, adopted as and for its corporate trade name the words, "LaSalle Extension University," which corporate and trade name so containing the words "Extension University" the said corporation has used and displayed and is still using and displaying in its advertisements and advertising matter, including catalogs, enrollment blanks, lesson papers, letterheads, and other printed matter; and in newspapers, magazines, trade journals, and other publications and periodicals having an interstate circulation. The said respondent, in advertising for pupils to enroll with it and subscribe to its courses, uses and displays its said corporate and trade name, "Extension University," and thereby induces various persons residing in various States of the United States other than Illinois, and in the District of Columbia, to enroll with respondent as a pupil and to subscribe and pay for the courses, textbooks, and correspondence composed of quizzes and answers on the subjects involved, provided and promulgated by respondent, which said courses, textbooks and correspondence composed of quizzes and answers on the subjects involved, are by respondent shipped and transported from its place of business in Chicago, Ill., into and through the various States of the United States other than Illinois and into the District of Columbia, to those various persons enrolling with respondent as pupils and subscribing to said courses.

The term and words "Extension University" are false and misleading in that they create in the minds of a part of the public, and especially those of the public who are interested in obtaining an education by correspondence courses, that respondent, LaSalle Extension University, is in truth and in fact a "University," which term is generally accepted and understood to mean an educational institution of higher learning, with power to confer degrees, with a faculty of learned persons acting as instructors in various branches of learning, which include the liberal arts and sciences and one or more special branches of learning, such as theology, law, and medicine, when in truth and in fact the courses taught and sold in commerce by respondent, LaSalle Extension University, with the exception of that of law, do not constitute courses in liberal arts and sciences, nor can its instructors be considered a faculty of learned persons, and when in truth and in fact, while its charter from the State of Illinois gives it the right and power to confer degrees, no such degrees are by it conferred, with the exception of that of LL. B. in its law course.

The false, misleading, and deceptive practices as hereinbefore set out are to the prejudice of the public and have a tendency and capacity to and do induce various persons to enroll as pupils with respondent, LaSalle Extension University, a corporation, and to subscribe to the textbooks and courses sold by respondent, under the belief that respondent, LaSalle Extension University, a corporation, is a university, when in truth and in fact respondent is not a university; and such false, misleading and deceptive practices of respondent have the capacity to and do unfairly divert trade to respondent from its competitors who are engaged in a similar and like enterprise and business and who sell correspondence courses and textbooks in interstate commerce, without misrepresenting their true status, and who do not represent and hold themselves out as universities.

PAR. 4. The acts and things done as herein alleged by respondent are to the prejudice of the public and the competitors of the respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

sion theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by LaRochelle, Brooks and Walrath, attorneys for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPHS 1. Respondent LaSalle Extension University is a corporation organized in 1908 and doing business under the laws of the State of Illinois. It was organized as a corporation for profit and it is now engaged in business for profit. Dividends are, from time to time, paid to its stockholders. Its principal place of business is located in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois. Since its organization, it has been engaged in conducting a school, principally for vocational training, by both correspondence and classroom plans and in the sale and distribution of its courses of instruction on the subjects embraced in its curriculum. When sales of its correspondence courses are made, respondent causes the textbooks, lesson and instruction material and other literature incident to said courses of instruction to be transported through the United States mail from its principal office in Chicago, Ill., to the purchasers thereof located at points in every State of the United States and also in Canada and many other foreign countries. The average annual number of persons purchasing and subscribing to its correspondence courses of instruction is approximately 25,000. Approximately one-fifth of its students have not had a high school education prior to purchasing its course of instruction.

Respondent, in the sale and distribution of correspondence courses of instruction, has been since its incorporation and is now, engaged in substantial competition with other corporations and with copartnerships and individual likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in commerce among and between the several States of the United States of similar correspondence courses of instruction. Some of such competitors are extension divisions or departments of well-known and long recognized universities of high standing. Others of said competitors are corporations, partnerships, or individuals engaged solely in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of correspondence courses of instruction and are not in any way connected with any university. Some of such last named competitors also conduct schools of classroom instructions similar to those conducted by the respondent herein.

PAR. 2. In order to obtain purchasers for its various courses of instruction, the respondent maintains a staff of approximately 300 representatives designated as "Registrars." These representatives work on a commission basis and are paid in proportion to the number of orders they obtain. Some of them live in the community where they work and some of them travel throughout the country in various states explaining respondent's courses of instruction and securing orders for the purchase of said courses. Approximately one-third of respondent's pupils are secured in this matter. Prices for the various courses which respondent sells range from $25.00 for the simpler courses to $198.50 for other courses.

The only requirement necessary for pupils to enter its various courses of instruction is competency to master the courses. In order to obtain a degree in the Law course, a person enrolling and purchasing the course must have at least a high school education or its equivalent based on the same standards as required by any other institution. Approximately 20% of the persons purchasing respondent's courses have previously attended college to some extent.

Since its incorporation in 1908, the respondent has continually used the term or words "Extension University" in its corporate name and in all of its advertising literature. Respondent obtains a large number of pupils who subscribe to its various correspondence courses through advertisements inserted in business magazines, trade journals, and other periodicals having a wide interstate circulation such as American Magazine, Cosmopolitan, Red Book, Review of Reviews, Saturday Evening Post, Literary Digest, Collier's, Christian Science Monitor, Nation's Business and Traffic World. It also advertises extensively in the lower-priced magazines generally referred to as "pulp" magazines. Respondent has a very strict control over the placement of its advertising and approves every advertisement before it is issued. In its advertisements, various appeals are made for the purpose of securing the enrollment of pupils and the sale of its correspondence courses. Illustrative of such statements appearing in its advertisements are the following:

Right now in many lines, there is a search for really good men, managers, leaders, men who can take charge of departments, businesses, branch offices, and set things humming.

The respondent has prepared and published textbooks for use in connection with many of its courses of instruction. During the two years preceding the date of the hearings in this case, approximately 40 colleges and universities had, for the first time, adopted respondent's textbooks. The textbooks adopted by a substantial majority of these institutions are those dealing with auditing procedure and accounting systems. Such universities as the University of Pittsburgh, Yale University, University of Southern California, University of Illinois, Oklahoma A. & M. University, University of Alabama and Northwestern University use respondent's textbooks as a basis for vocational courses dealing with various phases of railroad and common carrier transportation such as railroad tariffs, rate structures and regulation of public carriers. The various textbooks used in the full three-year Law course were not prepared or edited by the respondent or any member of its faculty. Respondent's textbooks are used to some extent by approximately 400 schools, colleges and universities throughout the United States. Its textbooks so used by other schools and by colleges and universities throughout the United States are limited almost exclusively to textbooks dealing with auditing procedure, accounting systems and business management. In the majority of instances where the college and university have adopted respondent's textbooks for use in connection with their various courses of instruction, it is found that such institutions not only offer courses based on respondent's courses, but offer other allied courses which are not based on respondent's textbooks and do not correspond to respondent's courses.

PAR. 4. Respondent's faculty consists of 35 professors and instructors. Only one of these has a Doctor's degree, that of Juris Doctor. Five of them have various Master's degrees. The remainder hold various Bachelor's degrees. Some of them also are certified public accountants. The respondent also employs approximately 385 people in its Chicago offices who devote varying portions of their time to respondent's work. These assistants send out the lessons, handle the general correspondence and service for the correspondence students and grade the papers of such students. The instructors and professors have nothing to do with the details of this work. They give general supervision to the work and handle special problems submitted by students. The professors and instructors primarily devote their efforts towards instruction in the classes held in Chicago and to general supervision. The actual grading of these lessons is principally done by the assistants employed for this specific purpose. The research work done by respondent's staff is limited to the fields of auditing procedure, accounting systems, business management and salesmanship and the development of new courses of instruction in those fields.

Respondent does not offer any courses dealing with Physical Sciences, Philosophy, Psychology (except Business Psychology), Art, Music, Classical Languages or Modern Languages (except Commercial Spanish). The only degree it confers is the LL. B conferred upon the graduates of its Law department. Since its organization, approximately 1,400 persons have obtained its LL. B degree. Approximately 1,000 of these have been admitted to the bar in various states. It has never conferred any of the other degrees that are conferred by universities such as, A. B., B. S., M. A., or Ph. D, and has not given any courses leading to graduate degrees or that can be used for credit for graduate degrees upon transfer of the student to a college or university offering graduate degrees.

The course of instruction leading to the degree of LL. B. is not given by classroom instruction. The only Law course given by classroom instruction is that of Business Law. Pupils cannot obtain respondent's LL. B. degree by attending the classroom instructions in Chicago.

Approximately 600 persons residing in the city of Chicago attend respondent's classroom instruction courses. These courses are conducted in premises having classroom facilities in the Loop District in the city of Chicago. Respondent's activities are primarily centered around the correspondence school which it maintains and its principal income is derived from its correspondence school. Its interests in the courses of instruction offered on the classroom plan is secondary. In addition to the 35 members of the faculty holding degrees, some of whom teach in the classroom courses, there are also 17 other assistants, some of whom do not hold degrees, teaching in the classroom courses.

Respondent maintains no facilities for its pupils other than classrooms for those pursuing classroom instruction. It does not maintain dormitories or meeting rooms for its pupils and does not maintain laboratories or research facilities for use by its students. It neither provides nor sponsors extra-curricular activities for its students. Its students purchasing the correspondence courses of instruction have no opportunity to confer with the members of respondent's staff except through correspondence and none of respondent's students have opportunities to engage in laboratory or research work under the guidance and supervision of respondent's instructors.

PAR. 5. The quality, character and extent of extension teaching is governed primarily by the activities of two national associations. One association is the National University Extension Association. It is composed of 48 well-known and long-recognized universities and colleges which, as an adjunct to their primary residence teaching, conduct extension teaching. The respondent is not a member of this association and is not eligible for membership therein. The other association is the National Home Study Council. The membership of this organization is made up of approximately 50 institutions engaged solely or primarily in the sale of correspondence courses of instruction and in teaching pupils through the correspondence plan. The respondent is a member of this association.

There is also an association known as the North Central Association, the membership of which is made up of many schools, colleges and universities. This association is probably the leading unit in this country for establishing and maintaining standards for accrediting students. Respondent is not a member of this association and prior to 1934, was not eligible for membership. Since 1934, the rules have been broadened and it is not now known whether respondent is eligible for membership. Respondent has not made application for membership therein.

PAR. 6. Universities do not all possess identical physical equipment, curriculum or faculty and it is not necessary that they do so. Over a period of many years, there has grown up a belief and understanding among educators and among the public generally as to the requisite characteristics necessary to be possessed by any institution to entitle it to be considered a university. A university must be an institution of higher learning. It must have a nucleus of a college of arts and sciences and must be surrounded by a graduate school and one or more professional schools. Its courses in the college of arts and sciences must generally include such subjects as music, painting, sculpture, architecture, literature, ancient languages, history, psychology, mathematics, philosophy and natural and biological sciences. It must confer academic degrees such as B. A. and B. S. It must have a faculty of learned persons acting as instructors in the various branches of learning in which it gives instruction. To a considerable extent, the qualifications of such instructors to teach their respective courses is determined by the number of degrees that they have earned by attendance at colleges and universities, both in the college of arts and sciences and in graduate or professional colleges. A university must also confer graduate and professional degrees such as M. A., M. S., Ph. D., M. D., and J. D. upon students completing such specified courses of graduate study. In order to complete work for graduate and professional degrees, laboratories, museums, libraries, and a staff of specialized instructors with graduate and professional degrees to supervise and direct the work must be personally available to the students.

A university, even when it is not a state owned institution, is considered to be an institution interested solely in the greatest possible advancement and dissemination of learning and knowledge. It does not make a profit from its educational operations that does not go entirely back into the funds of the university for up-keep or expansion. A university is not organized for private profit of the owners of its stock and it does not sell its stock or pay dividends thereon. A university does not secure registration of students through the medium of a corps of salesmen who are paid on a commission basis. In a university, students already adequately trained by previous study in colleges of arts and sciences are lead into special fields of learning through study, seminar instruction, research work and laboratory instruction. A university generally maintains dormitories or meeting rooms for its pupils. It always maintains laboratories and research facilities for use by the students and sponsors extra-curricular activities for its students. An institution selling correspondence courses on business subjects such as Business Management and Accounting, even though it also provides courses in one profession such as Law, cannot be considered a university.

PAR. 7. While the respondent gives a total of 77 courses, all of its courses fall primarily within the divisions of Law, Business Management and Accountancy. The range of the courses provided by the respondent, being limited to Law, Business Management and Accountancy, does not cover a sufficiently broad field to be comparable to the range of courses in many various subjects offered by a university, as referred to in the first sub-paragraph of paragraphs 6 and 9. Many universities have either a separate school or college of Law or Business Administration or offer a number of courses in Accountancy. The total number of such courses offered by any of such universities, however, is in all cases small compared to the total number of courses on various subjects offered by said universities as a whole. Such other universities in many cases give courses similar to respondent's courses and in some instances, such courses are based on the textbooks published by respondent. Such universities, however, do not maintain a school or college of Law and a school or college of Business Administration without also maintaining the other above mentioned requirements necessary to constitute them universities.

PAR. 8. From the testimony of noted and outstanding educators and from the facts hereinabove set out, it is found that the respondent is not a university and it does not possess the qualities and attributes considered by educators and members of the public generally as requisites necessary to be possessed by an institution to make it a university or to entitle it to be designated as a university. Respondent is not in any way connected or affiliated with any university or college.

PAR. 9. Many universities maintain extension departments or divisions with large enrollments in which the same courses of instruction are offered as are offered in the regular university sessions. These courses are generally taught by the same professors who teach the courses in the university proper. For example, the Home Study Correspondence Courses offered by the University of Chicago embrace such subjects as the biological sciences, the humanities, physical sciences, social sciences, anthropology, ancient and medieval arts, projective geometry, astronomy, botany, oriental languages, chemistry, finance, psychology and modern languages.

Other institutions, such as International Correspondence School, teach their courses of instruction by correspondence entirely. They obtain their pupils by advertising and by solicitation through a field organization. In many instances, their courses of instruction are similar to those of the respondent. The International Correspondence School publishes its own textbooks and also sells its books to some 400 schools, colleges and universities throughout the country and in 1935, had an enrollment of 42,000 students in the United States and Canada. The courses of instruction offered by respondent and International Correspondence School are very similar in the main though the International Correspondence School does not offer any courses in Law or in a few of the other subjects in which the respondent offers courses. Such institutions do not use the word "University" in their corporate name or in any of their advertising literature and in no way represent that they are universities or are conducting an extension division or department of a university.

PAR. 10. The use of the word "Extension" preceding the word "University" in respondent's corporate name and in all of its advertising literature, does not change or limit the characteristics and attributes generally understood as necessary to entitle an institution to be designated as a university. In fact, it indicates a broadening and enlargement of the scope of the activities of an institution which is a university. Under these circumstances, the use of the word "Extension" means bringing to the people outside of the so-called walls of the university the advantages of whatever the particular university may have to offer in its program and thus making the institution available to those who cannot make use of its opportunities under the normal circumstances in residence.

PAR. 11. The use, in its corporate name and otherwise, of the term "Extension University" or the word "University" on the part of the respondent, creates and has the tendency and capacity to create in the minds of a part of the public, especially those who are interested in obtaining an education by correspondence courses, an erroneous and mistaken conception and belief as to the true character and nature of the respondent institution and its courses of instruction.

The use of the term "Extension University" or the word "University" in respondent's corporate name and otherwise, has the tendency and capacity to cause various persons to enroll as pupils with respondent La Salle Extension University and to subscribe to its textbooks and courses of instruction under the mistaken and erroneous belief that said respondent is a university and that it possesses the attributes hereinabove mentioned which are generally considered as being those possessed by a university. As a result, the use of the term "Extension University" or the word "University" in respondent's corporate name and otherwise, has the tendency, capacity and effect of causing prospective pupils to purchase its courses of instruction and textbooks in preference to the courses of instruction and textbooks sold by similar institutions which do not make use of the word "University" in their corporate name or in any other manner. In consequence, trade has been diverted to the respondent LaSalle Extension University from its competitors which do not make similar misuse of the term "Extension University" or the word "University" and also from recognized colleges and universities which operate and maintain extension divisions or departments offering correspondence courses similar to those offered by respondent, to the injury of all of said competitors in the sale and distribution of correspondence courses of instruction in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, LaSalle Extension University, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent ent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent LaSalle Extension University, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of correspondence courses of instruction in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing, directly or indirectly, through the use of the term "Extension University" or the word "University" in its corporate name, or in any other manner, that it is, or that it conducts, a university or an extension university.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
HIRSCH DISTILLING COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2466. Complaint, June 27, 1935—Decision, May 20, 1937

Where a corporation engaged, as wholesaler and rectifier of spirituous liquors, in purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins, cordials, brandies, and other alcoholic beverages, and in producing gin with still used therefor, by redistillation of purchased alcohol, not produced by it, over juniper berries and other aromatics, and in producing by similar process of redistillation certain of its cordials and brandies, and in selling its aforesaid various products to wholesalers and retailers in other States and in the District of Columbia, in substantial competition with those engaged in the manufacture by true distillation of whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages from mash, wort, or wash, and in selling same in trade and commerce among the various States and in said District, and with those engaged in purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling such various beverages and similarly selling same, and including among said competitors those who, as manufacturers and distillers, by original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash, through continuous closed pipes and vessels until manufacture is complete, of whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages sold by them, truthfully use words "distillery," "distilleries," "distillers," or "distilling" as a part of their corporate or trade names and on their stationery and catalogs and on the labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship their said products, and those who, engaged in purchasing, rectifying, blending, bottling, and selling such various products, do not use aforesaid words as above set forth—

Represented, through use of word "Distilling" in its corporate name, printed on its stationery and catalogs and on the labels attached to the bottles in which it sold and shipped its said products, and in various other ways, to its customers and furnished same with the means of representing to their vendees, both retailers and ultimate consuming public, that it was a distiller and the said whiskies, gins, cordials, brandies, and other alcoholic beverages contained in such bottles were by it made through process of distillation as aforesaid, notwithstanding fact it did not thus distill said various beverages, thus bottled, labeled, sold, and transported by it, through aforesaid process of original and continuous distillation, as definitely understood from word "distilling" when used in connection with liquor industry and products thereof by the trade and ultimate purchasing public, and, excepting technical and limited operation for intervals of a day or more of distillery leased by it for producing portion of its distilled spirits requirements, did not own, operate, or control any place or places where such beverages are made by aforesaid process, and was not a distiller, for the purchase of the bottled liquors of which there is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public;

With effect of misleading and deceiving dealers and purchasing public into the beliefs that it was a distiller and that the whiskies, gins, and other

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Hirsch Distilling Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized, existing and doing business under the laws of the State of Missouri, with its office and principal place of business in the city of Kansas City, in said State. It is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in the business of a wholesaler and rectifier, purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins, cordials, brandies, and other alcoholic beverages and in the sale thereof in constant course of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its said business it causes its said products when sold to be transported from its place of business into and through various States of the United States to the purchasers thereof, consisting of wholesalers and retailers, located in other States of the United States and the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the manufacture by true distillation of whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages from mash, wort, or wash, and in the sale thereof in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid respondent is, and for more than one year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins, cordials, brandies, and other alcoholic beverages in rectifying plants and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Upon the premises of respondent's place of business aforesaid there is a still for use in the production of gins by a process of rectification whereby alcohol, purchased but not produced by respondent, is redistilled over juniper berries and other aromatics. Respondent also produces certain of its cordials and brandies by a similar process of redistillation. Such rectification of alcoholic spirits does not make or constitute respondent a distillery or a distiller, as defined by Section 3247 of the Revised Statutes regulating Internal Revenue, nor as commonly understood by the public and the liquor industry. For a long period of time the word "distilling" when used in connection with the liquor industry and with the products thereof has had and still has a definite significance and meaning to the minds of wholesalers and retailers in such industry and to the ultimate purchasing public, to wit, the manufacturing of spirituous liquors by an original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash, through continuous closed pipes and vessels until the manufacture thereof is complete, and a substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy spirituous liquors bottled and prepared by distillers.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid by the use of the word "Distilling" in its corporate name, printed on its stationery, catalogs, and on the labels attached to the bottles in which it sells and ships its said products, and in various other ways, respondent represents to its customers and furnishes them with the means of representing to their vendees, both retailers and the ultimate consuming public, that it is a distiller and that the said whiskies, gins, cordials, brandies, and other alcoholic beverages therein contained were by it manufactured through the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash, when, as a matter of fact, respondent is not a distiller, does not distill the said whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages by it so bottled, labeled, sold, and transported, and merely by the use of a still operated by it aforesaid in the production of gin and some of its cordials and brandies, does not distill the whiskies, gins and other spirituous beverages by it so bottled, labeled, sold, and transported in the sense in which the word "distilled" is commonly accepted and understood by those engaged in the liquor trade and the public. Respondent does not own, operate, or control any place or places where spirituous beverages are manufactured by a process of original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent engaged in the sale of spirituous beverages as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals who manufacture and distill from mash, wort or wash, whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages sold by them and who truthfully use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distillers," or "distilling" as a part of their corporate or trade names and on their stationery, catalogs, and on the labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship such products. There are also among such competitors corporations, firms, partnerships and individuals engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, bottling, and selling whiskies, gins, cordials, brandies, and other alcoholic beverages who do not use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distilling," or "distillers" as a part of their corporate or trade names, nor on their stationery, catalogs, advertising, nor on the labels attached to the bottles in which they sell and ship their said products.

PAR. 5. The representations by respondent, as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, are calculated to and have a capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive dealers and the purchasing public into the beliefs that respondent is a distiller and that the whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages sold by respondent are manufactured or distilled by it from wash, wort, or wash by one continuous process and are calculated to and have the capacity and tendency to and do induce dealers and the purchasing public, acting in such beliefs, to purchase the whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages rectified and bottled by the respondent, thereby diverting trade to respondent from its competitors who do not by their corporate or trade name or in any other manner misrepresent that they are distillers, and thereby respondent does substantial injury to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 6. The acts and things above alleged to have been done and the false representations alleged to have been made by respondent are to the prejudice of the public and the competitors of respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on June 27, 1935, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Hirsch Distilling Company, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer, the Commission, by order entered herein, granted respondent's motion for permission to withdraw said answer and to substitute therefor an answer admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, which substitute answer was duly filed in the office of the Commission on April 19, 1937. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint and the substitute answer, briefs and oral arguments of counsel having been waived, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Hirsch Distilling Company is a Missouri corporation having its office and principal place of business at No. 414 Delaware Street, Kansas City, Mo. It is now and since a time shortly after repeal has been engaged in the distilled spirits rectifying industry. Since about November 23, 1935, it has been operating under a basic permit known as "R-208" from the Federal Alcohol Administration Division of the Treasury Department issued to it under the provisions of the Act of August 29, 1935, cited as the "Federal Alcoholic Administration Act" (49 Stat. 977). Between the time of its commencing business and September, 1935, respondent engaged solely in the liquor business as a wholesaler and rectifier of spirituous liquors, purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins, cordials, brandies, and other alcoholic beverages and selling such products when bottled in a constant course of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. During and after the month of September, 1935, respondent entered into a lease arrangement whereby it technically operated at limited intervals of a day or more Distillery No. 12, District of Kentucky, at Bardstown, Ky., for the purpose of there producing a portion of its distilled spirits requirements and otherwise continued to engage in the same business as aforesaid. Except as here indicated this respondent does not now and never has owned, operated, or controlled a place or places where distilled spirits are produced by a process of original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash.

In the course and conduct of its said business it causes its said products when sold to be transported from its place of business into and through various States of the United States to the purchasers thereof, consisting of wholesalers and retailers, located in other States of the United States and the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the manufacture by true distillation of whiskies, gins and other alcoholic beverages from mash, wort, or wash, and in the sale thereof in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid respondent is, and for more than one year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins, cordials, brandies, and other alcoholic beverages in rectifying plants and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Rectifying, in the distilled spirits rectifying industry, means the mixing of whiskies of different ages and types, or the mixing of ages or types, or the mixing of other ingredients with whiskies, but reducing proof of whiskey by adding water is not rectifying. Rectifiers also blend whiskies with neutral spirits (grain alcohol). Some rectifiers blend it with cane.

Many distillers operate a separate establishment 600 feet or more away from this distilleries, known as a rectifying plant, wherein they operate in the same manner as described above for a rectifier, sometimes exclusively with spirits of their own distillation and often with spirits purchased from other distillers, or both. Some distilleries have a tax paid bottling room on a distillery bonded premises, wherein their distilled spirits are bottled straight as they come from the still or in a bonded warehouse after aging or after reduction of proof. Any rectifying done by a distiller, however, must be done in his rectifying plant under his rectifier's permit. On all bottled liquors, whether bottled at the distillery rectifying plant or any other rectifying plant, appear the words "bottled" or "blended," as the case may be, "by the ——— Company." If the distilled spirits therein contained are bottled by a distiller, either in his distillery, or are spirits of his own distillation bottled in his rectifying plant as straight whiskey, the distiller may and does put "distilled and bottled by ——— Company." Finally, blown in the bottom of each bottle is a symbol, consisting of a letter followed by a number, identifying the bottler. For instance, there as a "D" for a distiller and an "R" for a rectifier. The number following the said letter corresponds with the distiller's or rectifier's basic permit. Thus, "R-208" designates the Hirsch Distilling Company, a rectifier. A distiller who also operates a rectifying plant and who has both kinds of permits may use either symbol, depending upon whether the liquor contained in the bottle was produced and bottled under a distiller's or a rectifier's permit.

Section 3247 of the Revised Statutes (USCA Tit. 26, Sec. 1158 (a)) regulating Internal Revenue defines a "distiller" as follows:

Every person who produces distilled spirits or who brews or makes a mash, wort, or wash fit for distillation or for the production of spirits, or who, by any process of evaporation, separates alcoholic spirits from any substance, or who, making or keeping, mash, wort, or wash, has also in his possession or use a still, shall be regarded as a distiller.

Section 3244 of the Revised Statutes (USCA Tit. 26, Sec. 1398 (f)) defines a "rectifier" as follows:

Every person who rectifies, purifies, or refines distilled spirits or wine by any process other than by original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash, through continuous enclosed vessels or pipes, until the manufacture thereof is complete, and every wholesaler and liquor dealer who has in his possession any still or leach tub, or who keeps any other apparatus for the purpose of refining in any manner distilled spirits, and every person who without rectifying, purifying, or refining distilled spirits, shall, by mixing such spirits, wine, or other liquor with any materials, manufacture any spurious imitation, or compound liquors for sale under the name of whiskey, brandy, gin, rum, wine spirits, cordials, or wine bitters, or any other name, shall be regarded as a rectifier, and that being engaged in the business of rectifying, etc.

PAR. 3. Upon the premises of respondent's place of business aforesaid there is a still for use in the production of gins by a process of rectification whereby alcohol, purchased but not produced by respondent, is redistilled over juniper berries and other aromatics. Respondent also produces certain of its cordials and brandies by a similar process of redistillation. Such rectification of alcoholic spirits does not make or constitute respondent a distillery or a distiller, as defined by Section 3247 of the Revised Statutes regulating Internal Revenue, nor as commonly understood by the public and the liquor industry.

For a long period of time the word "distilling" when used in connection with the liquor industry and with the products thereof has had and still has a definite significance and meaning to the minds of wholesalers and retailers in such industry and to the ultimate purchasing public, to wit, the manufacturing of spirituous liquors by an original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash, through continuous closed pipes and vessels until the manufacture thereof is complete, and a substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy spirituous liquors bottled and prepared by distillers.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid by the use of the word "Distilling" in its corporate name, printed on its stationery, catalogs, and on the labels attached to the bottles in which it sells and ships its said products, and in various other ways, respondent represents to its customers and furnishes them with the means of representing to their vendees, both retailers and the ultimate consuming public, that it is a distiller and that the said whiskies, gins, cordials, brandies, and other alcoholic beverages therein contained were by it manufactured through the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash, when, as a matter of fact, respondent is not a distiller, does not distill the said whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages by it so bottled, labeled, sold and transported, and merely by the use of a still operated by it as aforesaid in the production of gin and some of its cordials and brandies, does not distill the whiskies, gins and other spirituous beverages by it so bottled, labeled, sold, and transported in the sense in which the word "distilled" is commonly accepted and understood by those engaged in the liquor trade and the public. Respondent does not own, operate, or control any place or places where spirituous beverages are manufactured by a process of original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash.

PAR. 5. There are among the competitors of respondent engaged in the sale of spirituous beverages as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals who manufacture and distill from mash, wort or wash, whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages sold by them and who truthfully use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distillers," or "distilling" as a part of their corporate or trade names and on their stationery, catalogs and on the labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship such products. There are also among such competitors corporations, firms, partnerships and individuals engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, bottling, and selling whiskies, gins, cordials, brandies, and other alcoholic beverages who do not use the words "distillery,"

Conclusion

24 F. T. C.

“distilleries,” “distilling,” or “distillers” as a part of their corporate or trade names, nor on their stationery, catalogs, advertising, nor on the labels attached to the bottles in which they sell and ship their said products.

PAR. 6. The representations by respondent, as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, are calculated to and have a capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive dealers and the purchasing public into the beliefs that respondent is a distiller and that the whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages sold by respondent are manufactured or distilled by it from mash, wort or wash by one continuous process and are calculated to and have the capacity and tendency to and do induce dealers and the purchasing public, acting in such beliefs, to purchase the whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages rectified and bottled by the respondent. The Commission finds that the whole situation in this industry is such that the foregoing representations have a distinct tendency to give respondent what amounts to unfair competitive advantage over those of its competitors who do not, by the use of such terms in their trade or corporate names, represent that the package of alcoholic liquor offered to the retailer and in turn to the consumer, is a distillery bottled package and this in turn tends to divert trade to respondent from such competitors and thereby respondent does substantial injury to competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 7. Because of existing regulations promulgated under the Federal Alcohol Administration Act approved August 29, 1935, (49 Stat. 977), providing that rectifiers who redistill purchased alcohol over juniper berries and other aromatics may label such resulting product “Distilled Gin,” and requiring that the labels state who distilled it, the Commission has excepted gins produced by respondent by redistillation of alcohol over juniper berries and other aromatics from the prohibitions of its order.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent Hirsch Distilling Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled “An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes.”

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the complaint of the Commission and the answer filed herein on April 19, 1937 by respondent admitting all the material allegations of the complaint to be true and waiving the taking of further evidence and all other intervening procedure, and the Commission having made its findings as to the facts and its conclusion that said respondent has violated the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

It is ordered, That the respondent, Hirsch Distilling Company, a corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale or sale and distribution by it in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia of whiskies, gins, or other spirituous beverages (except gins produced by it through a process of rectification whereby alcohol purchased but not produced by respondent is redistilled over juniper berries and other aromatics) do cease and desist from:

Representing, through the use of the word "Distilling" in its corporate name, on its stationery, advertising or on the labels attached to the bottles in which it sells and ships said products, or in any other way by word or words of like import, (a) that it is a distiller of whiskies, gins or other spirituous beverages; or (b) that the said whiskies, gins, or other spirituous beverages were by it manufactured through the process of distillation; or (c) that it owns, operates, or controls a place or places where any such products are by it manufactured by a process of original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash, through continuous closed pipes and vessels until the manufacture thereof is completed, unless and until respondent shall actually own, operate, or control such a place or places.

It is further ordered, That the said respondent within 60 days from and after the date of the service upon it of this order, shall file with the Commission a report or reports in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it is complying and has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

IN THE MATTER OF
KNIGHT ELECTRIC COMPANY, INC., ET AL.

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2656. Complaint, Sept. 1, 1936¹—Decision, May 20, 1937

Where the names, letters and symbols "Marconi," "Victor," "R. C. A.," "Edison," "Bell" and representation of a bell, "Majestic," "Brunswick," and the letters "G. E." in a circle with scroll-like interior decorations, as names and designations of well-known and long-established individuals, companies, and corporations, and long used and extensively advertised by the various owners thereof, had come to be known and identified with the radio sets, radio parts, and like products of said owners, and constituted their standard brands and symbols when used as company, corporate, and trade names, and, as well-known marks and brands on such products thus identified, had a fixed and stable value in the trade and industry generally, throughout the United States and foreign countries, upon which well-known brands, etc., purchasing public relied when thus used on radio sets, etc., and in said industries, as indicating high standard, reliable and genuine products, and use of such names, letters and symbols influenced purchase thereof and increased sales, and said names, letters and symbols, thus attached, had value to the thousands of dealers engaged in the sale and distribution of such standard brand products, and were valuable to the owners thereof, who had used, and used and employed, the same in commerce; and thereafter—

- (1) Two corporations and three individuals, officers and agents thereof, engaged in the manufacture of escutcheons and name plates upon which they etched or stamped names, marks, brands, and symbols for use on radio sets and radio parts, and in sale thereof to manufacturers and dealers in such products, (2) five corporations and five individuals, officers and agents of said corporations, engaged in manufacture, assembly, and sale of radio sets upon which they placed and caused to be placed escutcheons and name plates purchased from the hereinabove described manufacturers and sellers thereof, and (3) four corporations and two individuals engaged in sale and distribution of such products purchased from the hereinbefore described concerns and individuals and upon which there were affixed, as above set forth, escutcheons and name plates with names, marks, brands, and symbols etched or stamped thereon to designate the names, etc., of the makers and brand names of the said products; in furtherance of a scheme engaged in by such various manufacturers and dealers to deceive the public and compete unfairly with other manufacturers and dealers in such sets and parts and escutcheons and name plates, through affixing of such articles, bearing names, marks, brands, and symbols of corporations and individuals well known and long established in the radio and similar industries, and without the authority or consent of the legal owners and users of such various names, etc., respectively, and as the case might be—
- (a) Sold, distributed, and furnished name plates and escutcheons for radio sets and similar products bearing names, letters, and symbols "Marconi,"

"Edison," "Bell," "Victor," "Majestic," "Brunswick," "R. C. A.," and "G. E." and colorable imitations or simulations thereof, to manufacturers and assemblers of and dealers in such products as hereinbefore described, and without consent of the lawful owners or licensees of such various names, etc.; and

- (b) Represented, through use of such names, marks, letters, or symbols, and such colorable simulations and imitations thereof as "Marconi-International," "Marconi Radio Corporation," "Edison-International," "Edison-Bell," with representation of a bell, "Edison Radio Stores, Inc.," "Victor International," "Majestic International," "Brunswick," letters "R. C. I.," "R. S. A.," and "E. B.," and without the permission of the lawful owners thereof, that the radio sets, parts and like devices, appliances or products made or assembled for or by, and sold by, said various corporate and individual manufacturers of and dealers in such parts, etc., were made, assembled, sponsored, endorsed and approved, or licensed by Thomas A. Edison, or Thomas A. Edison, Inc., American Telephone & Telegraph Co., Western Electric Co., Marconi Wireless Telegraph Corporation of America, Radio Corporation of America, Victor Talking Machine Company, Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., Brunswick Radio Corporation, Grisby Grunow Company, Majestic Radio & Television Corporation, or General Electric Company, or by the agents, representatives, successors, or assigns of such various individuals and concerns:

With result that public was led to believe that products thus sold and marked and identified were those of the said well known respective companies or interests hereinabove set forth, and there was an appropriation by said manufacturers of escutcheons and name plates, and manufacturers and assemblers of and dealers in sets and parts as hereinbefore set forth, of the good will of the respective competitor companies and interests hereinbefore referred to, and an unfair diversion of business from such competitor companies to such name plate manufacturers, etc., and also such unfair diversion of business from other competitors who do not resort to such practice, and with the result, by reason of such wholly unauthorized use of names, brands, etc., of giving to the goods of aforesaid manufacturers, assemblers, and dealers a salability which they would not otherwise have, and of giving to such manufacturers, etc., an advantage over their competitors who do not similarly misrepresent the true origin of their goods and conceal the same under a reputable but false source, and of deceiving the public buying products of said manufacturers, etc., into the false belief that such products originated with well known and reputable concerns, and with the further result of placing in the hands of others, to whom said products thus marked were sold, means whereby injury might be and was done to competitors dealing in the genuine, honestly marked goods:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. Carrel F. Rhodes for the Commission.

AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Knight Electric Company, Inc., Temple Electric Corporation, Acme Radio Corporation, Pirate Radio Corporation, Gillet Radio Corporation, Radio Products Corporation, Franklin Sales and Distributing Company, Inc., and Eric Houser, individually, and as president, director, and agent of said several companies, and David I. Morrison, A. M. Frank, Leon C. Sacks, Charles Johannes, Morris A. Weiner, Otto Dreher, Charles Dreher, Ruth Wasserman, J. R. Rosenberg, and S. Buchman, individually, and as officers, directors, and agents of said companies; Harvard Radio Tube Testing Stations of Pennsylvania, Inc., and Julius M. Schoenberg, individually, and as president, director, and agent of said company; Ross Distributing Company, and Larry B. Ross, individually, and as president, director, and agent of said company; Sun Radio and Service Supply Corporation, and Emanuel Rosensweig, individually, and as president, director, and agent of said company; Schiller Brothers, Incorporated, and Louis S. Schiller, individually, and as president, director, and agent of said company; F. C. Scruggs, individually, and trading under the name Call Radio Company; Peter Robbins, individually, and trading under the names Robbins Radio Company and Ambassador Radio Company; Metal Etching Corporation, and M. Herman, individually, and as president, director, and agent of said company; Etched Products Corporation, and Albert Nierenberg and Walter H. Miller, individually, and as officers, directors, and agents of said company; Electro Chemical and Engraving Company, and F. E. Switzer, N. L. Jacobus, Robert Schlesinger, Julius Erdoes, L. S. Complaint as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its amended and supplemental complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. (A) Respondents Knight Electric Company, Inc., Temple Electric Corporation, Acme Radio Corporation, Pirate Radio Corporation, Gillet Radio Corporation, Radio Products Corporation, and Franklin Sales and Distributing Company, Inc. are corporations organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with their principal place of business at 16 Hudson Street in the city of New York in said State. The officers, directors, and agents of said companies who have participated in the practices herein alleged during all or part of the times here involved, are the following: Eric Houser president, director and agent of said several companies, and David I. Morrison, A. M. Frank, Leon C. Sacks, Charles Johannes, Morris A. Weiner, Otto Dreher, Charles Dreher, Ruth Wasserman, J. R. Rosenberg, and S. Buchman.

The said respondent corporations and the said respondent individuals individually, and as officers, directors, and agents of said corporations are, and have been for more than six years last past, engaged in manufacturing, assembling, and selling radio sets, radio tubes, and like products. The business carried on by said respondent corporations and said respondent individuals is essentially a single business, namely that of manufacturing and assembling radio sets, radio tubes, and like products and selling said products to dealers and the purchasing public, the profits from which enure to said individuals. Said respondents manufacture, sell, and ship said radio sets, radio tubes, and like products to dealers and buyers among the purchasing public throughout the United States, and in the District of Columbia, and foreign countries in interstate and foreign commerce.

Other individuals, partnerships, and corporations who have been, and now are, involved in the subject matter of this complaint, are the following:

(B) Respondent Harvard Radio Tube Testing Stations of Pennsylvania, Inc., a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, domiciled and doing business at 208 North Broad Street in the city of Philadelphia in said State, and respondent Julius M. Schoenberg an individual, individually and as president, director, and agent of said company.

(C) Respondent Ross Distributing Company, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, domiciled and doing business at 2020 Chancellor Street in the city of Philadelphia in said State, and respondent Larry B. Ross an individual, individually and as president, director, and agent of said company.

(D) Respondent Sun Radio and Service Supply Corporation, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the District of Columbia, domiciled and doing business at 938 F Street, N. W. in the city of Washington in said District of Columbia, and respondent Emanuel Rosensweig an individual, individually and as president, director, and agent of said company.

(E) Respondent Schiller Brothers, Inc., a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the District of Columbia, domiciled and doing business at 922 F Street, N. W. in the city of Washington in said District of Columbia, and respondent Louis S. Schiller an individual, individually and as president, director, and agent of said company.

(F) Respondent Peter Robbins an individual, individually and trading under the names Robbins Radio Company and Ambassador Radio Company, domiciled and doing business at 940 F. Street, N. W. in the city of Washington in said District of Columbia.

(G) Respondent F. C. Scruggs an individual, individually and trading under the name Call Radio Company by virtue of the laws of the District of Columbia, domiciled and doing business at 636 H Street, N. E. in the city of Washington in said District of Columbia.

(H) Respondent Metal Etching Corporation, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, domiciled and doing business at 1001 Essex Street in the city of Brooklyn in said State, and respondent M. Hermann an individual, individually and as president, director, and agent of said company.

(I) Respondent Etched Products Corporation, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, domiciled and doing business at 3901 Queens Boulevard in Long Island City in said State, and respondents Albert Nierenberg, and Walter H. Miller individuals, individually and as officers, directors, and agents of said company.

(J) Respondent Electro Chemical and Engraving Company, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York with its principal office and place of business at 1100 Brook Avenue, in the Borough of the Bronx, city of New York in said State, and respondents F. E. Switzer, B. L. Jacobus, Robert Schlesinger, Julius Erdoes, and L. S. Southwick individuals, individually and as officers, directors, and agents of said company.

(K) Respondent Premier Metal Etching Company, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York, domiciled and doing business at 2103 44th Avenue in the city of Long Island in said State, and respondents Herbert Pape, Carl J. Johnson, Ernest A. Rottach, and Hugo Lehrfeld individuals, individually and as officers, directors, and agents of said company.

(L) Respondent Crowe Nameplate and Manufacturing Company, a corporation organized under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois, domiciled and doing business at 1749 Grace Street in the city of Chicago in said State, and respondents E. C. Coolidge and I. Robinson Smith individuals, individually and as officers, directors, and agents of said company.

Said respondents hereinabove described under sub-paragraphs (B) (C) (D) (E) (F) and (G) of paragraph 1 are dealers in radio receiving sets, radio tubes and like products. Said respondents during the course and conduct of their business sell and ship said radio sets, radio tubes and like products to the purchasing public in interstate and foreign commerce from their several places of business in Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia through and into other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia, and foreign countries in interstate and foreign commerce.

Said respondents hereinabove described under sub-paragraphs (H) (I) (J) (K) and (L) of paragraph 1 in the course and conduct of their business manufacture and sell nameplates and escutcheons for use and used upon radio sets to describe or designate the makers or brand names of said products. Said respondents during the course and conduct of their said several businesses, have and do manufacture for sale and sell and ship to respondent Knight Electric Company, Inc., and the several other respondent corporations, associations, partnerships, and individuals designated in paragraph 1 (A) (B) (C) (D) (E) (F) and (G) escutcheons and nameplates to be used and used and sold by said respondents to dealers and others to be used on and in connection with radio sets, radio tubes and like products as marks or brands to designate the names of the makers and brand names used by makers of said products.

PAR. 2. Respondent Knight Electric Company, Inc., and all of the several respondent corporations, associations, partnerships, and individuals described in paragraph 1 (A) (B) (C) (D) (E) (F) and (G) are now and have been for several years last past engaged in manufacturing, assembling, selling, marketing, and distributing radio sets, radio tubes, and like products, and in the course and conduct of their said several businesses respondents have caused and now cause said radio sets, radio tubes, and like products when sold to be transported by them from their several respective places of business into and through the various States of the United States, the District of Columbia, and in foreign commerce to the purchasers thereof in such other States, in the District of Columbia, and foreign countries in substantial competition with other corporations, partnerships, and persons engaged in the sale and transportation of radio sets, radio tubes, and like products in interstate and foreign commerce.

PAR. 3. For the purpose of selling said radio sets, radio tubes, and like products and to induce the public to buy said products, respondent Knight Electric Company, Inc., and the several other respondent corporations, associations, partnerships, and individuals set out and described in paragraph 1 (A) (B) (C) (D) (E) (F) (G) (H) (I) (J) (K) and (L) cooperating among themselves and together with one another, have been for several years last past and are now, engaged in a scheme to deceive the public and to compete unfairly with other manufacturers and dealers in radio sets, radio tubes, and like products who are in competition with respondents in interstate and foreign commerce. In furtherance of said scheme respondents have adopted, made, used, and sold and now make, use, and sell to dealers, distributors, and others to be used on radio sets, radio tubes, and like products, escutcheons or nameplates bearing the names, brands, marks, and symbols of corporations and individuals well-known and long established in the radio and like industries, which names, marks, brands, and symbols were adopted and used and are now being used by respondents and others without authority or consent from the legal owners and users of said names, marks, brands, and symbols.

Among the names, marks, brands, and symbols so made, adopted, and used by respondents are the following: Marconi, Marconi International, Marconi Radio Corporation; Edison, Edison International, Edison-Bell, Edison with a representation of a bell, Edison Radio Stores, Inc.; Bell, Bell with a representation of a bell; Victor, Victor International; Majestic, Majestic International, Majestic Radio Corporation; Brunswick (Bronswick, a colorable imitation of the name Brunswick); RCA (RCI, RSA, colorable imitations of the letters RCA); the letters EB (a colorable imitation of the letters GE) standing alone or stamped upon the representation of a bell, and the names Marconi, Edison, Bell, Victor, Majestic, Brunswick or Bronswick standing alone or in conjunction with other words, names and devices.

Said respondents, set out and described in paragraph 1 (H) (I) (J) (K) and (L), without authority or consent of the legal owners of the names, marks, brands, and symbols use, advertise, sell, and ship said nameplates and escutcheons so marked and stamped with said well-known and long established names, marks, brands and symbols as hereinabove set out, and said respondents, set out and described in paragraph 1 (B) (C) (D) (E) (F) and (G), advertise said nameplates and escutcheons, and radio sets and like products upon which said nameplates and escutcheons so marked, stamped, and branded with said well-known and long established names, marks, brands, and symbols of others as hereinabove set out, without the authority or consent of the owners thereof, in catalogues, newspapers, and other periodicals circulated in interstate and foreign commerce, and sell and ship said nameplates and escutcheons, radio sets and like products from their respective places of business to purchasers thereof, located in States other than the State of origin of said shipments and in the District of Columbia and foreign countries in interstate and foreign commerce. All of which said acts and things are committed and done in pursuance and as a part of the scheme entered into, agreed upon and participated in by Knight Electric Company, Inc., its officers, directors, and agents and each and all of the respondents hereinabove designated in paragraph 1 (A) (B) (C) (D) (E) (F) (G) (H) (I) (J) (K) and (L).

PAR. 4. The use by respondents of the names, marks, brands, symbols, and devices as set out in paragraph 3 is wholly unauthorized by the owners of said names, marks, brands, symbols, and devices and gives to respondent's goods a salability which they would not otherwise have, and gives to said respondents an advantage over their competitors who do not similarly misrepresent the true origin of their goods and conceal the same under a reputable but false origin as do respondents. The said appropriation and use by said respondents of the reputation and good-will of others at the expense of and injury to such others who have created such reputation and good-will has the capacity and tendency to deceive, and deceives the public purchasing said products into believing that respondents' products originate with well-known and reputable concerns contrary to the fact. Thereby substantial injury is done by respondents to competitors and substantial competition in interstate and foreign commerce.

PAR. 5. (A) The name "Marconi" refers to and is generally recognized as the name of Guglielmo Marconi, the engineer and electrician who first perfected the appliances used in space telegraphy or radiography and the application of electric waves to actual telegraphy and the inventor of various electrical and radio devices among which is the celebrated "Fleming Tube," a tube used in radio sets. Marconi the celebrated "Fleming Tube," a tube used in radio sets. Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America, a corporation organized in 1899 under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, acquired from said Guglielmo Marconi the exclusive right to the use and exploitation of all of the said Guglielmo Marconi patents and inventions, including the use of the name "Marconi" in and throughout the United States and its territories and possessions. In 1919 the said Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America sold, transferred and assigned to Radio Corporation of America all of its right, title, and interest in and to said "Marconi" patents and inventions, including the right to the use of the name "Marconi" in connection therewith, and has been used and extensively advertised by, and is the rightful property of Radio Corporation of America and its subsidiaries.

(B) For many years last past the Victor Talking Machine Company, Camden, N. J. has been manufacturing and selling phonographs and phonograph records, which phonographs have acquired a wide and favorable reputation and have been in great demand by the trade and purchasing public. During all this period the phonographs, phonograph records and other articles manufactured and sold by said company have featured the name "Victor" as part of their trade name, which said name has been attached in a prominent place to said machines, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce.

In 1929 the Radio Corporation of America obtained control of said Victor Talking Machine Company and organized a company under the corporate name "RCA-Victor Co.," and also organized a company under the name of "The RCA Manufacturing Co., Inc.," which company is engaged in the manufacture and sale of radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets. All of said sets bear the name "Victor," either alone or in combination with other letters or words in a prominent place on said sets. Said radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets are sold to the purchasing public by retail dealers throughout the United States. During the past twenty-five years the Victor Talking Machine Company has spent approximately $70,000,000 in advertising, and the word "Victor" has always prominently appeared in said advertising. At the present time RCA-Victor Company is advertising its radio sets and radio tubes in a number of magazines having a large national circulation and in other publications and newspapers.

The name "Victor" when used on radio sets and radio tubes and like products is the rightful property of the RCA-Victor Co. and the Victor Division of the RCA Manufacturing Company.

The said initials "RCA" have long been used as marks or brands to designate radio sets and radio tubes and other merchandise manufactured, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce by said RCA-Victor Co., the Victor Division of The RCA Manufacturing Co. and the Radio Corporation of America. Neither said Guglielmo Marconi nor Radio Corporation of America or any of its subsidiaries have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name Marconi or the name Victor or the letters RCA (or RSA and RCI colorable imitations of the letters RCA) in any manner.

1310

PAR. 6. For more than thirty years prior to his death on October 18, 1931, Thomas A. Edison had been known and recognized throughout the various States of the United States and foreign countries as the inventor, patentee, owner and manufacturer of numerous electrical devices of various kinds and descriptions and of machines for the reproduction of the human voice, which have acquired a wide and favorable reputation and are in great demand by the trade and purchasing public who desire Edison products. Among the machines for the reproduction of the human voice manufactured by companies which the said Thomas A. Edison organized and controlled, are phonographs, dictaphones and transmitting machines, radios, combination radios and phonographs and many other articles of various kinds and character such as storage batteries, spark plugs, ignition coils and household electrical appliances. Many of the machines and articles above referred to bear the name "Edison" as part of their brand, and such name "Edison" has acquired a valuable good-will as identifying the manufacturer of said machines or articles.

Among the companies organized and controlled by the said Thomas A. Edison before his death is Thomas A. Edison, Inc., which said company is still engaged in the manufacture of the machines and articles invented and developed by Thomas A. Edison. Thomas A. Edison, Inc., during the years 1926-1930 inclusive, manufactured and sold radio sets valued at many millions of dollars, and during the said period spent several millions of dollars in advertising its said radio products. All the radio sets manufactured and sold by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., feature the name "Edison" as part of their brand name.

The name "Edison" refers to Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor in the electrical field and the pioneer in the talking machine and radio industry, the right to the use of which name was vested in Thomas A. Edison, Inc., by Thomas A. Edison and was extensively advertised and has long previously been used and continues to be used by Thomas A. Edison, Inc. on radio sets, phonographs and other electrical devices and appliances, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce. Neither Thomas A. Edison or the said Thomas A. Edison, Inc. have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name "Edison" in any manner.

PAR. 7. The name "Bell" and the representation of a bell, when used in connection with sound reproduction and sound transmission in the electrical and radio field refers to the great inventor Alexander Graham Bell and is the property of the said Alexander Graham Bell and his successors and assigns. The common law title to the name "Bell" is vested, by long and continued use since 1886, in the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, its subsidiaries and associates, and the Western Electric Company, Inc. Western Electric Company, Inc. manufactures, sells, extensively advertises and ships radio sets, radio tubes and radio batteries in interstate and foreign commerce, and uses the name "Blue Bell" and the representation of a bell as a brand name to designate its said products. The representation of a bell has long been used and extensively advertised by the American Telephone & Telegraph Company as a symbol or trade designation in its business. Neither the said Alexander Graham Bell nor the American Telephone & Telegraph Company and its subsidiaries nor Western Electric Company, Inc. have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name "Bell" in any manner.

PAR. 8. The name "Majestic" is a name long associated with radio sets and is the legal property of Grigsby-Grunow Company who are the original makers of radio sets branded with the name "Majestic," which were extensively advertised, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce by the said Grigsby-Grunow Company. Said name "Majestic" is now vested in Majestic Radio and Television Corporation of Illinois, which now manufactures, sells and ships in interstate and foreign commerce radio sets, radio tubes and like products branded or marked with the name Majestic. Neither Grigsby-Grunow Company, its successors or assigns nor Majestic Radio and Television Corporation of Illinois have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name "Majestic" in any manner.

PAR. 9. During many years last past the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. has been a large manufacturer of billiard and pocket billiard tables, bowling alleys and various other articles, and its products have acquired a wide and favorable reputation and have been in great demand by the trade and purchasing public for many years last past. During all this period the products manufactured and sold by said company have featured the name "Brunswick" as part of their brand name, which said name has been attached in a prominent place to said products. In 1915 the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. began the manufacture and sale of phonographs and phonograph records, and some time later began the manufacture and sale of radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets, on all of which articles the name "Brunswick" was featured in a prominent place on said products. In 1930 the radio and phonograph division of said Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. was sold to Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., which company organized the corporation under the corporate name Brunswick Radio Corporation to operate the business. Said latter company obtained the exclusive right to use the name "Brunswick" in connection with said radio sets, phonographs and combination radio and phonograph sets.

Until January 1, 1933, Brunswick Radio Corporation continued the manufacture and sale of radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets, on all of which sets the name "Brunswick" has been prominently featured. Since January 1, 1933, the manufacture of radio sets by Brunswick Radio Corporation has been suspended, but said Brunswick Radio Corporation still owns the manufacturing plants in which said sets were manufactured and may resume such manufacture at some time in the future. The radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets manufactured by Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. and Brunswick Radio Corporation were sold to the purchasing public by retail dealers throughout the United States and in foreign countries. During all the time the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Corporation and the Brunswick Radio Corporation were manufacturing and selling radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets said companies expended large sums of money in advertising said sets, and the name "Brunswick" has at all times been prominently displayed in said advertising.

"Bronswick," the name used by respondents is a colorable imitation of the name "Brunswick" which has long been used by the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. and the Brunswick Radio Corporation on radio sets, phonographs and combination radio and phonograph sets. Neither Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc. or Brunswick Radio Corporation have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name Brunswick (or Bronswick a colorable imitation thereof) in any manner.

PAR. 10. A device of a circle with scroll-like interior projections enclosing the script letters "GE" is the property of General Electric Company and has long been used and extensively advertised by said General Electric Company as a mark or brand to designate the products manufactured, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce by said General Electric Company. The device used by respondents of a circle with scroll-like interior projections enclosing the script letters "EB" is a colorable imitation of this well-known device. Neither Thomas A. Edison, Thomas Edison Inc., Alexander Graham Bell, American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Western Electric Company, nor said General Electric Company or any of its subsidiaries have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the letters "EB" in any manner.

PAR. 11. The offering for sale and sale and shipment by respondents in interstate and foreign commerce, as set out in paragraphs 1, 2, 3, and 4 hereof, to dealers in radio sets, radio tubes and like products of escutcheons or name-plates stamped or branded with the well-known names, marks, brands and symbols of others without their consent, and the offering for sale and sale and shipment in interstate and foreign commerce by respondents of radio sets, radio tubes and like products branded or marked with the names, marks, brands and symbols of others without authority or consent of the owners thereof, places in the hands of dealers and others the means whereby injury might be done and is done to competitors and the purchasing public, and all of the acts and things alleged and done by respondents are each and all of them to the injury and prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate and foreign commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled, "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on the 1st day of September 1936, issued and served its amended and supplemental complaint, hereinafter known as the complaint, in this proceeding, upon the following named corporations and individuals:

Respondents, Knight Electric Company, Inc., Temple Electric Corporation, Acme Radio Corporation, Pirate Radio Corporation, Gillet Radio Corporation, Eric Houser, David I. Morrison, A. M. Frank, Leon C. Sacks, Charles Johannes, Morris A. Weiner, Arthur Dreher, Charles Dreher, Ruth Wasserman, J. R. Rosenberg, Harvard Radio Tube Testing Stations of Pa., Inc., Julius M. Schoenberg, Ross Distributing Company, Larry B. Ross, Sun Radio and Service Supply Corporation, Emanuel Rosensweig, Schiller Brothers, Inc., Louis S. Schiller, F. C. Scruggs, individually, and trading under the name Call Radio Company, Peter Robbins, individually, and trading under the names Robbins Radio Company and Ambassador Radio Company, Metal Etching Corporation, M. Hermann, Etched Products Corporation, Albert Nierenberg, Walter H. Miller, Electro Chemical Engraving Company, F. E. Switzer, N. L. Jacobus, Robert Schlesinger, Julius Erdoes, L. S. pany, Herbert Pape, Karl D. Johnson, Ernest A. Rottach, Hugo Lehrfeld, Crowe Nameplate and Manufacturing Company, E. C. Coolidge, and I. Robinson Smith.

Respondents, Radio Products Corporation, Franklin Sales and Distributing Company, Inc., and S. Buchman could not be located and were not served with the complaint.

Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and the answers thereto, and the Commission, having duly considered the matter, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the public interest, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondents, Etched Products Corporation, Albert Nierenberg, Walter H. Miller, Electro Chemical Engraving Company (named in the complaint Electro Chemical and Engraving Company), F. E. Switzer, N. L. Jacobus, Robert Schlesinger, Julius Erdoes, L. S. Southwick, Premier Metal Etching Company, Herbert Pape, Karl D. (named in the complaint Carl J.) Johnson, Ernest Rottach, and Hugo Lehrfeld filed answers in which they deny all the material allegations of the complaint;

Respondents, Leon C. Sacks, Charles Johannes, Morris A. Weiner and J. R. Rosenberg filed an affidavit signed by Sylvia Zondel, secretary to Fred Rosenberg, the attorney who drew up the incorporation papers of certain corporations, in which it is averred that said respondents' names "have been used only as dummies for the purpose of execution" certificates of incorporation. That said respondents "have never been interested in the control, management, operation and conduct of any one of said corporations," namely, "Knight Electric Company, Inc.," "Temple Electric Inc.," "Acme Radio Corporation," "Pirate Electric Corporation," "Gillet Radio Corporation," and "Franklin Sales Distributing Corporation," and that said respondents "had no financial interest whatsoever in any of said corporations."

It appears that said respondents did not participate in the acts and practices charged in the complaint, and the complaint should be dismissed as to said respondents.

PAR. 2. Respondent, Metal Etching Corporation is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, domiciled and doing business at 1001 Essex Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., and respondent, M. Hermann was and is an officer and agent of said corporation.

Respondent, Crowe Nameplate and Manufacturing Company is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Illinois, domiciled and doing business at 1749 Grace Street, Chicago, Ill., and respondents, E. C. Coolidge and I. Robinson Smith are officers and agents of said corporation.

Respondents herein named are now, and have been for several years last past, engaged in the manufacture and sale of escutcheons and name plates—upon which said products they have attached or stamped names, marks, brands, letters, and symbols—for use as marks and brands on radio sets and radio parts to designate the names, marks, brands, letters, and symbols of the makers, and brand names of said radio sets and radio parts. They have sold and shipped, and now sell and ship, said products to manufacturers and dealers in radio sets and radio parts, including the respondents named in paragraphs 3 and 4 hereof. They have caused, and now cause, said escutcheons and names plates so marked and branded when sold to be transported from their respective places of business in the States of New York and Illinois to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in States of the United States other than the State of origin of the shipment, and in the District of Columbia, and foreign countries.

PAR. 3. Respondents, Knight Electric Company, Inc., Temple Electric Corporation, Acme Radio Corporation, Pirate Radio Corporation and Gillet Radio Corporation are corporations organized under the laws of the State of New York, domiciled and doing business at 16 Hudson Street, New York City, N. Y., and respondents, Eric Houser, David I Morrison, A. M. Frank, Arthur Dreher, Charles Dreher, and Ruth Wasserman were and are officers, agents, and representatives of said respondent corporations.

Respondents, Eric Houser, David I. Morrison, and A. M. Frank conducted business in an individual capacity as free agents, and also as agents and representatives of said respondents, Knight Electric Company, Inc., Temple Electric Corporation, Acme Radio Corporation, Pirate Radio Corporation, and Gillet Radio Corporation, with their principal places of business at 16 Hudson Street, New York City, N. Y.

The respondents herein named have been for several years last past, and are now engaged in the manufacture, assembly, and sale of radio sets and radio parts, upon which said products they placed and caused to be placed escutcheons and name plates—purchased from respondents set out and described in paragraph 2—with names, letters, marks, brands, and symbols etched or stamped thereon to designate the makers and brand names of said radio sets and radio parts.

Findings

Said respondents sell and ship said products to the respondents named in paragraph 4 hereof and to other dealers and to the public, and have caused and now cause said radio parts and radio sets, and escutcheons and name plates so marked and branded, when sold, to be transported from their respective places of business in the State of New York to purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in States of the United States other than the State of origin of the shipment, and in the District of Columbia, and foreign countries.

PAR. 4. Respondent, Harvard Radio Tube Testing Stations of Pennsylvania, Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, domiciled and doing business at 208 N. Broad Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and respondent Julius M. Schoenberg is an officer, representative, and agent of said corporation.

Respondent, Ross Distributing Company, is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal place of business at 2020 Chancellor Street, in the city of Philadelphia, Pa., and respondent Larry B. Ross is an officer, agent, and representative of said corporation.

Respondent, Sun Radio and Service Supply Corporation, is a corporation organized under the laws of the District of Columbia, domiciled and doing business at 938 F Street N. W., Washington, D. C., and respondent, Emanuel Rosensweig, is an officer, agent, and representative of said corporation.

Respondent, Schiller Brothers, Inc., is a corporation organized under the laws of the District of Columbia, domiciled and doing business at 922 F Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., and respondent, Louis S. Schiller is an officer, agent, and representative of said corporation.

Respondent, Peter Robbins, is an individual trading under the names Robbins Radio Company and Ambassador Radio Company, domiciled and doing business at 940 F Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Respondent, F. C. Scruggs, is an individual trading under the name Call Radio Company, domiciled and doing business at 636 H Street, N. E., Washington, D. C.

The respondents herein named have been for several years last past, and are now, engaged in the sale and distribution of radio sets and radio parts, upon which said products there are affixed escutcheons and name plates with names, marks, brands, and symbols etched or stamped thereon to designate the names, marks, brands, and symbols of the makers and brand names of said products. Said radio sets and radio parts so offered for sale and sold with said escutcheons and name plates affixed thereto, were, and are, bought from the several respondents set out and described in paragraphs 2 and 3. Said products, so marked and branded, were, and are, sold by said respondents to the purchasing public, and, when sold, are transported from their several respective places of business in the city of Philadelphia, State of Pennsylvania, and the city of Washington, D. C. to purchasers thereof at their several points of location in States other than the State or point of origin and in the District of Columbia, and in foreign countries.

The respondents named herein in paragraphs 2, 3, and 4 all filed answers admitting the material allegations of the amended and supplemental complaint. The individuals named in paragraphs 2, 3, and 4 are officers and directors of the various corporations with which they are identified and participated in the control and direction of the activities of the respective corporations with which they are connected in performing the acts and practices hereinafter set forth.

PAR. 5. For the purpose of selling escutcheons and nameplates and of inducing manufacturers and dealers in radio sets, radio parts, and like products to buy said products, the several respondents set out and described in paragraph 2 have been for several years last past, and are now, engaged in a scheme to deceive the public and to compete unfairly with other manufacturers and dealers in escutcheons and nameplates and like products who are in competition with respondents in interstate and foreign commerce.

For the purpose of selling radio sets, radio parts, and like products and of inducing the public to buy said products, the several respondent corporations and the several respondent individuals, individually, and as officers, agents, and representatives of said respondent corporations, herein set out and described in paragraphs 2, 3, and 4, cooperating among themselves and together with one another, have been for several years last past, and are now, engaged in a scheme to deceive the public and to compete unfairly with other manufacturers and dealers in radio sets, radio parts, escutcheons, and nameplates, and like products, who are in competition with the said respondents in interstate and foreign commerce. In furtherance of said scheme, the said respondents have adopted, made, used, and sold, and now make, use, sell, and ship in interstate and foreign commerce to distributors, dealers, and others, escutcheons, and nameplates, and radio sets, radio parts and like products, upon which are attached, or to which are affixed, escutcheons and nameplates bearing the names, marks, brands, and symbols of corporations and individuals well known and long established in the radio and like industries, which names, marks, brands, and symbols were adopted and used and are now being used by said respondents and others without authority or consent from the legal owners and users of said names, marks, brands, and symbols.

Among the names, marks, brands, and symbols so made, adopted, and used by respondents are the following:

"Marconi" and also "Marconi-International," "Marconi Radio Corporation," which are found to be colorable imitations and simulations of said name "Marconi";

"Edison" and also "Edison-International," "Edison-Bell," "Edison" with the representation of a bell, "Edison Radio Stores, Inc.," which are found to be colorable imitations and simulations of said name "Edison";

"Bell," and the representation of a bell, which is found to be a simulation of the name "Bell";

"Victor" and also "Victor International," which is found to be a colorable imitation and simulation of said name "Victor";

"Majestic," and also "Majestic International," and "Majestic Radio Corporation," which are found to be colorable imitations and simulations of the said name "Majestic";

"Brunswick" and also "Bronswick," which is found to be a colorable imitation and simulation of the said name "Brunswick";

The letters "R. C. A." and also "R. C. I." and "R. S. A.," which are found to be colorable imitations and simulations of said letters "R. C. A.";

The letters "G. E.," either alone or in the circle with scroll-like interior decorations, and also the letters "E. B.," which are found to be a colorable imitation and simulation of said letters "G. E."; and

"Marconi," "Edison," "Bell," "Victor," "Majestic," "Brunswick," or "Bronswick," standing alone or in conjunction with other words, names and devices, or any other colorable imitations or simulations of said trade names, or any other trade names, marks or brands.

Said respondent corporations, and said respondent individuals, individually, and as officers, agents and representatives of said corporations, set out and described in paragraph 2, with respect to escutcheons and nameplates, and said respondent corporations, and said respondent individuals, individually, and as officers, agents, and representatives of said corporations, set out and described in paragraphs 3 and 4, with respect to escutcheons, nameplates, radio sets, radio parts and like products, marked and branded with the said well known and long established names, marks, brands, and symbols hereinabove set out and described, advertise said products in pamphlets, circulars, catalogues, newspapers, and other periodicals circulated in interstate and foreign commerce, and in the District of Columbia, and sell and ship said products so marked from their respective places of business to purchasers thereof located in the District of Columbia and in States other than the State or place of origin of said shipments, in interstate and foreign commerce and in the District of Columbia; without the authority or consent of the legal owners of said names, marks, brands, and symbols.

PAR. 6. (a) The name "Marconi" refers to and is generally recognized as the name of Guglielmo Marconi, the engineer and electrician who first perfected the appliances used in space telegraphy or radiography and the application of electric waves to actual telegraphy and the inventor of various electrical and radio devices among which is the celebrated "Fleming Tube," a tube used in radio sets. Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America, a corporation organized in 1899 under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, acquired from said Guglielmo Marconi the exclusive right to the use and exploitation of all the said Guglielmo Marconi patents and inventions, including the use of the name "Marconi" in and throughout the United States and its territories and possessions. In 1919 the said Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America sold, transferred, and assigned to Radio Corporation of America all of its right, title, and interest in and to said "Marconi" patents and inventions, including the right to the use of the name "Marconi" in connection therewith. Said name "Marconi" is now, and has been used and extensively advertised by, and is the rightful property of Radio Corporation of America and its subsidiaries.

(b) For many years last past the Victor Talking Machine Company, Camden, New Jersey, has been manufacturing and selling phonographs and phonograph records, which phonographs have acquired a wide and favorable reputation and have been in great demand by the trade and purchasing public. During all this period the phonographs, phonograph records and other articles manufactured and sold by said company have featured the name "Victor" as part of their trade name, which said name has been attached in a prominent place to said machines, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce.

In 1929 the Radio Corporation of America obtained control of said Victor Talking Machine Company and organized a company under the corporate name "RCA-Victor Co.," and also organized a company under the name of "The RCA Manufacturing Co., Inc.," which company is engaged in the manufacture and sale of radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets. All of said sets bear the name "Victor," either alone or in combination with other letters or words in a prominent place on said sets. Said radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets are sold to the purchasing public by retail dealers throughout the United States. During the past twenty-five years the Victor Talking Machine Company has spent approximately $70,000,000 in advertising, and the word "Victor" has always prominently appeared in said advertising. At the present time RCA-Victor Company is advertising its radio sets and radio tubes in a number of magazines having a large national circulation and in other publications and newspapers.

The name "Victor" when used on radio sets and radio tubes and like products is the rightful property of the RCA-Victor Company and the Victor Division of the RCA Manufacturing Company.

(c) The initials "RCA" have long been used as marks or brands to designate radio sets and radio tubes and other merchandise manufactured, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce by said RCA-Victor Company, the Victor Division of the RCA Manufacturing Company and the Radio Corporation of America. Neither said Guglielmo Marconi nor Radio Corporation of America or any of its subsidiaries have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name Marconi or the name Victor or the letters RCA (or RSA and RCI, colorable imitations of the letters RCA) in any manner.

(d) For more than thirty years prior to his death on October 16, 1931, Thomas A. Edison had been known and recognized throughout the various states of the United States and foreign countries as the inventor, patentee, owner, and manufacturer of numerous electrical devices of various kinds and descriptions and of machines for the reproduction of the human voice, which have acquired a wide and favorable reputation and are in great demand by the trade and purchasing public who desire Edison products. Among the machines for the reproduction of the human voice manufactured by companies which the said Thomas A. Edison organized and controlled, are phonographs, dictaphones, and transmitting machines, radios, combination radios and phonographs and many other articles of various kinds and character such as storage batteries, spark plugs, ignition coils and household electrical appliances. Many of the machines and articles above referred to bear the name "Edison" as part of their brand, and such name "Edison" has acquired a valuable good will as identifying the manufacture of said machines or articles.

Among the companies organized and controlled by the said Thomas A. Edison before his death is Thomas A. Edison, Inc., which said company is still engaged in the manufacture of the machines and articles invented and developed by Thomas A. Edison. Thomas A. Edison, Inc., during the years 1926-1930, inclusive, manufactured and sold radio sets valued at many millions of dollars, and during the said period spent several millions of dollars in advertising its said radio products. All the radio sets manufactured and sold by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., feature the name "Edison" as part of their brand name.

The name "Edison" refers to Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor in the electrical field and the pioneer in the talking machine and radio industry, the right to the use of which name was vested in Thomas A. Edison, Inc., by Thomas A. Edison and was extensively advertised and has long previously been used and is now used by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., on radio sets, phonographs and other electrical devices and appliances, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce. Neither Thomas A. Edison nor the said Thomas A. Edison, Inc., have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name "Edison" in any manner.

(e) The name "Bell" and the representation of a bell, when used in connection with sound reproduction and sound transmission in the electrical and radio field refers to the great inventor Alexander Graham Bell and is the property of the said Alexander Graham Bell and his successors and assigns. The common law title to the name "Bell" is vested, by long and continued use since 1886, in the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, its subsidiaries and associates, and the Western Electric Company, Inc. Western Electric Company, Inc., manufactures, sells, extensively advertises and ships radio sets, radio tubes and radio batteries in interstate and foreign commerce, and uses the name "Blue Bell" and the representation of a bell as the brand name to designate its said products. The representation of a bell has long been used and extensively advertised by the American Telephone & Telegraph Company as a symbol or trade designation in its business. Neither the said Alexander Graham Bell nor the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and its subsidiary Western Electric Company, Inc., have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name "Bell" in any manner.

(f) The name "Majestic" is a name long associated with radio sets and is the legal property of Grigsby-Grunow Company who are the original makers of radio sets branded with the name "Majestic", which were extensively advertised, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce by the said Grigsby-Grunow Company. Said name "Majestic" is now vested in Majestic Radio and Television Corporation of Illinois, which now manufactures, sells and ships in interstate and foreign commerce radio sets, radio tubes and like products branded or marked with the name Majestic. Neither Grigsby-Grunow Company, its successors or assigns nor Majestic Radio and Television Corporation of Illinois have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name "Majestic" in any manner.

(g) During many years last past the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company has been a large manufacturer of billiard and pocket billiard tables, bowling alleys and various other articles, and its products have acquired a wide and favorable reputation and have been in great demand by the trade and purchasing public for many years last past. During all this period the products manufactured and sold by said Company have featured the name "Brunswick" as part of their brand name, which said name has been attached in a prominent place to said products. In 1915 the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company began the manufacture and sale of phonographs and phonograph records, and some time later began the manufacture and sale of radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets, on all of which articles the name "Brunswick" was featured in a prominent place on said products. In 1930 the radio and phonograph division of said Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company was sold to Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., which company organized the corporation under the corporate name Brunswick Radio Corporation to operate the business. Said latter company obtained the exclusive right to use the name "Brunswick" in connection with said radio sets, phonographs, and combination radio and phonograph sets.

Until January 1, 1933, Brunswick Radio Corporation continued the manufacture and sale of radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets, on all of which sets the name "Brunswick" has been prominently featured. Since January 1, 1933, the manufacture of radio sets by Brunswick Radio Corporation has been suspended but said Brunswick Radio Corporation still owns the manufacturing plants in which said sets were manufactured and may resume such manufacture at some time in the future. The radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets manufactured by Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company and Brunswick Radio Corporation were sold to the purchasing public by retail dealers throughout the United States and in foreign countries. During all the time the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Corporation and the Brunswick Radio Corporation were manufacturing and selling radio sets and combination radio and phonograph sets said companies expended large sums of money in advertising said sets, and the name "Brunswick" has at all times been prominently displayed in said advertising.

"Bronswick", the name used by respondents, is a colorable imitation of the name "Brunswick" which has long been used by the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company and the Brunswick Radio Corporation on radio sets, phonographs and combination radio and phonograph sets. Neither Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., nor Brunswick Radio Corporation has ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the name Brunswick (or Bronswick, a colorable imitation thereof) in any manner.

(h) A device of a circle with scroll-like interior projections enclosing the script letters "G.E." is the property of General Electric Company and has long been used and extensively advertised by said General Electric Company as a mark or brand to designate the products manufactured, sold and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce by said General Electric Company. The device used by respondents of a circle with scroll-like interior projections enclosing the script letters "E.B." is a colorable imitation of this well known device. Neither Thomas A. Edison, Thomas A. Edison, Inc., Alexander Graham Bell, American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Western Electric Company, nor said General Electric Company or any of its subsidiaries have ever granted (or consented) to respondents the right to the use of the letters "E.B." or "G.E." in any manner.

Said names, letters and symbols are the names and designations of said well known and long established individuals, companies and corporations, and are standard brands and symbols when used as company, corporate and trade names, and as marks and brands on radio sets, radio parts, and like products, and said products so marked have a fixed and stable value in the trade and industry generally throughout the United States and foreign countries. The purchasing public relies upon said well known brands, marks, and symbols when used on radio sets, radio parts and like products, and in said industries as indicating high standard, reliable and genuine products. The use of such names, letters and symbols influences the purchase of said products and increases sales. The number of dealers in said products so marked, increase sales value. The said names, letters and symbols attached to said products have value to the thousands of dealers engaged in the sale and distribution of said standard brand products. The said names, letters and symbols are valuable to those persons, partnerships, and corporations owning them, and who have used and now use and employ them in commerce.

Because of the popularity of the names "Marconi", "Victor", "Bell", "Edison", "Brunswick", "Majestic", and the letters "G.E.", either standing alone or in a circle with scroll-like interior decorations, and the letters "R.C.A.", and the products bearing these names, letters, and symbols, manufactured and sold by the lawful owners thereof; the use by respondents of said names, letters and symbols, and simulations thereof, has led and has the capacity and tendency to lead the public to believe that the products sold by respondents and so marked or identified are the products of said well known respective companies or interests hereinabove referred to and identified and results in the appropriation by the respondents of the good will of, and an unfair diversion of business from said respective competitor companies and interests, and an unfair diversion of business from other competitors who do not resort to such practices, to the injury of the owners of said marks, letters and symbols and of said competitors, and to the prejudice and injury of the public.

PAR. 7. The use by respondents of the names, marks, brands, symbols and devices as set out in paragraph 5 is wholly unauthorized by the owners of said names, marks, brands, symbols and devices and gives to respondents' goods a salability which they would not otherwise have, and gives to said respondents an advantage over their competitors who do not similarly misrepresent the true origin of their goods and conceal the same under a disputable but false origin as do respondents. The said appropriation and use by said respondents of the reputation and good will of others at the expense of and injury to such others who have created such reputation and good will, has the capacity and tendency to deceive, and deceives the public purchasing said products into believing that respondents' products originate with well known and reputable concerns contrary to the fact. Thereby substantial injury is done by respondents to competitors and substantial competition in interstate and foreign commerce.

The purchasing public buying radio sets, radio parts and like products, marked or branded with the said well known names, letters and symbols are of a common mind or belief, regardless of the selling price or of the source of supply, that said products are manufactured and sold by the lawful owners and users of said names, marks, brands, letters, and symbols, and when said names, marks, brands, letters, and symbols are placed upon radio sets, radio parts and like products, such products are accepted as the products of those who have lawfully used and now use such names as marks, brands, letters and symbols upon like products as set out in paragraph 6 hereof. The name or brand being depended upon, influences the sale of said products.

Members of the purchasing public have purchased radio sets, radio parts and like products branded and sold to the trade by respondents and others, which products were imitations of or less than the genuine products entered in trade by the lawful owners and users of said standard names, and have been deceived in such purchases.

Order

24 F. T. C.

The manufacture, sale, and delivery by respondents set out and described in paragraphs 2, 3, and 4, of escutcheons and nameplates, and radio sets, radio parts, and like products, marked and branded with the names, letters, and symbols set out and described in paragraph 5, without authority or consent of the legal owners and lawful users thereof, places in the hands of others to whom said products are sold, the means whereby injury might be and is done to competitors dealing in the genuine products honestly marked. Injury to manufacturers and dealers in the legitimate products is suffered by the sale by respondents of said products falsely marked, sold, and shipped in interstate and foreign commerce. Injury to the lawful owners and users of said standard brands, names, marks, and symbols is suffered because of the manufacture, sale, and competition of said respondents' said products.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the said respondents, Metal Etching Corporation, M. Hermann, Crowe Nameplate and Manufacturing Company, E. C. Coolidge, I. Robinson Smith, Knight Electric Company, Inc., Temple Electric Corporation, Acme Radio Corporation, Pirate Radio Corporation, Gillet Radio Corporation, Eric Houser, David I. Morrison, A. M. Frank, Arthur Dreher, Charles Dreher, Ruth Wasserman, Harvard Radio Tube Testing Stations of Pa., Inc., Julius M. Schoenberg, Ross Distributing Company, Larry B. Ross, Sun Radio and Service Supply Corporation, Emanuel Rosenzweig, Schiller Brothers, Inc., Louis S. Schiller, F. C. Scruggs, individually, and trading under the name Call Radio Company, and Peter Robbins, individually, and trading under the names Robbins Radio Company and Ambassador Radio Company, are to the prejudice of the public and respondents' competitors, and are unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce, and constitute a violation of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST, ETC.

This proceeding having been heard by the Federal Trade Commission upon the amended and supplemental complaint, hereinafter designated the complaint of the Commission; the answers of those respondents upon whom the complaint was served, some of which answers deny the material allegations of the complaint, and some of which admit the material allegations of the complaint; and the Commission being fully advised in the premises,

Order

It is ordered, That the complaint herein issued be and the same is hereby dismissed as to the respondents, Etched Products Corporation, Albert Nierenberg, and Walter H. Miller; Electro Chemical Engraving Company (designated in the complaint as Electro Chemical & Engraving Company), F. E. Switzer, N. L. Jacobus, Robert Schlessinger, Julius Erdoes and I. S. Southwick; Premier Metal Etching Company, Herbert Pape, Karl D. (designated in the complaint as Carl J.) Johnson, Ernest A. Rottach and Hugo Lehrfeld; Leon C. Sacks, Charles Johannes, Morris A. Weiner and J. R. Rosenberg, for the reason that there is no evidence to establish the allegations of the complaint as to said respondents.

It is further ordered, That the case growing out of the complaint herein as to the respondents, Radio Products Corporation, Franklin Sales and Distributing Company, Inc., and S. Buchman, be and the same hereby is closed, for the reason that the said respondents were not located and the complaint was not served upon them, without prejudice to the right of the Commission to reopen the case and resume prosecution of the complaint as to said respondents in accordance with its regular procedure should the facts so warrant.

It is further ordered, That the respondents, Metal Etching Corporation and Crowe Name Plate and Manufacturing Company, their respective officers, agents and representatives, and the respondent individuals, M. Hermann, E. C. Coolidge and I. Robinson Smith, individually and as officers, agents and representatives of said corporations, and their respective agents and representatives in connection with the offering for sale, and sale and shipment in interstate and foreign commerce and in the District of Columbia of escutcheons and name plates, cease and desist from: selling, distributing or furnishing name plates and escutcheons for radio sets and like products bearing the names, letters and symbols, "Marconi," "Edison," "Bell," "Victor," "Majestic," "Brunswick," the letters "R. It is further ordered, That the respondents, Knight Electric Company, Inc., Temple Electric Corporation, Acme Radio Corporation, Pirate Radio Corporation, Gillet Radio Corporation, Harvard Radio Tube Testing Stations of Pa., Inc., Ross Distributing Company, Sun Radio and Service Supply Corporation, Schiller Brothers, Inc., and their respective officers, agents and representatives, and the respondent individuals, Eric Houser, David I. Morrison, A. M. Frank, Arthur (named Otto in the complaint) Dreher, Charles Dreher, Ruth Wasserman, Julius M. Schoenberg, Larry B. Ross, Emanuel Rosensweig, Louis S. Schiller, and the respondent, Peter Robbins, individually, and trading as Robbins Radio Company and as Ambassador Radio Company, and respondent, F. C. Scruggs, individually, and trading as Call Radio Company, and said respondent individuals trading under any other name or names, in connection with the offering for sale and sale in interstate and foreign commerce, and in the District of Columbia, of radio sets, radio parts and like products, and es-cutchions and nameplates, do cease and desist from:

Representing directly or indirectly, through the use in any manner, of the trade names or marks, "Marconi," "Edison," "Bell," "Victor," "Majestic," "Brunswick," or the letters "R. C. A.," or the letters "G. E.," or through the use, in any manner, of any colorable simulations and imitations thereof, such as, but without limitation, "Marconi-International," "Marconi Radio Corporation," "Edison International," "Edison-Bell," "Edison" with the representation of a bell, "Edison Radio Stores, Inc.," the representation of a bell, "Victor International," "Majestic International," "Majestic Radio Corporation," "Brunswick," or the letters "R. C. I.," "R. S. A.," "E. B.," or through the use of any other trade names or marks of which they are not the legal owners, without the permission of the lawful owners thereof, or through any other means or device, or in any manner that the radio sets, radio parts, and like devices, appliances or products manufactured or assembled for or by, and sold by any of said respondents, are manufactured, assembled, sold, sponsored, endorsed, approved, or licensed by Thomas A. Edison, Thomas A. Edison, Inc., American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Western Electric Company, Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America, Radio Corporation of America, Victor Talking Machine Company, Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and its subsidiary, Brunswick Radio Corporation, Grigsby-Grunow Company or Majestic Radio & Television Corporation, General Electric Company, or the agents, representatives, successors, or assigns of any of said persons, partnerships or corporations, or that said products are manufactured, assembled, sold, sponsored, endorsed, approved or licensed by any corporation, association, partnership or person who, in fact, did not and does not manufacture, assemble, sell, sponsor, endorse, approve or license said products.

It is further ordered, That the said respondents shall within 60 days after service upon them of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which they have complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
BRITISH AMERICAN TOFFEE COMPANY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 3085. Complaint, Mar. 23, 1937—Decision, May 22, 1937

Where a domestic corporation engaged, at its office and principal place of business in the United States, in the manufacture and sale of confectionery products, including one known to the trade as "toffee," and making said last-named product from formulas prepared by an English stockholder and former candy manufacturer in England for a number of years and at its aforesaid office and principal place of business only, and neither owning, operating, nor controlling manufacturing plants, branches, or selling agencies in any part of England, or in any other foreign country, and in competition, as thus engaged, with many who sell toffee and other confectionery products made in England and imported therefrom, and who rightfully and lawfully represent their said merchandise as imported, and with others who make and sell such products made in the United States and in no manner represent their said domestic confectionery or toffee as an English or foreign made and imported confection, such as long popular and in demand among the consuming public throughout the United States and considered, in the case of many, as superior, and especially so in case of English-made toffee, to similar domestic products, and purchased by many of said public, in the case of such toffee, in preference to the domestic-made product—

Made use of such words and phrases, on the individual wrappers of the candy pieces, as "Delicious English Toffees," and included on the statements lithographed or printed on the cellophane bags or containers of such individually wrapped pieces, along with its name of "British American Toffee Company," words "England's Most Popular Sweet, Piccadilly Toffee," and also set forth thereon depictions of the Tower of London and London Bridge and two soldiers simulating in dress and appearance British soldiers, and upon the cartons containing said cellophane bags or toffee in bulk set forth labels, along with its aforesaid name, containing words "Piccadilly Toffee made by," etc.;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that its said toffee products, thus designated as "English" and "Piccadilly" toffee, were importations of a foreign made product and that it owned and operated factories in England in which it made the same, and with result that such public, by reason of said belief thus induced, bought substantial volume of its said products, and trade was unfairly diverted from those competitors engaged in similar businesses who do not make use of the same or similar misrepresentations, acts and practices; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, that such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Mr. J. T. Welch for the Commission.

Tilson, Stanley & McCuen, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that British American Toffee Company, a corporation, hereinafter referred to as respondent, is now, and has been, using unfair methods of competition in commerce, as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. British American Toffee Company is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Connecticut, with its office and principal place of business at 102 Hill Street, New Haven, Conn. It is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling confectionary products, including a product known to the trade as "toffee."

PAR. 2. Said respondent causes its said product, when sold to wholesale and retail dealers to be transported from its principal place of business in the State of Connecticut, to the purchasers thereof located in other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia. There is now, and has been at all times mentioned herein, a constant current of trade and commerce in said product known as "toffee" manufactured and sold by the respondent, between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. Said respondent, in the course and conduct of its business, has been at all times mentioned herein, engaged in substantial competition with other corporations, partnerships, and individuals, engaged in commerce among the several States of the United States and in the District of Columbia, in the manufacture, importation, distribution, and sale of domestic and foreign confectionary products, including the product known as "toffee."

PAR. 4. Respondent, British American Toffee Company, in the course and conduct of its business, as set forth herein, has offered for sale and sold in commerce as herein set out, certain of its products, to wit: "English Toffee," "English Toffees," and "Piccadilly Toffee," in cellophane or paper bags or containers and in cartons. By way of advertisement or inducement to purchase, there is lithographed or printed thereon as to "English Toffee" or "English Toffees," the following:

Delicious English Toffees
Printed in England and as to "Picadilly Toffee," the following:

"England's Most Popular Sweet" Piccadilly Toffee
British-American Toffee Company

together with figures or pictures of an English castle representing the Tower of London and London Bridge, a coat-of-arms and two soldiers simulating British soldiery in dress and appearance. The cartons in which respondent has shipped and now ships its said products, had and have affixed to them labels containing the following words:

Piccadilly Toffee

The cartons in which respondent's said products are shipped bear printed words or legends such as "Printed in England" which have the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial number of the purchasing public into the mistaken and erroneous belief that the contents of said cartons are also made in and imported from England. Respondent has caused invoices and billings to be forwarded to its customers, located in States other than the State of Connecticut, containing as a description of its said product: "Piccadilly Toffee."

PAR. 5. Respondent, British American Toffee Company, does not manufacture any of its products, including those described herein, in any part of England, does not own or operate manufacturing plants, branches or selling agencies in any part of England. All toffee products of the respondent are of domestic manufacture. Respondent's corporation is not a "British" corporation, nor it is a "British-American" corporation.

PAR. 6. Confectionary products, including "toffee" manufactured in England or other foreign countries, have for many years enjoyed widespread popularity, good-will, and demand among the consuming public throughout the United States, many of whom believe and consider that confectionary products, especially those designated as "toffee," manufactured in England, are superior in quality and other desirable characteristics to similar confectionary products manufactured in the United States. Many of the consuming public throughout the United States purchase "toffee" manufactured in England and imported into the United States in preference to "toffee" manufactured in the United States.

PAR. 7. The false and misleading advertising and representations hereinabove set out, on the part of the respondent, places in the hands of wholesale and retail dealers and jobbers, an instrument and means whereby said dealers and jobbers may commit a fraud upon a substantial portion of the consuming public by enabling dealers to represent and offer for sale and sell the said products known as "English Toffee" or "English Toffees" and "Piccadilly Toffee," either as an imported product or as a product manufactured in the United States in conjunction with or under license from English manufacturers of "toffee." There are, among the competitors of the respondent, many who deal in confectionary products and sell "toffee," as well as other confectionary products manufactured in England and imported into the United States, who rightfully and lawfully represent such merchandise to be imported. There are others among the competitors of the respondent, who deal in confectionary products, including "toffee" that are manufactured in the United States, who in no manner represent their products as having been manufactured in or imported from England or any other foreign country.

PAR. 8. The effect of the foregoing false and misleading advertisements and representations of the respondent is to mislead a substantial number of wholesale and retail merchants and jobbers, as well as a substantial portion of the consuming public, in the several States, by inducing them to erroneously and mistakenly believe:

1. That respondent owns and operates factories in England, in which it manufactures the products known as "English Toffee" or "English Toffees" and "Piccadilly Toffee";

2. That respondent is a British corporation or a British-American corporation;

3. That the products known as "English Toffee" or "English Toffees" and "Piccadilly Toffee" are importations of a foreign manufactured product that can be, and often are, sold by dealers on the open market to the consumer public at a higher price than like products of domestic manufacture;

4. That the products known as "English Toffee" or "English Toffees" and "Piccadilly Toffee" are manufactured in conjunction with or under license from foreign manufacturers who have been engaged in the confectionary business for many years.

The foregoing false and misleading statements and representations on the part of respondent are added inducements for a substantial number of wholesale and retail merchants and jobbers, as well as consumer purchasers, to buy the products known as "English Toffee" or

"English Toffees" and "Piccadilly Toffee," manufactured, sold and distributed by respondent, and have a tendency and a capacity to, and do unfairly divert trade from competitors of respondent engaged in similar businesses who do not make use of the same or similar false and misleading statements and representations, with the result that substantial quantities of said products known as "English Toffee" or "English Toffees" and "Piccadilly Toffee" are sold to said dealers and purchasers and to the consuming public on account of said beliefs induced by the said false and misleading representations. As a consequence thereof, substantial injury has been done by the respondent to competition in commerce among the several States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 9. The above and foregoing acts, practices and representations of the respondent have been and are all to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and have been and are unfair methods of competition within the meaning and intent of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on March 23, 1937 issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon said respondent, British American Toffee Company, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in violation of the provisions of said act. Thereafter, a stipulation was entered into whereby it was stipulated and agreed that a statement of facts signed and executed by the respondent and W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, subject to the approval of the Commission, may be taken as the facts in this proceeding and in lieu of testimony in support of the charges stated in the complaint, or in opposition thereto, and that the said Commission may proceed upon said statement of facts to make its report, stating its findings as to the facts and its conclusion based thereon and enter its order disposing of the proceeding without the presentation of argument or the filing of briefs. Thereafter this proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on said complaint and stipulation, said stipulation having been approved and accepted, and the Commission having duly considered the same and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. British American Toffee Company is a corporation organized in January 1936 and existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Connecticut with its office and principal place of business at 102 Hill Street, New Haven, Conn. Since its organization, it has been engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling confectionery products, including a product known to the trade as "toffee." The capital stock of the corporation is owned by Theodore R. Blakeslee of New Haven, Conn., and James Whitefield and H. E. Tilbrooke of London, England. The ownership of the stock of said corporation is equally divided among the above named individuals.

PAR. 2. When its toffee is sold to wholesale and retail dealers located in various States of the United States, the respondent causes said toffee to be transported from its principal place of business in the State of Connecticut to the purchasers thereof at their respective points of location in other States of the United States. The respondent has, at all times since its organization, maintained a constant current of trade in commerce in its toffee between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 3. British American Toffee Company has, at all times since its organization, been engaged in substantial competition with other corporations and with partnerships and individuals likewise engaged in the manufacture, distribution and sale of domestic confectionary products, including toffee, and with corporations, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the importation, distribution, and sale of foreign confectionary products, including toffee, in commerce among and between the several States of the United States.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business, British American Toffee Company has offered for sale and sold its toffee in commerce, as herein set out, in cellophane or paper bags or containers and in cartons. By way of advertisement, there are lithographed or printed, on the individual wrapper for each piece of candy, the words "Delicious English Toffees." There are lithographed or printed on the cellophane bags or containers which hold a number of individual pieces of toffee the following words:

England's Most Popular Sweet
Piccadilly Toffee
British American Toffee Company

1337

Findings

On the cellophane bags or containers, there also appear figures or picturizations representing the Tower of London and London Bridge and two soldiers simulating British soldiery in dress and appearance.

The other containers or cartons in which the cellophane bags or the toffee in bulk have been shipped from respondent's place of business to dealers and purchasers located in the several States bear labels containing the following words:

Piccadilly Toffee
made by
The British American Toffee Co.
New Haven, Conn.

PAR. 5. British American Toffee Company actually manufactures said toffee in New Haven, Conn. It does not manufacture its toffee in any other place and it does not own, operate, or control manufacturing plants, branches, or selling agencies in any part of England or in any other foreign country. Its toffee is made from formulas prepared by the aforesaid James Whitefield who has been engaged in the manufacturing of candy in England for a number of years.

PAR. 6. Confectionary products, including toffee manufactured in England or other foreign countries, have for many years enjoyed widespread popularity, good-will and demand among the consuming public throughout the United States, many of whom believe and consider that confectionary products, especially those designated as "toffee" manufactured in England are superior in quality and other desirable characteristics to similar confectionary products manufactured in the United States. Many of the consuming public throughout the United States purchase toffee manufactured in England and imported into the United States in preference to toffee manufactured in the United States.

PAR. 7. Since the filing and service of the complaint, the respondent has altered the advertising matter appearing on the cellophane bags and containers used in transporting its toffee in commerce as herein described. The cellophane bags now bear the following words—

Piccadilly Style Toffee
Made by British American Toffee Co.
In New Haven, Conn.

The cellophane bags continue to have lithographed or printed thereon a picturization of London Bridge and the Tower of London and two soldiers simulating British soldiery. The letters of the word "Style" are plainly and clearly printed in close connection with the words "Piccadilly" and "Toffee" and are readily discernible. The remaining portion of the legend indicating that the product is actually manufactured in New Haven, Connecticut appears to be conspicuously placed in letters of sufficient size to be easily readable.

Various wrappers for the individual pieces of toffee contained in the cellophane bags above referred to have been altered so that the following words are printed thereon:

Coronet Toffee
Vanilla Flavor Toffee
Molasses Flavor Toffee
Brazil Nut Flavor Toffee
Rum and Butter Flavor Toffee

These wrappers as now printed and now used by the respondent do not contain the word "English."

Since the filing and service of complaint, the respondent has altered the advertising matter appearing on the labels of the other containers and cartons so as to read—

Piccadilly Style Toffee
made by
The British American Toffee Co. in
New Haven, Conn.

The letters of the word "Style" are plainly and clearly printed in close connection with the words "Piccadilly" and "Toffee" and are readily discernible. The remaining portion of the legend indicating that the product is actually manufactured in New Haven, Conn., appears to be conspicuously placed in letters of sufficient size to be easily readable.

PAR. 8. There are among the competitors of respondent many who deal in confectionary products and sell in commerce, as herein set out, toffee as well as other confectionary products manufactured in England and imported to the United States and who rightfully and lawfully represent such merchandise to be imported. There are others among the competitors of respondent who manufacture and sell in commerce, as herein set out, confectionary products, including toffee, that are manufactured in the United States and who in no manner represent their products as manufactured in or imported from England or any other foreign country.

PAR. 9. The foregoing misleading statements and representations on the part of the respondent have, and have had, a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous and mistaken belief that its toffee products heretofore designated as "English Toffee" and "Piccadilly Toffee" are importations of a foreign manufactured product and that respondent owns and operates factories in England in which it manufactures said products. As a result of said belief, induced by the statements and representations of the respondent as hereinabove detailed, the purchasing public has purchased a substantial volume of respondent's toffee products with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted from those competitors engaged in similar businesses who do not make use of the same or similar representations, acts and practices. As a consequence, substantial injury has been done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, British American Toffee Company, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, British American Toffee Company, and its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the advertising, offering for sale, and sale and distribution of confectionery products, including toffee, in interstate commerce, forthwith cease and desist from:

1. Representing, through the use of such phrases as "England's Most Popular Sweet," or any other word or phrase of similar import and effect, or through any other means or device, or in any manner, that its said toffee products are manufactured in England or in any other foreign country or that said products are imported into the United States.

Order

2. Using the word "Piccadilly" alone or in conjunction with any other words or phrases, or using picturizations of English soldiery or the Tower of London and London Bridge, or similar picturizations as descriptive of its toffee products on bags or containers, or in any other manner, unless there is placed in close proximity to and equal prominence with said words, phrases and picturizations, other words that clearly indicate that said product is actually produced or manufactured in the United States.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall within 90 days after the service upon it of this order file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

BERNARD LIGHT, TRADING AS LIGHT'S FUR FACTORY

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2787. Complaint, Apr. 25, 1936—Decision, May 27, 1937

- Where an individual engaged in the sale of furs and fur garments, and owner of all the outstanding stock of a corporate manufacturer, wholesaler, and retailer of such garments, located at same address; in advertising, in an adjoining State, his said furs and fur garments through radio broadcasts over a station, wavelength of which was of such character that it could be heard by people in States other than such adjoining State of origin—
- (a) Represented that he owned the building in which his business was carried on, and that he possessed, or was in a position to offer for sale, thousands of fur coats in the newest styles and models, etc., and that by purchasing from him, the customer could save the middleman's profit and that the saving thereby effected amounted to as much as fifty percent of the price of similar garments sold through the usual retail channels, facts being neither he nor aforesaid corporation owned said building, but he was only a tenant and occupied and paid rent for the second floor thereof, he was not in a position to offer "thousands" of fur coats and other garments, but number thereof on hand and available for sale at any other time was substantially less than stated and represented over such broadcast, he made use of fur sewing machines not owned by him in manufacture of such garments made by him, purchased many of his fur garments from aforesaid corporation and other fur manufacturers, coats advertised by him as aforesaid at varying prices were purchasable from other large retail establishments in the same city for substantially smaller amounts, those advertised for $39 were "rebuilt" or "renovated" coats, and customers or prospective customers could not and did not effect any such saving as above set forth through purchase from him;
- (b) Represented that all repairs for furs or fur garments were furnished free of charge, and that storage for such products was likewise thus furnished, facts being amount of free repairs furnished by him was limited and did not include use of material necessary to make repairs involved, for which additional amount of money was charged, and he did not give "free storage" to his customers, as understood among members of trade as including "proper refrigerated space where the garment is hung, and adequate insurance to cover the garment in the event of loss that would be sustained," but charged his said customers for insurance against fire, burglary, and theft on furs and fur garments stored by them; and
- (c) Represented that customers or prospective customers could purchase new fur garments consisting of genuine Hudson seal, raccoons, and other fur garments, at the low price of $45 for each coat, and that purchases of fur coats could be effected by them through turning in their old coats in trade and having allowance made therefor to apply on the purchase price of the new coat offered by him; facts being that he did not disclose that many of the coats which he offered at low prices were made from old skins taken from coats previously worn, repaired and made over, and he did not sell garments at low price quoted in broadcast, but asked substantially more therefor;

With tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all said representations were true, and with the result that a number of the consuming public, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced as aforesaid, purchased substantial volume of his said furs and fur garments, and trade was unfairly diverted to him from those likewise engaged in sale of such products between and among the various States and who truthfully advertise the same; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Bernard Licht, trading as Licht's Fur Factory, hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent, Bernard Licht, is an individual trading under the name and style of Licht's Fur Factory, with his principal place of business located at 102 West 29th Street, in the city of New York, State of New York. Respondent is now and for several months last past has been engaged in the business of selling furs and fur garments at retail, which he distributes to purchasers, many of whom reside in States other than the State of New York, and when orders are received therefor, they are filled by respondent by shipping the same from the said city of New York, State of New York, into and through other States of the United States, and in the District of Columbia, to the respective places of business or residences of such purchasers. In the course and conduct of his business said respondent was and is in substantial competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of furs and fur garments between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business as set forth in paragraph 1 hereof, respondent in soliciting the sale of said products in interstate commerce advertised and now advertises the same by means of radio broadcasts over a station having a wide interstate reception. Induced by the statements and representations which respondent makes or causes to be made over said radio broadcasts, persons residing in various States have purchased furs and fur garments from said respondent, in some cases for shipment to them at their respective places of residence and in other cases to be immediately carried by such purchasers into other States.

PAR. 3. In the radio broadcasts, described in paragraph 2 hereof, respondent represents and has represented that he owns the factory building in which he carries on his business and which is located at 102 West 29th Street, New York, N. Y. In truth and in fact, respondent has not owned nor does he own the building in which he conducts his said business, but occupied and now occupies a small space on one of the floors of the building where his business has been and is carried on.

PAR. 4. Respondent further states and represents in his radio broadcasts as aforesaid and also by means of advertising literature and cards that respondent is a manufacturer of the furs and fur garments which respondent offers for sale and sells, and that by purchasing from respondent the customer can save the middleman's profit, and that the saving thereby effected amounts to as much as 50% of the price of similar garments sold through the usual retail channels. In truth and in fact, said respondent is not a manufacturer of fur garments but purchases the finished garments advertised and sold by him from jobbers, wholesalers, and other manufacturers. Nor can customers or prospective customers effect a saving of 50% by purchasing furs or fur garments from respondent.

There is a preference on the part of certain customers in different States of the United States for furs and fur garments purchased directly from the manufacturer thereof, and there is an impression and belief existing among certain of said customers that by dealing directly with the manufacturer they can eliminate the profit of the middleman, and that they can buy goods at a cheaper price and on more favorable terms than they can from jobbers or corporations, partnerships, firms, or persons not manufacturing furs or fur garments that sell to such customers.

PAR. 5. In the course and conduct of such radio broadcasts, respondent made or caused to be made the following statements and representations:

Licht's offer thousands of beautiful fur coats in the newest styles and models made from only the finest furs consisting of Seal, Persian Lamb, Mink, Caracul,

Complaint

24 F. T. C.

Raccoon and many others, in all sizes, and prices as low as $35.00 and up to $1,000.00 * * *

Licht's Fur Factory are now displaying thousands of beautiful fur coats such as Seal, Caracul, Marmink, Raccoon, Muskrat—plain or trimmed with Fitch, Raccoon or Beaver, for only $39.00! Just imagine, a beautiful fur coat for only $39.00.

In truth and in fact, respondent at no time had on hand or was in the position to offer for sale "thousands" of fur coats or other garments, but the number of such garments on hand and available for sale at any one time was substantially less than stated and represented, nor did respondent have on hand furs consisting of seal, Persian lamb, mink, caracul, and raccoon for sale at the low prices mentioned over said radio broadcasts.

PAR. 6. Respondent further states and represents by the media of radio broadcasts that customers who would purchase furs or fur garments from respondent would receive free repairs and that respondent offers with the purchase of furs or fur garments free storage for the same. In truth and in fact, the amount of "free" repairs furnished by respondent was and is very limited, and does not include the use of materials necessary to make said repairs; but respondent charges an additional amount of money for the materials necessary to make said repairs. In truth and in fact, the respondent does not give free storage to his customers but charges said customers for insurance against fire, burglary and theft on furs and fur garments stored by such customers.

PAR. 7. Respondent by the media of radio broadcasts further represented that customers or prospective customers could purchase furs consisting of genuine Hudson seals, raccoons, black Russian ponies, marminks, muskrats, brown, black or gray caraculs at the price of $15.00 for each coat, and that purchases of fur coats could be effected by customers or prospective customers turning in their old coats in trade for which an allowance would be made by respondent to apply to the purchase price of said new coats offered by respondent. In truth and in fact, many of the coats offered by respondent at low prices were and are "rebuilt" or "renovated" coats, that is, coats made from old skins taken from coats which had been previously worn, then repaired and made over, and respondent did not sell the furs at the low prices quoted in said radio broadcasts but on the contrary asked prices substantially higher than those stated over the radio broadcasts.

PAR. 8. The false and misleading statements and representations, as aforesaid, have the capacity and tendency to divert and have diverted to said respondent trade from his competitors, both those who are in truth manufacturers of fur garments and represent themselves as such, and those who do not manufacture the garments they sell, but who resell them on the same basis as this respondent but do not misrepresent their status, and from those competitors who do not misrepresent the value or usual selling price of the garments sold by them. Such statements and misrepresentations have the tendency and capacity to deceive and mislead and do deceive and mislead the purchasing public into the belief that respondent is a manufacturer, and that the garments sold by respondent are manufactured by him, and that by reason of respondent's being a manufacturer, respondent's customers can acquire greater value by purchasing furs and fur garments from respondent than by purchasing such garments from retailers, and that by purchasing from respondent a saving of 50% of the real value and usual retail selling value can be effected, and that expensive furs can be acquired from respondent at nominal or low prices, and that all the furs and fur garments advertised and sold by respondent are new fur garments and not "rebuilt" or "renovated" garments or garments previously worn and repaired, then renovated, and that the purchase of a garment or garments from respondent entitles a purchaser or purchasers to free repairs, and to free storage, and that such free storage includes payment by respondent of all insurance charges against burglary, theft, and fire.

The acts and practices of respondent as hereinbefore set forth are calculated to and tend to and do unfairly divert trade to respondent from said competitors, and by the acts and practices of respondent hereinbefore described substantial injury is done by respondent to competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 9. The above alleged acts and practices of respondent are each and all of them to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on April 25, 1936, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent, Bernard Licht, doing business as Licht's Fur Factory, charging him with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by George Foulkes, attorney for the Commission, before Edward M. Averill, an examiner of the Commission, theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint, by Charles Rathkopf, attorney for the respondent, and said testimony and other evidence were fully recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent Bernard Licht is an individual trading under the name and style of Licht's Fur Factory. Respondent has his principal place of business at 102 West 29th Street, in the city of New York, State of New York.

Respondent is now and since the month of June 1935, has been, engaged in the business of selling furs and fur garments.

When said fur garments are sold by respondent, he causes them to be shipped from his place of business in the city of New York, State of New York, to purchasers located in the various States of the United States.

In the course and conduct of his business, respondent was and is in substantial competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of furs and fur garments between and among the various States of the United States.

There is also located at 102 West 29th Street, New York City, State of New York, Harry Licht and Sons, Inc., a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York in April 1933.

Harry Licht is the father of the respondent Bernard Licht, and at one time a manager of the corporation Harry Licht & Sons, Inc.

Harry Licht & Sons, Inc., is a manufacturer, wholesaler, and retailer of furs and fur garments.

Respondent Bernard Licht owns all of the outstanding stock of Harry Licht & Sons, Inc., 19 shares in all, which have a par value of $100 per share.

1347

Findings

Harry Licht, father of the respondent Bernard Licht, often acted as a salesman in the place of business of Bernard Licht, trading as Licht's Fur Factory.

PAR. 2. In the course and conduct of his business, respondent Bernard Licht, trading as Licht's Fur Factory, in soliciting the sale and sale of furs and fur garments, advertised by means of radio broadcasts over Station WAAT, which is located in Jersey City, State of New Jersey.

The wave length of Station WAAT, is of such character that it can be heard by people in States other than the State of New Jersey. Respondent represented over radio Station WAAT by means of radio broadcast that he owned the factory building in which he carries on his business and which is located at 102 West 29th Street, New York City, N. Y. During the months of September, October, November, and December, in the year 1935, respondent caused the following statements to be made over radio Station WAAT:

This is the address of Licht's Fur Company—spelled L-I-C-H-T'S which is open week days from 9:00 A. M. to 9:00 P. M. and Sundays from 10:00 A. M. to 5:00 P. M.—remember—don't look for a retail store—Licht's occupy their own factory building at this address—which is one door from Sixth Avenue in New York City—

In fact, respondent has not owned nor does he own the building in which Licht's Fur Factory has been and is located.

Respondent is a tenant in said building and pays rent for his occupancy of the second floor thereof. Neither does Harry Licht & Sons, Inc., own said building.

Harry Licht & Sons, Inc. has the use of space rented by Bernard Licht, doing business as Licht's Fur Factory.

PAR. 3. Respondent further represented over said radio broadcast that Licht's Fur Factory was and is a manufacturer of the furs and fur garments which respondent offers for sale and sells, and that by purchasing from respondent the customer can save the middleman's profit, and that the saving thereby effected amounts to as much as fifty percent of the price of similar garments sold through the usual retail channels.

During the month of November 1935, respondent caused the following announcement to be broadcast over radio Station WAAT:

Why not purchase your Fur Coat from a Manufacturer this year—Licht's have been manufacturing furriers for over twenty-eight years—and are now selling direct to you from their own fur factory at manufacturer's prices—and you save up to fifty percent—don't let warm weather fool you—prepare for winter now—at Licht's Fur Factory.

Respondent further represented over said radio broadcast that fine fur garments could be purchased at very low prices.

During the month of October 1935, respondent caused the following announcement to be broadcast over Station WAAT:

Licht's offer thousands of beautiful fur coats in the newest styles and models made from only the finest furs consisting of Seal, Persian Lamb, Mink, Caracul, Raccoon and many others, in all sizes, and priced as low as $35 and up to $1000 dollars * * *—

In fact during the year 1935, respondent Bernard Licht, doing business as Licht's Fur Factory, operated several fur sewing machines with which he manufactured fur garments.

The fur sewing machines used by respondent, while operated by him, were owned by his father Harry Licht, doing business as Harry Licht & Sons, Inc.

Respondent purchased many of his fur garments from Harry Licht & Sons, Inc., and from other fur manufacturers.

In fact customers, or prospective customers could not, nor can they effect a saving of fifty percent by purchasing furs or fur garments from respondent.

Coats advertised by respondent over said radio broadcasts at $110 and $135 could be purchased from other large retail fur establishments in New York City for $98.

Coats of similar quality and for which respondent charged $139 could during the time of said radio broadcast be purchased in other retail stores for $119.

The coats which respondent advertised for $39 were "rebuilt coats" or "renovated coats," that is, coats made up from skins which had been previously worn.

Respondent further caused to be represented over said radio broadcast that he had on hand at his factory, located at 102 West 29th Street, New York City, N. Y., "thousands" of fur garments, and that he was in the position to offer for sale thousands of fur garments to the purchasing public.

During the month of November in the year 1935 respondent caused the following announcement to be broadcast over radio Station WAAT:

Licht's fur factory—Located at 102 West 29th St., one door from 6th Avenue in New York—kept right on manufacturing fur coats and are now displaying thousands of beautiful fur coats, such as seal, caracul, marmink, raccoon, beaver and mink—priced as low as $39 and up to $1000.

In fact, respondent at no time had on hand or was in the position to offer for sale "thousands" of fur coats or other garments, but the number of such garments on hand and available for sale at any one time was substantially less than stated and represented over said radio broadcast.

Findings

PAR. 4. Respondent caused to be represented over said radio broadcast that customers who would purchase furs or fur garments from respondent would receive free repairs, and that respondent offers with the purchase of furs or fur garments, free storage for the same.

During the months of September and October in the year 1935, respondent caused the following announcements to be broadcast over radio Station WAAT:

* * * Your old coat will be accepted as cash against the purchase of any new coat—and with every purchase—you are given free repair service and free storage for three years * * *.

* * * Every coat is guaranteed with free storage and repair service for three years.

During the month of November 1935 respondent caused the following announcement to be made over radio Station WAAT:

Repair service and storage for three years absolutely free.

In fact, the amount of free repairs furnished by respondent was and is limited, and does not include the use of material necessary to make said repairs; but respondent charges an additional amount of money for the materials necessary to make said repairs.

When a customer purchased a fur garment said customer received a certificate from respondent, which contained the following provision:

1—In addition to our Free Storage we will repair all rips, sew up seams. Glaze your Garment free of charge for the period of this guarantee.

2—Should your garment need repairings, whereas we will have to use material of any kind, there will be a charge to you on same at actual cost of labor and material.

In truth and in fact respondent does not give free storage to his customers but charges said customers for insurance against fire, burglary and theft on furs and fur garments stored by such customers.

The guarantee certificate which respondent gives to a customer who purchases a fur coat also contains the following provision:

3. We will insure your Furs, Protecting them against Fire, Burglary and Theft at a small minimum per cent charge on valuation placed thereon.

In accordance with the provisions of said guarantee certificate, respondent charged customers a fee, which fee represented an insurance charge for protection of the fur garment from loss sustained by reason of fire, burglary and theft while placed in storage by respondent.

The words "free storage" are understood, among members of the fur trade, to include "proper refrigerated space where the garment is hung, and adequate insurance to cover the garment in the event of loss that would be sustained."

PAR. 5. Respondent, by the media of said radio broadcasts, further represented that customers or prospective customers could purchase new fur garments consisting of genuine Hudson seals, raccoons, and other fur garments at the low price of $45 for each coat. Respondent further represented that purchases of fur coats could be effected by customers or prospective customers turning in their old coats in trade, for which an allowance would be made by respondent to apply to the purchase price of said new coat offered by respondent.

In fact, many of the coats offered by respondent at low prices were coats made from old skins taken from coats which had been previously worn, then repaired and made over, which fact respondent failed to disclose over said radio broadcasts, and respondent did not sell the garments at the low price quoted in said radio broadcasts but asked prices substantially higher.

PAR. 6. Each and all of the false and misleading statements made by respondent as hereinabove set forth, in offering for sale and selling his furs and fur garments, had and now has a tendency and capacity to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that all of said representations are true.

Further, as a direct consequence of the mistaken and erroneous beliefs induced by the false and misleading statements of respondent as hereinabove enumerated, a number of the consuming public purchased a substantial volume of respondent's furs and fur garments, with the result that trade has been unfairly diverted to respondent from individuals, firms, and corporations likewise engaged in the business of selling furs and fur garments, between and among the various States of the United States, and who truthfully advertise their products.

As a result thereof, substantial injury has been done and is now being done by respondent to competition in commerce among and between the various States of the United States.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of respondent, Bernard Licht, doing business as Licht's Fur Factory, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

Order

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Bernard Licht, doing business as Light's Fur Factory, or under any other trade name, his representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale, sale, and distribution of furs and fur garments in interstate commerce, do forthwith cease and desist from representing:

1. That he owns the building in which his business is carried on;
2. That he possesses or is in the position to offer for sale "thousands" or any other number of furs and fur garments substantially in excess of the amount that he actually has on hand;
3. That a saving of 50 percent or any saving can be effected by purchasing furs or fur garments from him;
4. That all repairs for furs or fur garments are furnished free of charge;
5. That storage for furs or fur garments is furnished free of charge, unless and until said free storage includes the placing of the garment in properly refrigerated space, and adequate insurance for protection of the garment from loss sustained by fire, burglary and theft;
6. That all the furs and fur garments sold by him are made from new skins not previously used or worn.

It is further ordered, That the respondent above named shall, within 30 days after the service upon him of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner in which he has complied with this order.

IN THE MATTER OF
KIENZLER DISTILLING CORPORATION

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION
OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 26, 1914

Docket 2634. Complaint, Nov. 18, 1935—Decision, May 28, 1937

Where a corporation engaged, as rectifier and wholesaler of spirituous liquors, in purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins and other alcoholic beverages, and in producing gin with stills used therefor, by redistillation of purchased alcohol, not produced by it, over juniper berries and other aromatics, and in selling its aforesaid various products to hotels, bars, clubs, and restaurants through a corporate sales agency with preponderant identity in the matter of officers, personnel, and in other respects, and in the sale thereof also to wholesalers and retailers, in substantial competition with those engaged in the manufacture by true distillation of whiskies, gins and other alcoholic beverages from mash, wort, or wash, and in selling same in trade and commerce and in the various States and in the District of Columbia, and with those engaged in purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling such various beverages and similarly selling same, and including among said competitors those who, as manufacturers and distillers by original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash through continuous closed pipes and vessels until manufacture is complete, of whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages sold by them, truthfully used words "distillery," "distilleries," "distillers," or "distilling" as a part of their corporate or trade names and on their stationery and catalogs and on the labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship their said products. and those who, engaging in purchasing, rectifying, blending, bottling, and selling such various products, do not use aforesaid words as above set forth—

Represented, through use of word "Distilling" in its corporate name, printed on its stationery and catalogs and on the labels attached to the bottles in which it sold and shipped its said products and in various other ways to its customers, and furnished same with the means of representing to their vendees, both retailers and ultimate consuming public, that it was a distiller and that the said whiskies, gins, cordials, brandies, and other alcoholic beverages contained in such bottles were by it made through process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash, notwithstanding fact it did not thus distill said various beverages, thus bottled, labeled, sold, and transported by it, through process of original and continuous distillation as above set forth, and as long definitely understood from word "distilling" when used in connection with liquor industry and products thereof by trade and ultimate purchasing public, did not own, operate, or control any place or places where such beverages are made by aforesaid process of continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash, and was not, notwithstanding its aforesaid production of gin, as commonly accepted and understood by trade and public, a distiller, for the purchase of the bottled liquors of which there is a preference on the part of a substantial portion of the purchasing public;

With effect of misleading and deceiving dealers and purchasing public into the belief that it was a distiller or distilling company in the ordinary accepted sense of those terms, and that the whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages sold by it were by it made or distilled from mash, wort, or wash by one continuous process, and of inducing dealers and purchasing public, acting in such beliefs, to buy the whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages rectified and bottled by it, and with result of giving it an unfair competitive advantage over those of its competitors who do not, through use of such terms in their trade or corporate names, represent that package of alcoholic liquor offered to retailer, and in turn to consumer, is a distillery-bottled package, and with tendency thereby to divert trade to it from such competitors; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that Kienzler Distilling Corporation, a corporation hereinafter referred to as respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to the said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges in that respect as follows:

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation, organized, existing, and doing business under the laws of the State of New York, with its office and principal place of business in the city of New York, in said State. It is now, and for more than one year last past has been, engaged in the business of a wholesaler and rectifier, purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages and in the sale thereof in constant course of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its said business it causes its said products when sold to be transported from its place of business into and through various States of the United States to the purchasers thereof, consisting of wholesalers and retailers, located in other States of the United States and the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the manufacture by true distillation of whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages from mash, wort, or wash, and in the sale thereof in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid respondent is, and for more than one year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Upon the premises of respondent's place of business aforesaid there is a still for use in the production of gins by a process of rectification whereby alcohol, purchased but not produced by respondent, is redistilled over juniper berries and other aromatics. Such rectification of alcoholic spirits does not make or constitute respondent a distillery or a distiller, as defined by Section 3247 of the Revised Statutes regulating Internal Revenue, nor as commonly understood by the public and the liquor industry. For a long period of time the word "distilling" when used in connection with the liquor industry and with the products thereof has had and still has a definite significance and meaning to the minds of wholesalers and retailers in such industry and to the ultimate purchasing public, to wit, the manufacturing of spirituous liquors by an original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash, through continuous closed pipes and vessels until the manufacture thereof is complete, and a substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy spirituous liquors bottled and prepared by distillers.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid by the use of the word "Distilling" in its corporate name, printed on its stationery, catalogs and on the labels attached to the bottles in which it sells and ships its said products, and in various other ways, respondent represents to its customers and furnishes them with the means of representing to their vendees, both retailers and the ultimate consuming public, that it is a distiller and that the said whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages therein contained were by it manufactured through the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash, when, as a matter of fact, respondent is not a distiller, does not distill the said whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages by it so bottled, labeled, sold, and transported, and merely by the use of a still operated by it as aforesaid in the production of gin, does not distill the whiskies, gins and other spirituous beverages by it so bottled, labeled, sold, and transported in the sense in which the word

"distilled" is commonly accepted and understood by those engaged in the liquor trade and the public. Respondent does not own, operate, or control any place or places where spirituous beverages are manufactured by a process of original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash.

PAR. 4. There are among the competitors of respondent engaged in the sale of spirituous beverages as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals who manufacture and distill from mash, wort, or wash, whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages sold by them and who truthfully use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distillers," or "distilling" as a part of their corporate or trade names and on their stationery, catalogs and on the labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship such products. There are also among such competitors corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending bottling and selling whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages who do not use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distilling," or "distillers" as a part of their corporate or trade names, nor on their stationery, catalogs, advertising, nor on the labels attached to the bottles in which they sell and ship their said products.

PAR. 5. The representations by respondent, as set forth in paragraph 3 hereof, are calculated to and have a capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive dealers and the purchasing public into the beliefs that respondent is a distiller and that the whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages sold by respondent are manufactured or distilled by it from mash, wort, or wash by one continuous process and are calculated to and have the capacity and tendency to and do induce dealers and the purchasing public, acting in such beliefs, to purchase the whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages rectified and bottled by the respondent, thereby diverting trade to respondent from its competitors who do not by their corporate or trade name or in any other manner misrepresent that they are distillers, and thereby respondent does substantial injury to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 6. The acts and things above alleged to have been done and the false representations alleged to have been made by respondent are to the prejudice of the public and the competitors of respondent and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, on November 18, 1935, issued and on November 19 served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent Kienzler Distilling Corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act. After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by PGad B. Morehouse and DeWitt T. Puckett, attorneys for the Commission, before John L. Hornor, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Herman Keller and Mortimer S. Gordon, attorneys for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter, the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence and briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, counsel for respondent having failed to appear at the time and place set for oral argument herein, to wit: May 3, 1937, and no argument therefore having been made; and the Commission having duly considered the foregoing and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. Respondent is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York on November 27, 1933, existing and doing business at 30-32 West 24th St., New York City, under a basic permit from the Federal Alcohol Administration known as "R-46" as a rectifier and wholesaler of spirituous liquors, and has engaged in the distilled spirits rectifying and wholesaling business since the date of its organization. Its average sales are approximately $500,000.00 a year in volume. At the same address, but on a different floor of the same twelve-story building is located the business of the Kienzler Company, another corporation which was formed in 1883 to handle rectified liquors and foodstuffs. This latter company having the same offices and using the same employees as respondent, is respondent's only customer except for one or two local jobbers, and acts as respondentent's distributor and sales agent. Prior to April 1936, Mr. Albert Guggenheim was president of Kienzler Distilling Corporation, Mr. Michael Neuberger was its secretary, and Miss Jessie E. Simonson, assistant secretary, but Mr. Guggenheim and the witness Morris Keller, respondent's general manager, controlled the business. On or about April 1, 1936, there was a reorganization in the affairs of the two companies. Mr. Keller was elected president in the place of Mr. Guggenheim, and the other officers remained the same, Mr. Guggenheim, however, becoming president of the Kienzler Company, the selling agent, Mr. Guggenheim and Mr. Keller, the present president of respondent company, consult in the operation of both companies and their respective office forces occupy the same space and are 75% identical. The respondent, Kienzler Distilling Corporation, purchases its distilled spirits requirements in bulk from distillers and bottles them straight or blended. It then sells the bottled products already labeled to the Kienzler Company and the liquor is shipped by respondent to the customers of the Kienzler Company upon the Kienzler Company's order and direct from the premises of respondent, except that sometimes when the Kienzler Distilling Corporation is heavily stocked the surplus merchandise is moved from the Kienzler Distilling Corporation's warehouse to the Kienzler Company's premises.

Findings

Of the bottled liquors, about 75% consists of respondent's own brands bearing its name, Kienzler Distilling Corporation thereon, and about 25% consists of what is known as "private brand" business, whereon the name of Kienzler Distilling Corporation does not always, but does sometimes appear. The Kienzler Company, the selling agent, also imports or buys from other sources than respondent, approximately $100,000 worth of alcoholic beverages.

Approximately 85 to 90% of respondent's total products are sold through the sales agency of the Kienzler Company to hotels, bars, clubs and restaurants both in New York and elsewhere, including Pittsburgh, Pa., Cincinnati, Ohio, and Chicago, Ill., the Kienzler Company as respondent's distributor and agent selling the liquors principally at wholesale.

The Commission finds that respondent is now and for more than one year last past has been engaged in purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages, and in the sale thereof in constant course of trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its said business it causes its said products when sold to be transported from its place of business into and through various States of the United States to the purchasers thereof, consisting of wholesalers and retailers, located in other States of the United States and the District of Columbia. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid, respondent is now, and for more than one year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, partnerships, and firms engaged in the manufacture by true distillation of whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages from mash, wort, or wash, and in the sale thereof in trade and commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia; and in the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid respondent is, and for more than one year last past has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms, and partnerships engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, and bottling whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages and in the sale thereof in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. Upon the premises of respondent are four 500-gallon gin stills, of which two are in regular operation. These stills are used by respondent in the production of gins by a process of rectification whereby alcohol purchased but not produced by respondent, is redistilled over juniper berries and other aromatics. This gin constitutes approximately 56½% of respondent's total business.

Rectifying, in the distilled spirits rectifying industry, means the mixing of whiskies of different ages and types, or the mixing of ages or types, or the mixing of other ingredients with whiskies, but reducing proof of whisky by adding water is not rectifying. Rectifiers also blend whiskies with neutral spirits (grain alcohol). Some rectifiers blend it with cane.

Many distillers operate a separate establishment 600 feet or more away from their distilleries, known as a rectifying plant, wherein they operate in the same manner as described above for a rectifier, sometimes exclusively with spirits of their own distillation and often with spirits purchased from other distillers, or both. Some distilleries have a tax-paid bottling room on the distillery bonded premises, wherein their distilled spirits are bottled straight as they come from the still or in a bonded warehouse after aging or after reduction of proof. Any rectifying done by a distillery, however, must be done in his rectifying plant under his rectifier's permit. On all bottled liquors, whether bottled at the distillery rectifying plant or any other rectifying plant, appear the words "bottled" or "blended," as the case may be, "by the ----- Company." If the distilled spirits therein contained are bottled by a distiller, either in his distillery, or are spirits of his own distillation bottled in his rectifying plant as straight whiskey, the distiller may and does on said bottles, put "distilled and bottled by ----- Company." Finally, blown in the bottom of each bottle is a symbol, consisting of a letter followed by a number, identifying the bottler. For instance, there is a "D" for a distiller and an "R" for a rectifier. The number following the said letter corresponds with the distiller's or rectifier's basic permit. Thus, "R-46" designated the Kienzler Distilling Corporation, a rectifier. A distiller who also operates a rectifying plant and who has both kinds of permits may use either symbol, depending upon whether the liquor contained in the bottle was produced and bottled under a distiller's or a rectifier's permit.

This respondent does not now and never had produced or manufactured distilled spirits of any kind from mash or raw materials, although its charter would authorize it so to do. Its rectifier's permit authorized it to engage in the business of rectifying and blending, and is conditioned upon compliance by respondent with all applicable regulations made pursuant to law, which are or may hereafter be in force.

Section 3247 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C. A. Tit. 26, Sec. 1158 (a)) regulating Internal Revenue defines a "distiller" as follows:

Every person who produces distilled spirits or who brews or makes a mash, wort, or wash fit for distillation or for the production of spirits, or who, by any process of evaporation, separates alcoholic spirits from any substance, or who, making or keeping, mash, wort, or wash, has also in his possession or use a still, shall be regarded as a distiller.

Section 3244 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C. A. Tit. 26, Sec. 1398 (f)) defines a "rectifier" as follows:

Every person who rectifies, purifies, or refines distilled spirits or wine by any process other than by original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash, through continuous enclosed vessels or pipes, until the manufacture thereof is complete, and every wholesaler and liquor dealer who has in his possession any still or leach tub, or who keeps any other apparatus for the purpose of refining in any manner distilled spirits, and every person who without rectifying, purifying, or refining distilled spirits, shall, by mixing such spirits, wine, or other liquor with any materials, manufacture any spurious imitation, or compound liquors for sale under the name of whiskey, brandy, gin, rum, wine spirits, cordials, or wine bitters, or any other name, shall be regarded as a rectifier, and that being engaged in the business of rectifying, etc.

The rectification of alcoholic spirits by this respondent as aforesaid in the production of its gin, does not make or constitute respondent a distiller or a distilling company as defined by Sec. 3247 of the Revised Statutes of the United States regulating Internal Revenue.

PAR. 3. The testimony of those having long experience in both the distilled spirits rectifying industry and the distilling industry, established that the foregoing rectification of alcoholic spirits by redistillation over juniper berries and other aromatics in the production of gin does not make or constitute this respondent a distilling company in the sense commonly understood by the liquor industry. There were also called a large number of witnesses who were lay-members of the purchasing public, 22 in number, and with few exceptions their testimony was to the effect that by such terms as "distilling" or "distillery" or "distiller" when used in the trade or corporate name of a concern handling alcoholic beverages, the public understands that that concern is engaged in the initial distilling process of producing spirituous or alcoholic beverages from fermented grain or mash, and that they have a preference for a distillery-bottled package over one bottled by a rectifier.

The Commission finds that for a long period of time the word "distilling" when used in connection with the liquor industry and with the products thereof has had and still has a definite significance and meaning to the minds of wholesalers and retailers in such industry and to the ultimate purchasing public, to wit, the manufacturing of spirituous liquors by an original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash, through continuous closed pipes and vessels until the manufacture thereof is complete, and a substantial portion of the purchasing public prefers to buy spirituous liquors bottled and prepared by distillers.

PAR. 4. In the course and conduct of its business as aforesaid by the use of the word "distilling" in its corporate name, printed on its stationery, catalogs and on the labels attached to the bottles in which it sells and ships its said products, and in various other ways, respondent represents to its customers and furnishes them with the means of representing to their vendees, both retailers and the ultimate consuming public, that it is a distiller and that the said whiskies, gins, cordials, brandies, and other alcoholic beverages therein contained were by it manufactured through the process of distillation from mash, wort, or wash, when, as a matter of fact, respondent is not a distiller, does not distill the said whiskies, gins and other alcoholic beverages by it so bottled, labeled, sold, and transported, and merely by the use of a still operated by it as aforesaid in the production of gin does not distill the whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages by it so bottled, labeled, sold, and transported in the sense in which the word "distilled" is commonly accepted and understood by those engaged in the liquor trade and the public. Respondent does not own, operate, or control any place or places where spirituous beverages are manufactured by a process of original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash.

PAR. 5. There are among the competitors of respondent engaged in the sale of spirituous beverages as mentioned in paragraph 1 hereof corporations, firms, partnerships, and individuals who manufacture and distill from mash, wort or wash, whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages sold by them and who truthfully use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distillers," or "distilling" as a part of their corporate or trade names and on their stationery, catalogs and on the labels of the bottles in which they sell and ship such products. There are also among such competitors corporations, firms, partnerships and individuals engaged in the business of purchasing, rectifying, blending, bottling, and selling whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages who do not use the words "distillery," "distilleries," "distilling," or "distillers" as a part of their corporate or trade names, nor on their stationery, catalogs, advertising, nor on the labels attached to the bottles in which they sell and ship their said products.

PAR. 6. The representations by respondent, as set forth in paragraph 4 hereof, have the capacity and tendency to and do mislead and deceive dealers and the purchasing public into the beliefs that respondent is a distiller or distilling company in the ordinarily accepted sense of those terms, and that the whiskies, gins, and other spirituous beverages sold by respondent are manufactured or distilled by it from mash, wort or wash by one continuous process, and have the capacity and tendency to and do induce dealers and the purchasing public, acting in such beliefs, to purchase the whiskies, gins, and other alcoholic beverages rectified and bottled by the respondent. The Commission finds that the whole situation in this industry is such that the foregoing representations have a distinct tendency to give respondent what amounts to unfair competitive advantage over those of its competitors who do not, by the use of such terms in their trade or corporate names, represent that the package of alcoholic liquor offered to the retailer and in turn to the consumer, is a distillery bottled package and this in turn tends to divert trade to respondent from such competitors and thereby respondent does substantial injury to competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 7. Because of existing regulations promulgated under the Federal Alcohol Administration Act approved August 29, 1935 (49 Stat. 977), providing that rectifiers who redistill purchased alcohol over juniper berries and other aromatics may label such resulting product "Distilled Gin," and requiring that the labels state who distilled it, the Commission has excepted gins produced by respondent by redistillation of alcohol over juniper berries and other aromatics from the prohibitions of its order.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent Kienzler Distilling Corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, Kienzler Distilling Corporation, its officers, representatives, agents, and employees, in connection with the offering for sale or sale and distribution by it in interstate commerce or in the District of Columbia of whiskies, gins, or other spirituous beverages (except gins produced by it through a process of rectification whereby alcohol purchased but not produced by respondent is redistilled over juniper berries and other aromatics) do cease and desist from:

Representing, through the use of the word "distilling" in its corporate name, on its stationery, advertising, or on the labels attached to the bottles in which it sells and ships said products, or in any other way by word or words of like import, (a) that it is a distiller of whiskies, gins, or other spirituous beverages; or (b) that the said whiskies, gins, or other spirituous beverages were by it manufactured through the process of distillation; or (c) that it owns, operates, or controls a place or places where any such products are by it manufactured by a process of original and continuous distillation from mash, wort, or wash, through continuous closed pipes and vessels until the manufacture thereof is completed, unless and until respondent shall actually own, operate, or control such a place or places.

It is further ordered, That the said respondent within 60 days from and after the date of the service upon it of this order, shall file with the Commission a report or reports in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it is complying and has complied with the order to cease and desist hereinabove set forth.

H. N. HEUSNER & SON

COMPLAINT, FINDINGS, AND ORDER IN REGARD TO THE ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 5 OF AN ACT OF CONGRESS APPROVED SEPT. 28, 1914

Docket 2355. Complaint, Apr. 6, 1935—Decision May 29, 1937

Where a corporation engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution of cigars to wholesalers, cigar stores and drug stores in various parts of the United States, including two brands respectively and usually sold at retail at a price of two for five cents and five cents apiece, and wholly composed of domestic tobacco grown in the United States—

Respectively designated, branded and sold said cigars as "Heusner's Original Havana Smokers" and "Martinez Havana Smokers," notwithstanding fact said cigars were not made of Cuban or Havana tobacco, as (1) long understood from term "Havana" by the cigar purchasing and consuming public of the United States and by cigar manufacturers and dealers throughout the United States as meaning and designating tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba and finest quality of tobacco for cigar purposes, and (2) as designating cigars made from such tobacco, preferably purchased as more desirable by many cigar dealers and many of the consuming public;

With capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that said cigars were composed of tobacco grown on aforesaid island, and with result that many members of the public, acting in such erroneous belief induced by such misrepresentations, bought said cigars, and with capacity and tendency thereby to divert unfairly to it trade of competitors engaged in sale in commerce of cigars composed of Havana tobacco, and also of cigars composed of tobacco grown in the United States, and who truthfully advertise and represent their said products; to the substantial injury of competition in commerce:

Held, That such acts and practices were to the prejudice of the public and competitors and constituted unfair methods of competition.

Before Mr. John L. Hornor, trial examiner.

Mr. DeWitt T. Puckett for the Commission.

Mr. John Walsh, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission, having reason to believe that H. N. Heusner & Son, a corporation, hereinafter called respondent, has been and is using unfair methods of competition in commerce as "commerce" is defined in said act, and it appearing to said Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint stating its charges in that respect as follows:

Complaint

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent is now, and since 1918 has been, a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, with its principal office and place of business at Hanover, in said State. It is now and since its organization has been engaged in the manufacture of cigars and in the sale thereof between and among the various States of the United States to retailers thereof. In the course and conduct of its business it ships the cigars manufactured by it, when sold, to the purchasers thereof located in the various States of the United States, and there is now, and has been for more than two years last past, a constant current of trade and commerce by respondent in such cigars. In the course and conduct of its said business respondent is now, and at all times since its organization has been, in substantial competition with other corporations and with individuals, firms and partnerships engaged in the sale of cigars between and among the various States of the United States.

PAR. 2. For many years prior to the organization of respondent, and at all times since its organization, tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba and cigars made from such tobacco have been referred to, sold, purchased and designated as "Havana" tobacco and as "Havana" cigars, respectively, by the trade and the purchasing public throughout the United States. The word "Havana," when applied to tobacco, has for many years signified and meant to the trade and purchasing public of the United States that such tobacco was grown on the Island of Cuba. The word "Havana" when applied to cigars has for many years signified and meant to the trade and purchasing public of the United States that such cigars are made of tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba. For many years many retailers and the purchasing public throughout the United States have preferred and still prefer to purchase cigars made or composed in whole or in greater part of tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba, which cigars, as hereinbefore stated, are known and designated as "Havana" cigars, and which tobacco, as hereinbefore stated, is known and designated as "Havana" tobacco, and such retailers and purchasing public have considered and still consider such Havana tobacco to be superior in quality or value to tobacco grown elsewhere than on the Island of Cuba, and Havana cigars to be superior in quality or value to cigars made of tobacco grown elsewhere than on the Island of Cuba.

PAR. 3. In the course and conduct of its business hereinbefore described, respondent, since 1918 has caused, and still causes, certain of the cigars manufactured by it to be designated, branded or labeled with the words "Havana Smokers." Such cigars it has caused and still causes to be packed in box containers, on the inner and outer face of which have appeared and still appear the imprint, "2 for 5¢ Martinez Bigger and Better Havana Smokers," or "Heusner's Original Havana Smokers," which such cigars, so branded, labeled, and packed, the respondent has sold and still sells between and among the various States of the United States, as described in paragraph 1 hereof. In truth and in fact, such cigars have not been made and are not made wholly, or in greater part, of tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba.

PAR. 4. The use by respondent of the words "Havana Smokers," "2 for 5¢ Bigger and Better Havana Smokers," and "Heusner's Original Havana Smokers," in describing, designating, labeling, and branding such cigars, is false and misleading and has the capacity to mislead and deceive retailers and the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that such cigars are composed wholly or in greater part of tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba and to purchase such cigars in such erroneous belief. The aforesaid use by respondent of the word "Havana" places in the hands of retailers the means of deceiving the purchasing public into the belief that the cigars so labeled, branded, and designated, are made wholly or in greater part of tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba. The aforesaid misrepresentations in designating, labeling, and branding such cigars has tended to and does divert, and has diverted trade to respondent from its competitors engaged in the sale of cigars between and among, the various States of the United States who truthfully designate, brand, and label the cigars manufactured and sold by them. Thereby, substantial injury is done by respondent to substantial competition in interstate commerce.

PAR. 5. The acts and practices set forth in paragraph 3 hereof are all to the prejudice of the public and respondent's competitors and constitute unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

REPORT, FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS, AND ORDER

Pursuant to the provisions of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," the Federal Trade Commission on April 6, 1935, issued and served its complaint in this proceeding upon respondent H. N. Heusner & Son, a corporation, charging it with the use of unfair methods of competition in commerce in violation of the provisions of said act.

After the issuance of said complaint, and the filing of respondent's answer thereto, testimony and other evidence in support of the allegations of said complaint were introduced by DeWitt T. Puckett, attorney for the Commission, before John L. Hornor, an examiner of the Commission theretofore duly designated by it, and in opposition to the allegations of the complaint by Joseph G. Denny, Jr., attorney for the respondent; and said testimony and other evidence were duly recorded and filed in the office of the Commission. Thereafter the proceeding regularly came on for final hearing before the Commission on the said complaint, the answer thereto, testimony and other evidence, briefs in support of the complaint and in opposition thereto, and the oral arguments of counsel aforesaid; and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises, finds that this proceeding is in the interest of the public, and makes this its findings as to the facts and its conclusion drawn therefrom:

FINDINGS AS TO THE FACTS

PARAGRAPH 1. The respondent, H. N. Heusner & Son, is a Pennsylvania corporation organized in 1918, with its principal office and place of business located at Hanover, Pa. Respondent is now, and since the date of its incorporation has been, engaged in the business of manufacturing various brands of cigars and selling and distributing the same to wholesale dealers, cigar stores and drug stores located in various parts of the United States. The said cigars are manufactured by respondent in Hanover, Pa., where they are packed, branded, and labeled by respondent for sale and distribution by it to the purchasing and consuming public of the United States. In consummating such sales and in distributing such products the respondent causes the cigars so sold to be transported and delivered from its place of business in Hanover, Pa., through and into various other States of the United States to the respective purchasers thereof at their respective points of location. In the course and conduct of its business the respondent has been, and is now, engaged in direct and substantial competition with various corporations, partnerships, and individuals likewise engaged in the sale and distribution of cigars in commerce between and among the various States of the United States and within the District of Columbia.

PAR. 2. The cigar originated in the Spanish West Indies. The finest quality of tobacco for cigar purposes is grown in Cuba, not far from the city of Havana. The word "Havana," also spelled "Habana," is the name and designation of the tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba, which name and designation is and has been since time immemorial used and understood by the cigar-purchasing and consuming public of the United States, and by cigar manufacturers and dealers throughout the United States, as meaning and designating tobacco which has been grown on the Island of Cuba. Such Havana tobacco has the reputation among the cigar consuming and purchasing public of the United States as being cigar tobacco of highest quality and excellence, and cigars made in whole or in part from said tobacco are in large demand throughout the United States. Many of the cigar dealers and many of the consuming public of the United States prefer to purchase cigars containing Havana tobacco and have believed, and still believe, that the use of such Havana tobacco in cigars adds to and increases the quality and desirability of such cigars.

Findings

For many years cigars made of Cuban and Havana tobacco were manufactured in the city of Havana, Cuba, and shipped therefrom to the various cigar markets of the world. Consequently such cigars became known in the trade and to the public as Havana cigars and Cuban cigars, the terms being used interchangeably and synonymously. In fact, the term "Havana" has been used for many years to designate or brand said cigars and has come to mean, when applied to cigars, cigars manufactured from tobacco grown in the Island of Cuba.

Cuban tobacco has long been imported into the United States and widely and extensively used and consumed therein in cigars manufactured from such tobacco.

During the past several years factories making cigars from Havana tobacco have been located in the United States, principally in and near the city of Tampa, Fla. Cigars manufactured at those factories from tobacco grown in the Island of Cuba and imported into the United States are also known in the trade and to the public as Havana cigars.

PAR. 3. Among the cigars manufactured and sold by respondent, as aforesaid, is a type of cigar designated, labeled, and branded "Havana Smokers."

The brand name "Havana Smokers" appears on the cigar band that surrounds each cigar. The containers in which the said cigars are packed, offered for sale, and sold are the usual and customary cigar boxes. Imprinted on the outside and inside of the lid of one type of said boxes appears the following:

2 for 5

2 for 5

HEUSNER'S ORIGINAL

1370

Findings

The expression "Heusner's Havana Smokers" also appears on the edge and one end of said box.

On both sides of the lid, the front edge and one end of another type of box in which said cigars are packed, offered for sale and sold is imprinted the following:

MARTINEZ

SMOKERS

The cigars designated, branded and sold by respondent as "Heusner's Original Havana Smokers" are usually resold by the retail dealer at the price of two for five cents. The cigars designated, branded and sold by respondent as "Martinez Havana Smokers" are usually resold by the retailers at five cents each.

PAR. 4. In truth and in fact respondent's cigars branded, labeled, described and advertised, respectively, as "Heusner's Havana Smokers" and as "Martinez Havana Smokers", and sold by the respondent and by dealers to the purchasing and consuming public, as hereinbefore described, do not contain Havana tobacco, or tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba, and they have not at any time contained such tobacco. Such cigars are, and have been manufactured entirely from, and wholly composed of, domestic tobacco grown in the United States.

PAR. 5. The use of the aforesaid false and misleading representations and practices on the part of the respondent in the sale and offering for sale of its cigars branded and labelled with the word "Havana" has had, and now has, the capacity and tendency to mislead and deceive a substantial portion of the purchasing public into the erroneous belief that respondent's said cigars are composed of tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba. Acting under such erroneous belief, induced by the various misrepresentations of the respondent as herein detailed, many members of the public have purchased respondent's cigars. The aforesaid representations and practices on the part of respondent have and have had the capacity and tendency to unfairly divert to respondent the trade of competitors engaged in selling in interstate commerce cigars composed of Havana tobacco and likewise cigars composed of tobacco grown in the United States, and who truthfully advertise and represent their cigars. As a result thereof, substantial injury has been done, and is being done, by respondent to competition in commerce, among and between the various States of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

Order

24 F. T. C.

CONCLUSION

The aforesaid acts and practices of the respondent, H. N. Heusner & Son, a corporation, are to the prejudice of the public and of respondent's competitors, and constitute unfair methods of competition in commerce, within the intent and meaning of Section 5 of an Act of Congress, approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes."

ORDER TO CEASE AND DESIST

It is ordered, That the respondent, H. N. Heusner & Son, a corporation, its officers, representatives, employees, or agents, individual or corporate, in connection with the offering for sale, sale and distribution of cigars in interstate commerce and in the District of Columbia, do forthwith cease and desist from:

Representing, through the use of the words "Havana" or "Habana," alone or in conjunction with any other word or words, or through the use of any other words of similar import and effect, or in any other manner, that cigars not manufactured entirely from tobacco grown on the Island of Cuba are Havana Cigars.

It is further ordered, That the respondent shall, within 60 days after service upon it of this order, file with the Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this order.

ORDERS OF DISMISSAL, OR CLOSING CASE, ETC.

C. ROSENBLUM, INC. Complaint, June 17, 1935. Order, December 2, 1936. (Docket 2436.)

THE NASH MOTORS' CO. Complaint, November 30, 1936. Order, May 5, 1937. (Docket 3000.)

Charge: Advertising falsely or misleadingly as to nature and terms; in connection with deferred or time-payment plan sale of motor vehicles, and in the use, as alleged in the complaint and set forth in the approved stipulation as to the facts and agreement to cease and desist, of the following language in advertising the financing plan or method in question, namely:

New C. I. T. 6% Budget Plan

New 6%

C. I. T. TIME

PAYMENT PLAN

Convenient 6% Terms.

Dismissed by the following order:

This matter coming on to be heard by the Commission and it appearing that the respondent The Nash Motors' Company has entered into a stipulation whereby it agreed to cease and desist from separately, concertedly, cooperatively or otherwise using any advertising matter or furnishing to authorized dealers or distributors any advertising matter in which the expression "6%" is used, without equally prominent use, in direct conjunction therewith, of explanatory language which makes it clear that the said 6% does not refer to or indicate 6% per annum, simple interest, and the Commission having duly considered the same, and being now fully advised in the premises;

It is ordered, That the complaint herein be, and the same hereby is, dismissed.

Mr. Daniel J. Murphy for the Commission.

Davies, Richberg, Beebe, Busick & Richardson, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

NOTE.—Stipulation referred to (submitted, executed, by Nash-Kelvinator Corporation by letter authorizing, "in the interest of accuracy", certain charges "to cover both the merger of The Nash Motors Company with the Kelvinator Corporation under the name 'Nash-Kelvinator Corporation' and also to cover the fact that our business dealings have been with subsidiaries of Commercial Investment Trust Corporation", as there set forth), after preliminary recitals detailing investigation and complaint in the premises and that dismissal of such complaint, subject to execution of stipulation in question, is within the public interest, etc., and after setting forth stipulation and agreement between Commission and the respondent to dispose of the matter without necessity of taking testimony, etc., and corporate status of respondent Nash Motors' Co., its business as a motor manufacturer selling to dealers and distributors, etc., and adoption, in cooperation with its various authorized dealers, of the plan in question through the Commercial Investment Trust Corporation, and advertisement thereof in the language above set forth by respondent motor company and its authorized dealers and distributors, proceeds as follows (in common with the approved stipulations agreed to in the other similar cases hereinafter set forth, and dismissed by the Commission):

The said advertising was the outgrowth of the following facts:

Prior to the adoption of the said plan or method of finance as set forth in this proceeding, the general practice in the sale of motor vehicles in the United States on an instalment basis involved the use of fixed schedules of financing charges supplied to the dealer by the finance companies. These tables were stated in terms of dollars and cents, and there existed no formula by which the retail purchaser of the motor vehicle on an instalment basis could check the accuracy of the added charges. Under this system, for the computation of instalment financing charges, it was possible for certain dealers to enhance financing charges to the purchaser without the purchaser's knowledge, and such practices were at times employed by the dealer. To eliminate this practice and to afford to the retail purchaser a convenient means by which he could himself compute the correct amount of the financing charge, the so-called "6% Plan" was adopted by one of the Motor Companies in conjunction with a Finance Company; and by force of competition, the plan was adopted throughout the motor vehicle industry in the United States. This plan offered lower financing charges for the purchase of motor vehicles on an instalment basis than had ever theretofore been generally offered.

The purpose of the respondent in the employment of the advertising of the above quoted was to acquaint the retail purchaser of motor vehicles, first, with the fact that a lower financing charge was being offered, and, second, with the method of computation of the correct financing charge which he should pay on an instalment contract; and in the use of the said advertising the respondent did not contemplate that it would be construed to mean 6% simple interest per annum.

Certain purchasers and prospective purchasers did interpret and understand that the advertising of said finance plan or method as above set forth did contemplate a simple interest charge at 6% per annum upon the deferred and unpaid balance of the purchase price of motor vehicles, and this did cause such members of the purchasing public to buy motor vehicles in that belief.

For competitive reasons the type of advertising above quoted was discontinued before the issuance of the complaint herein.

The respondent hereby stipulates and agrees, To cease and desist from separately, concertedly, cooperatively or otherwise using any advertising matter or furnishing to authorized dealers or distributors any advertising matter in which the expression "6%" is used, without equally prominent use, in direct conjunction therewith, of explanatory language which makes it clear that the said 6% does not refer to or indicate 6% per annum, simple interest.

And it is further stipulated and agreed, That the respondent will not at any time use or employ any advertising, which, regardless of lack of any deceptive intent, may reasonably be construed as indicating that the additional cost of purchasing on time payments is only 6% or any other percent simple interest per annum on unpaid balances of the purchase price of motor vehicles, if such is not the fact.

It is also stipulated and agreed, That if the said respondent should ever resume or indulge in any of the practices, the use of which it has herein agreed to cease and desist, this stipulation of facts may be used in evidence against it in any proceeding that the Commission may institute against the said respondent.

MEMORANDA

Commission, as of May 5, 1937, by similar orders based on substantially similar stipulations,¹ due allowance for varying corporate identities, etc., and also for some variance in description of plan in question, dismissed complaints in five cases in which charge was, in substance, the same, in which complaints issued December 1, 1936, and in which Commission was represented by Mr. Daniel J. Murphy, and respondents by Davies, Richberg, Beebe, Busick & Richardson, of Washington, D. C., along with Foster & Cameron, of Lansing, Mich., for Reo Motor Car Co., and Bodman, Longley Bogle, Middleton & Farley, of Detroit, Mich., for Packard Motor Car Co.

Said cases, together with the language variously employed in describing plan in question, as set forth in the respective stipulations (thereafter similar to that in the Nash case), follow: ²

¹ As in the stipulation in the Nash case, hereinbefore referred to, three of the stipulations, namely, those having to do with the Graham-Palge, Hudson and Reo cases, in which Commercial Investment Trust Corporation was involved, had explanatory letters setting forth that said corporation was not an operating concern, but that its various subsidiaries were the concerns which conducted business, and suggesting and authorizing, therefore, certain changes on such account.

² In Ford Motor Co. and Universal Credit Corp., Docket 3005, in which complaint issued as of December 1, 1936, said complaint was on May 5, 1937, dismissed as to Universal Credit Corp., it appearing that said last named corporation had entered into a stipulation, as hereinabove set forth, agreeing to cease and desist from using such representations as to the 6% terms, as there stated, namely:

"With the usual low down-payment, $25 a month buys any type of new Ford car. Financing at ½ of 1% a month, or 6% for twelve months. You receive insurance at conference rates. Complete fire and theft insurance—and $50 deductible collision, and

STIPULATIONS ¹

DIGEST OF GENERAL STIPULATIONS OF THE FACTS AND AGREEMENTS TO CEASE AND DESIST ²

1882. False and Misleading Advertising—Auxiliary Lubricant.—Albert S. Braaten, an individual engaged in the compounding of an auxiliary lubricant with a colloidal graphite base, intended to be added to ordinary lubricating oils and motor fuel oils; and in the sale and distribution of said product under the trade name of "More-X-Super-Charged Colloidal Graphite", in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Albert S. Braaten in soliciting the sale of and selling his lubricant in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use in his advertisements or advertising matter of statements or representations to the effect that by the use of "More-X" friction has been or can be reduced as much as 50%, or in any other exaggerated degree not warranted by experiments conducted under scientific test conditions; and/or that the quantity of oil required to be used is reduced; that by the use of "More-X" wear or repairs are stopped; that by the use of "More-X" it is possible for a motor to function for phenomenal lengths of time, without damage, in change or temporary failure of the oil supply; that the product, "More-X", defies heat and lubricates up to 7500° F.; that "More-X" penetrates or adheres to the metal surfaces of motors, or penetrates the pores; the use of extravagant and misleading claims of superiority of "More-X" over other similar lubricants. (Dec. 1, 1936.)

The digests published herewith cover those accepted by the Commission during the period covered by this volume, namely, Dec. 1, 1936, to May 31, 1937, inclusive. Digests of all previous stipulations of this character accepted by the Commission, that is, numbers 1 to 1881, inclusive, may be found in vols. 10 to 23 of the Commission's decisions.

² In the interest of brevity there is omitted from the published digest of the stipulation the agreement under which the stipulating respondent or respondents, as the case may be, agree that should such stipulating respondent or respondents, "ever resume or indulge in any of the practices in question, this said stipulation of the facts may be used in evidence" against such respondent or respondents, as the case may be, "in the trial of the complaint which the Commission may issue."

1883. False and Misleading Trade or Corporate Name and Advertising—Air Conditioning Device.—Gaylord Manufacturing Co., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of a multiple speed fan having a so-called “purifying” attachment composed of two electrically heated devices which vaporize chemicals that are introduced into the air current by the circulator, the chemicals consisting of chlorine and formaldehyde whose strong odor is neutralized by perfume, and in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

The words “air conditioning” signify the simultaneous control by a mechanical device of various factors affecting both the physical and chemical conditions of the atmosphere within a given structure as a room, building, and the like, said factors including temperature, humidity and motion or circulation of the air within the structure. A device which does not control each and all of the designated factors is not properly represented, designated or referred to as an air conditioner within the purview and meaning of these words as generally understood by the trade and public.

Gaylord Manufacturing Co. agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertising matter of the words “air conditioning” as descriptive of its device designated “Fresh’nd-Aire” when in fact, said device is not such as falls within the class of air conditioners according to the understanding of the trade and purchasing public; and from the use in its advertising of the words “air conditioning” either alone or in connection or conjunction with the word “system” or “unit” or “features” or with any other word or words or in any way so as to import or imply that said device will perform air conditioning, that is to say, that it simultaneously controls by a mechanical device the various factors affecting both the physical and chemical conditions of the atmosphere within any given structure, as a room, building, or the like, said factors including temperature, humidity and motion or circulation. Said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertising of the word “sterilizes” so as to import or imply that its device, actually destroys all germs within the space in which said device is operated; of statements such as “Fresh’nd-Aire Alone Accomplishes Cooling Effects of 8 to 10 degrees Lower Temperatures in Summer” or “Real Cooling Comfort” so as to import or imply that said device, when operated within a room or other enclosed space gives the effect of reducing temperature in such space from 8 to 10 degrees. The said corporation further agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word “manufacturing” as part of its corporate or trade name under which to carry on its said business; and from the use of the word “manufacturing” in any way so as to import or imply that the said corporation actually owns and operates or directly and absolutely controls a plant or factory wherein the products which it sells and distributes in interstate commerce are made or manufactured, when such is not the fact. (Dec. 1, 1936.)

1884. False and Misleading Advertising—Courses of Instruction and Textbooks.—Oxford Institute, a corporation engaged in conducting a correspondence school and in the sale in interstate commerce of courses of instruction and textbooks in commercial branches, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Oxford Institute, in soliciting the sale of and selling its courses of instruction and textbooks in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from stating or representing, directly or indirectly, through its salesmen or other representatives, by means of its advertisements or advertising matter circulated in interstate commerce, or in any other way that its prospective subscribers are selected or designated by leading people in their communities; that the opportunity to become a subscriber to its course is limited to one, or to a small number in each community, when no such limitation is observed; that an arrangement has been made with a local teacher to give examinations and instructions, when such is not the fact; that the Oxford Institute is a college institution; that the Institute will defer the payment of balances due for tuition until the completion of the course, when such is not the fact; that the Institute employs students as its local representative; that where more than one student is enrolled in a community, the payments made by the extra ones would be refunded; that the completion of the Oxford Institute's course would give a student two years college credit in business administration; that the textbooks furnished subscribers would, if purchased elsewhere, cost more than was asked for the complete course; that subscribers paid for the textbooks; that students who passed their examination with the Oxford Institute were in a position to pass a university entrance examination; that the Oxford Institute's examination papers are examined and corrected only by professors holding a university degree; failing and refusing to make refunds of partial payments on account of subscriptions in cases where agents have made representations regarding the time of payment of deferred amount by which the Oxford Institute is unwilling to abide; publishing and distributing the lecture by Dr. Russell H. Conwell, entitled "Acres of Diamonds", so dressed as to make it appear that the same was delivered for the benefit of students of the Oxford Institute; and/or without disclosing that the same was not so delivered. (Dec. 2, 1936.)

1885. Disparaging and False and Misleading Advertising—Razor Blades.—Cooperative Distributors, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of razor blades, as well as other articles of merchandise in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, firms, individuals, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Cooperative Distributors, Inc., in offering for sale and selling its razor blades in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertising matter or otherwise of statements or representations to the effect that it has made tests of the blades of all blade manufacturers in America and/or that not one of such blades was good or dependable; and from the use of said statement or representation or of any other statement or representation of similar meaning or import, the effect of which is to unwarrantably disparage the products of competitors. The said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements of the statement "Samples were sent to 1200 shaver-consumers for testing. This time more than 90% reported them eminently satisfactory" when in fact said statement exaggerates the percentage or number of people who reported and/or misconstrues the answers of many of those who did report. The said corporation further agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertising of all statements such as "Blades in some cases were being made purposely bad in order to increase turnover and sky-rocket sales", when in fact such statement is not warranted by the facts. (Dec. 2, 1936.)

1886. False and Misleading Brands or Labels and Advertising—Soaps.—George F. Dodge, an individual, engaged in the sale and distribution, in interstate commerce, of soaps in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

George F. Dodge, in soliciting the sale of and selling his products in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words "olive oil" on brands, labels, or other advertisements and advertising matter, to describe or designate products the fatty content of which is not composed wholly of olive oil; and from the use of the word "olive" in any way which may import or imply that the fatty content of the products so described and designated is composed wholly of olive oil, when such is not the fact; the use of the words "soap makers" and/or "factory" on letterheads or other advertisements and advertising matter; and from the use of the words "soap makers" and/or "factory" or either of them in any way which may import or imply that he owns, controls, or operates a factory wherein the products which he sells and distributes are manufactured, when such is not the fact. (Dec. 7, 1936.)

1887. False and Misleading Brands or Labels and Prices—Toilet Goods, Etc.—Gero Products, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing toilet goods, insecticides, and deodorants, and in the sale and distribution of its said products in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Gero Products, Inc., in soliciting the sale of and selling its products in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use on the cartons in which said products are packed, of exaggerated or misleading statements or representations concerning the value of said products or the price at which said products are sold or are intended to be sold in the usual course of trade. (Dec. 4, 1936.)

1888. False and Misleading Brands or Labels and Advertising—Groceries.—B. H. Rudo and Isadore Rudo, copartners, trading under the names and styles of B. H. The theory that the presence of certain mineral salts is essential to a healthy condition of the human body had as one of its first exponents Dr. Wilhelm Heinrich Schuessler, a German physician who, in 1884, published a book on "The Biochemic System of Medicine." From this beginning, the next step—the belief that all afflictions of the human body are due to a deficiency of cell salts—grew up, and resulted in the adoption of the system known as "Biochemic Therapy" by a few physicians and in the opening of a few establishments for the compounding of remedies for use by such physicians and, in some cases, for self-administration by patients, based upon the "Biochemic" system of diagnosis and medication. Starting with the premise that, from the bodily condition, any deficiencies or weaknesses could be referred to the lack of mineral salts in the cells of the body, a system of diagnosis and prescription was deduced. This school of medical practice has never received general recognition, and the theory that the diseases and weaknesses of the human body can be alleviated or cured by the use of mineral salts alone has never been recognized or received the adherence of the medical fraternity or of scientific men generally.

Munsell's Mineral Products Co., in soliciting the sale of and selling its said products in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from stating or representing, directly or indirectly, that its said products, alone, are a specific or remedy for any human ailment; saving and reserving its right to state and represent that said products are beneficial to the general health in cases where they may supply a deficiency of any mineral salt which may be lacking and which has produced, or is tending to produce, a diseased condition; stating or representing, directly or indirectly, that its said products are safe for self-medication, while the same contain any drug or ingredient, such as fluoride, in such quantity which may prove harmful when taken otherwise than under the direction of a physician. (Dec. 28, 1936.)

1910. False and Misleading Trade or Corporate Name and Brands or Labels—Extracts.—Alfredo Wanderlingh, an individual trading as Venus Importing Co., engaged as a jobber and retailer in the sale and distribution of extracts in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Harrison, in soliciting the sale of and selling their products in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use in their advertising or printed matter of the word "gold," either alone or in connection with the letters "en" or with any other letters, word, or words, as descriptive of their products, or of any part or parts thereof, which are not composed of gold; and from the use of the word "gold" in any way so as to import or imply that said products are composed of gold, either in whole or in substantial part, when such is not the fact. (Jan. 5, 1937.)

1916. False and Misleading Trade or Corporate Name and Advertising—Courses of Instruction in Electric Refrigeration and Air Conditioning.—Refrigeration Engineering Institute, Inc., a corporation engaged in conducting a school for study and training in electric refrigeration and air conditioning, and in the sale of courses, textbooks, and lessons in said branches, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Refrigeration Engineering Institute, Inc., in soliciting the sale of and selling its textbook and courses of instruction in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Institute" as a part of or in connection with its corporate or trade name; and from the use of the word "Institute" or "Institution" in any way which may import or imply that it is an organization of members of the refrigeration engineering industry for the purpose of considering and solving the problems thereof; advertising its business or courses of study under the classification of "Help Wanted," or "Male Help Wanted"; the use of statements or representations importing or implying that it is in a position to offer its subscribers employment; the use of its advertisements or in talks of its solicitors of words importing or implying that only one subscriber to its textbook and courses of study is being sought in each community, when such is not the fact; the use of statements or representations that its students are "selected," or that they are a "selected group," when such is not the fact; the use in advertisements or advertising matter, or in sales talks by its agents, of statements or representations importing or implying that it is an organization of members of the refrigeration engineering industry, that such members are cooperating in carrying on the school, or that they are glad to employ its graduates, or otherwise lend such school their aid, support and cooperation in any way contrary to the facts. (Jan. 6, 1937.)

1917. False and Misleading Advertising—Lipstick.—Northam Warren Sales Co., engaged in the business of manufacturing primarily hand and manicure aids and in the sale and distribution of said products in interstate commerce, and also in the sale of an item designated "Cutex Lipstick," in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Northam Warren Sales Co., in offering for sale and selling its lipstick product in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "nourishing" either independently or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words so as to import or imply that the aforesaid product nourishes or feeds the lips to which the same is externally applied and/or that the lips to which the said product is so applied are caused to assume a smooth, moist, velvety, non-greasy appearance as the result of nourishment supplied to the lips by such application thereto of said product. (Jan. 7, 1937.)

1918. False and Misleading Brands or Labels and Advertising—Perfumes.—Laure Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of perfumes in interstate commerce in competition with other corporations, firms, individuals, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Laure Co., Inc., in offering for sale and selling its products in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Paris" alone or in connection with any other word or words, or with the purported name "Pierre L'Vergne," "Cavelle et Cie," or "Henri" in the form of a signature, on display or shipping cartons or packages containing said products, or in advertising or printed matter relating to said products, so as to import or imply, or in any way which may tend to convey the belief by purchasers, that said products are compounded or manufactured in Paris, France, and/or that the said Laure Company, Inc. has an office or offices at said place, when such is not the fact. The said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from the use of the purported name "Pierre L'Vergne," "Cavelle et Cie," "Henri," or other name or names typical of France, or of any inscriptions or statements in the French language, in or upon the packages or cartons containing said products, or in advertising or printed matter relating to said products, without conspicuously showing that said products are compounded or manufactured in the United States of America. The said corporation also agreed, in soliciting the sale of and selling its products in interstate commerce, to cease and desist from the use in its literature of whatever character relating to said products of the statement, "made with imported oils," so as to import or imply that all of the oils used in compounding or making said products are imported, when such is not the fact. (Jan. 7, 1937.)

1919. False and Misleading Advertising—Honey Bread.—Capitol Bakers, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the bakery business, and in the sale and distribution of its confections, including a product designated "El Aguinaldo Cuban Honey Bread," which product is produced in the same manner as ordinary bread except for the addition to each loaf of a quantity of flake white and an amount of honey allegedly made by wild bees from the Aguinaldo, Romerilla, and wild Chammonilla flowers growing on the slopes of the Maestra Mountains in Cuba, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Capitol Bakers, Inc., in soliciting the sale of and selling its bread designated "El Aguinaldo Cuban Honey Bread" in commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertising matter of whatever character having interstate circulation of statements or representations which import or imply or which may tend to convey the belief by purchasers that said bread possesses such therapeutic value that the eating thereof will result in the restoration of glorious good health to the eater or will produce remarkable results or relief in all forms of stomach ailments, indigestion, coughs, colds, constipation, asthma, sinus affections, and the like, or will produce boundless health-giving benefits; that the eating of such bread, because of its El Aguinaldo Cuban Honey Content, or for other reason, corrects all of the aforesaid human ailments by going direct to the source thereof. The said corporation further agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words "Finest of all health giving breads," or of any other words of similar meaning, as descriptive of the bread product offered for sale and sold by it in interstate commerce when in fact the results and values obtained from the consumption of such bread product are no different from those obtainable from the consumption of any ordinary or usual type of bread containing any ordinary, good grade of honey. (Jan. 8, 1937.)

1920. False and Misleading Brands or Labels and Advertising—Wines.—Eastern Wine Corp., a corporation, engaged in business as a blender and bottler of California wines and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Eastern Wine Corp., in soliciting the sale of and selling its products in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use on labels or vintage strips of the words "Vintage—1928," or of any other similar or equivalent words importing or implying that the products so marked or designated are of the vintage of 1928, when such is not the fact; and from the use of any labels or vintage slips which do not truthfully and accurately state or represent the age of the products in connection with which the same are used; the use on labels or other advertisements and advertising matter of the words "Highest award wherever exhibited," either alone or accompanied by any pictorial representations simulating medals, or of any other similar or equivalent words or expressions stating or implying that it has exhibited its products at any exposition or fair, and/or that it has been awarded medals for the excellence of said products, when such is not the fact. (Jan. 12, 1937.)

1921. False and Misleading Brands or Labels and Simulating Trade Name—Radio Sets.—Frederica K. Frank and Albert M. Frank, copartners, trading under the name and style of Custom-Bilt Radio Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of midget radio sets in commerce between and among various states of the United States and in the District of Columbia, in competition with other partnerships, firms, individuals, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Gillette Safety Razor Co. was incorporated in 1917 under the laws of Delaware, with a perpetual charter, for the purpose of acquiring—and it did acquire—the business and assets of Gillette Safety Razor Co. of Massachusetts, the latter company having succeeded in 1912 a Maine company of the same name incorporated in 1901. Each of the said companies, during its existence as such, manufactured, and the said Gillette Safety Razor Co. of Delaware now manufactures, safety razors and blades, which products were and are now sold and distributed extensively in the United States of America and in foreign countries, said products bearing the name "Gillette" printed in script, with the result that the said name "Gillette," so printed and otherwise, has been and is now widely and favorably known and recognized by the consuming public to identify products of quality manufactured and sold by the said Gillette Safety Razor Co.

Frederica K. Frank and Albert M. Frank agreed, and each of them agreed, in offering for sale and selling their radio sets in commerce as defined by the act, to cease and desist from the use, as a mark, brand, or label for their products, of the word "Gillette" printed in script simulating that used by Gillette Safety Razor Co. on products manufactured by it; and from the use of the word "Gillette" in any way which may import or imply, or which tends or may tend to confuse, mislead, or deceive purchasers into the belief, that the radio sets offered for sale and sold by the said copartners are products manufactured by or for the said Gillette Safety Razor Co., or a subsidiary thereof, and/or that the said Gillette Safety Razor Co. is financially or otherwise interested in the production and/or sale of said radio sets. (Jan. 18, 1937.)

1922. False and Misleading Advertising—Baby Chicks.—George F. Clarence N. Debaugh, in soliciting the sale of and selling his said device in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words "safe," "painless," and/or "permanent," in describing the same, without at the same time qualifying such statements and representations in accordance with the facts and the necessary care and skill required to be used in its application. (Jan. 26, 1937.)

1926. False and Misleading Advertising—Dry Goods Remnants.—James D. Boulger, an individual trading as Eastern Textile Co., engaged in the sale and distribution of dry-goods remnants for us by dress-makers, housewives, and others, in interstate commerce in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

James D. Boulger, in offering for sale and selling his bundles of dry-goods remnants in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use in his advertising of the words "dress remnants" as descriptive of the remnants of which said bundles are composed so as to import or imply that the said bundles are composed wholly of remnants of dress materials. If the said bundles are composed in substantial part of remnants of dress materials and the words "dress remnants" are used to describe such dress materials, then, in that event, the words "dress remnants" shall be prominently accompanied by some other word or words printed in type equally as conspicuous as that in which the words "dress remnants" are printed, so as to indicate clearly that said bundles are not composed wholly of remnants of dress materials and/or otherwise to indicate clearly that said bundles are composed in part of remnants other than dress materials. The said James D. Boulger also agreed to cease and desist from the use in his advertising matter, or otherwise, of the statement, "Satisfaction guaranteed or money back," or of any other statement of similar meaning, so as to import or imply that, in all instances of expressed dissatisfaction by purchasers, the full amount of money, including both the purchase price and postage paid by such dissatisfied purchasers, will be returned by the said James D. Boulger to such purchasers, when such is not the fact. (Jan. 26, 1937.)

1927. False and Misleading Representations—Motion Picture Advertising Films.—L. H. Hyde and W. C. Hyde, copartners trading under the name and style of Royal Film Studios, Royal Revues, Inc., a corporation, and West Coast Discount Corporation, a corporation, engaged in the production of entertainment-advertising films for display in motion picture theaters, such films consisting of short acts with merchants' advertisements displayed across the lower part, and known as "Royal Revues." The films which were the subject of these contracts were shipped in interstate commerce. In the collection of purchasers' notes representing the unpaid installments, said L. H. Hyde and W. C. Hyde, and said Royal Revues, Inc. acted through said West Coast Discount Corporation, Ltd. L. H. Hyde, W. C. Hyde and Royal Revues, Inc., in competition with other partnerships, individuals, firms, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

L. H. Hyde and W. C. Hyde and Royal Revues, Inc. and West Coast Discount Corporation, Ltd., in soliciting the sale of and selling their products in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from stating and representing, directly or through their authorized agents or solicitors, that the films to be furnished will be equal in quality to the samples exhibited, unless the said films are in fact equal to such samples; that the films to be furnished will be of the same length as the samples exhibited, unless such films are in fact equal in length to the samples; that the contracts which customers are asked to sign can be canceled after two months, unless such a provision is included in the contract or the privilege of cancellation is granted as represented; that no other merchant engaged in the same line of business as the customer will be placed on the same film with him, unless the restriction referred to is observed; that any given number of subscribers to the service has been secured, or that the contract will be returned to the signer if a certain number is not secured, when such is not the fact; that films will be shown or displayed daily, or every week, when in truth and in fact no provisions have been made for having them shown as stated; that the prices asked and paid for the films represent the entire cost of the service to the subscriber, without informing him that additional sums are required to be paid to the local motion picture exhibitor; that the West Coast Discount Corporation, Ltd. is an innocent purchaser for value of the promissory note and securities given by subscribers to said Royal Film Studios or Royal Revues, Inc. (Jan. 28, 1937.)

1928. False and Misleading Brands or Labels—Absorbent Cotton.—The Bay Co., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of surgical dressings, including absorbent cotton, gauze, and bandages, and in the sale of said products, in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

The Bay Co., in soliciting the sale of and selling its products in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Sterilized" as a mark, stamp, or brand for its absorbent cotton which has not been rendered free from bacteria after being packaged, or in the packing of which the best accepted sanitary precautions have not been taken and followed for the removal and exclusion of all bacteria after packaging; and from the use of the word "Sterilized" in any way which may import or imply that said products have been sterilized and are sanitary, when such is not the fact. (Feb. 10, 1937.)

1929. Lottery Schemes—Sandwiches, etc.—Hiram E. Vickers and Lottie Vickers, copartners trading under the name and style "Dub's Sandwich Company," engaged in the business of manufacturing peanut-butter and cheese sandwiches, candies, and the like, and in the sale and distribution of said products in interstate commerce, in competition with other partnerships, firms, corporations, and individuals likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Hiram E. Vickers and Lottie Vickers, in soliciting the sale of and selling their products in interstate commerce, agreed, and each of them agreed to cease and desist from using, and from placing in the hands of others to use, any scheme, plan, or method of selling or of promoting the sale of their products which involves the use of any gift enterprise, lottery, or scheme of chance whereby a sum of money or any article is given as a prize or premium for or in consideration of the purchase of any other article. (Feb. 10, 1937.)

1930. False and Misleading Brands or Labels and Advertising—Women's Coats.—Fred P. Weissman, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution of women's dress and sport coats in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Fred P. Weissman, Inc. agreed, in offering for sale and selling its products in interstate commerce, to cease and desist from the use of the words and figures "100% Camel's Hair" as descriptive of those of its said products which are not composed of camel's hair, and from the use of the words "Camel's Hair," either alone or in connection or conjunction with "100%," or in any other way, so as to import or imply that the products to which said words apply are composed wholly of camel's hair, when such is not the fact; provided that, if said products are composed in substantial part of camel's hair and the said words are used as descriptive of the Camel's hair content, then, in that case, the words "camel's hair" shall be prominently accompanied by some other word or words, printed in type equally as conspicuous as that in which the words "camel's hair" are printed, so as to indicate clearly that said products are not composed wholly of camel's hair but are composed in part of a material or materials other than camel's hair. (Feb. 12, 1937.)

1931. False and Misleading Advertising and Disparaging Competitors' Products—Kitchen Utensils.—Century Metalcraft Corp., engaged in the sale and distribution of cast kitchen utensils, under the trade name "Silver-Seal," in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Century Metalcraft Corp. agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertisements and advertising matter, or otherwise, in soliciting the sale of and selling its Silver-Seal products in commerce, of statements or representations to the effect that the waterless method of cooking with Silver-Seal equipment has been endorsed by leading medical authorities and dietitians throughout the country, or that such method of cooking is capable of accomplishment only in Silver-Seal equipment, or that the waterless method of cooking is new, or that cooking foods in water necessarily deprives the consumers of such foods of the mineral salts, vitamins, nourishing elements, and natural flavors of the foods, when such are not the fact; that, in using a gas oven, the gas will affect the food cooked therein and destroy the food flavor, when in fact there is no scientific foundation for such statement or representation; that Silver-Seal is entirely different from any other cooking equipment on the market, when such is not the fact; that Silver-Seal is finished in silver and/or that said products, because of such alleged silver finish, or for other reason, are immune from pitting with a resultant capacity to absorb and retain food elements, when such are not the facts; that the eating of foods cooked in Silver-Seal equipment will positively cause improved health of the consumer in all instances and/or regardless of the nature or cause of the ailment or disease with which such individual may be affected; that nature balances certain designated elements in food perfectly and/or that, where the food is perfectly balanced, the balance is disturbed in every case by improper food preparation, or that the Silver-Seal method is the proper method for all foods, or that the result of improper cooking is in all cases, or even generally, acidosis, constipation, or lowered resistance. The said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from stating or representing by any means whatever that its Silver-Seal equipment can be purchased at a so-called Program-First-Call or Coupon Price, that is to say, at a lower price than the price at which said equipment is sold at retail, when in fact the coupon price actually is the price at which said equipment is regularly sold in the usual course of trade. The said corporation further agreed to cease and desist from stating that "Dr. Michael Hindhede, as health commissioner of Denmark, made it a national law that all vegetables, fruits and meats had to be cooked without water," when, in truth and in fact, such statement is without substantiation. The said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from stating or representing by any means whatever that the use of Silver-Seal will result in yearly savings of $79.00, or of any other amount of alleged yearly savings, when in fact such statement or representation is exaggerated. The said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from any and all statements or representations the effect of which imports or implies, or tends to convey the belief by purchasers, that the Silver-Seal equipment is guaranteed for ninety-nine years, or for life; or that Silver-Seal contains no aluminum, or substantially none; or that Dr. Mayo of Rochester, Dr. W. H. Eddy of Columbia University, Dr. E. V. McCollum of Johns Hopkins University, and Dr. Bundesen of Chicago have endorsed Silver-Seal and recommended its use; or that Silver-Seal is being used by Mayo Brothers or generally in hospitals and clinics throughout the United States; or that pressure cookers are dangerous to use and/or necessarily destroy food elements; or that, by buying directly from a Silver-Seal salesman, the customer is purchasing directly from the factory and thereby eliminates the middleman's profit and obtains a cheaper price; or that the use of Silver-Seal has cured many physical disorders in individual cases and will cure particular ailments of some customers; or that the use of aluminum kitchen ware is injurious; or that Club Aluminum Company is practically bankrupt, with the effect of unwarrantably disparaging those engaged in the distribution of Club Aluminum utensils, and/or that Club Aluminum kitchen utensils are inferior products to Silver-Seal equipment because of the lower prices of the former; or that Silver-Seal equipment was used by the United States Army during the World War—when such are not the facts. (Feb. 12, 1937.)

1932. False and Misleading Advertising—Baby Chicks.—Allen's Poultry Farms and Hatchery, a corporation, engaged in the business of hatching various breeds and types of baby chicks, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Allen's Poultry Farms and Hatchery, in soliciting the sale of and selling its baby chicks in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use in advertisements or advertising matter of the statement or representation: "We assure you prompt delivery," or of any other similar statement which may import or imply that its orders are filled promptly, when such is not the fact; of the statement or representation that its "flocks * * * are rigidly culled in accordance with the requirements of the Iowa Poultry Improvement Association," when such is not the fact; of such statements or representations as "We guarantee them (Blue Diamond chicks) to satisfy you as to quality, ability to mature, health, and type. At the end of 30 days from the date of arrival if any chicks have died, are not true to type or unsatisfactory, we will replace them at one-half price"; and "We guarantee live delivery of the number of (Diamond started) chicks you order"; unless and until such guaranties are fulfilled and claims for losses adjusted promptly as represented. (Feb. 11, 1937.)

1933. False and Misleading Trade Name, Brands or Labels and Advertising—Surgical Dressings, etc.—Ezra Hollander, an individual trading under the various names and styles of Hollander Brothers, Superior Laboratories, and Supreme First Aid Co., engaged in the sale of surgical dressings, including absorbent cotton, gauze, and bandages; and in the sale and distribution of said products, in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Ezra Hollander, in soliciting the sale of and selling his products in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use in advertisements or advertising matter of the word "Laboratories" as a part of or in connection with any trade name under which to carry on his said business; the use of the word "Laboratories" in any way which may import or imply that he owns, controls, or operates any place devoted to experimental study in any branch of natural science or the application of scientific principles in the preparation of surgical dressings, when such is not the fact; the use of "manufacturing" or any other word of similar import importing or implying that he owns, controls, or operates any factory or factories wherein the products which he sells and distributes are made or compounded, when such is not the fact; the use of the words "Sterilized" and/or "Sanitary" in any way which may import or imply that his said products have been rendered free from bacteria after being packaged, or that the best accepted sanitary precautions have been taken and followed for the removal and exclusion of all bacteria after packaging, and/or that said products are sterilized and sanitary, when such is not the fact; the use of the words "Grade A Absorbent Cotton" on the labels affixed to containers in which absorbent cotton which is not of that grade is put up and sold in interstate commerce; and the use of the statement or representation that his gauze bandages are made from the best bandage cloth obtainable, when such is not the fact. (Feb. 12, 1937.)

1934. False and Misleading Trade Name, Prices and Advertising—Photographic Enlargements and Frames.—Joseph Taylor Fleming, an individual trading under the name and style of “Washington Art Association,” engaged in the business of making, or causing to be made, photographic enlargements of his customers and members of their families, and in the sale and distribution of such enlargements and of frames therefor, in interstate commerce. Upon the receipt of orders for such enlargements, said Joseph Taylor Fleming sends the photographs to the Seails Copying Company, at its place of business in Syracuse, N. Y., where the enlargements are made by said Seails Copying Company for said Fleming, which then ships to him the enlargement together with the original photograph and a frame. Upon receipt of such enlargement, original photograph, and frame, said Fleming proceeds to effect the delivery thereof to his customers, as hereinafter described. Said Joseph Taylor Fleming, engaged in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Joseph Taylor Fleming, in soliciting the sale of and selling his enlargements and frames in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from using the words “Art Association” as part of his trade name and from stating or representing, directly or through agents or solicitors that the prices at which said enlargements are made are special, or are reduced below the prices regularly charged for such work; that the “Washington Art Association” is an organization of artists for the purpose of making use of the talents of some of America’s foremost portrait artists; that the work is done by America’s foremost portrait artists; that many of the portraits made by the “Washington Art Association” are used for exhibition purposes; that, if the customer’s picture is so used, he or she will be paid by said “Washington Art Association” for the privilege of making such exhibition; that there is such an association of artists known as the “Washington Art Association,” when such is not the fact. (Feb. 12, 1937.)

1935. False and Misleading Brands or Labels—Luggage.—Samuel Rodin, an individual, engaged in the business of manufacturing luggage, such as brief cases, Gladstone bags, and the like, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

As a rule, all hides intended for leathers, other than sole, belting, or harness, and some specialties, are split or skived. The outer or top cut or layer of a split hide may be, and generally is, distinguished as a grain; but any piece of leather ordinarily made from a split hide and not described as a split is accepted and understood by the trade and purchasing public to be the top or grain cut and other than "buffing," that is, a top or grain cut of leather of a weight and thickness less than that generally used for luggage purposes.

Samuel Rodin, in offering for sale and selling his luggage in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Cowhide," either alone or in connection or conjunction with the word "Warranted," or with any other word or words, or in any way, as a mark, stamp, brand, or label for, or otherwise to describe said luggage which is not composed of leather made from the top or grain cut or layer of the cowhide; provided that, if said luggage is composed of leather made from the inner or flesh cut of the designated hide and the word "Cowhide" is used as descriptive thereof, then, in that case, the word "Cowhide" shall be immediately accompanied by some other word or words, printed in type equally as conspicuous as that in which the word "Cowhide" is printed, so as to disclose clearly that said luggage is not composed of leather made from the top or grain cut or layer of the hide of the cow. (Feb. 15, 1937.)

1936. False and Misleading Brands or Labels and Advertising—Dresses, Luggage, Men's Ties and Coats.—James McCreery & Co., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of dresses, traveling bags, men's ties, coats, and other merchandise, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

James McCreery & Co., in soliciting the sale of and selling its products in interstate commerce agreed to cease and desist from using in its advertising matter or otherwise the word "Silk" either alone or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words as descriptive of dresses or of the fabric used in the making of dresses when in fact such fabric is not composed of silk, the product of the cocoon of the silk worm, the word "Silk" either alone or in connection with the word "Lined" or with any other word or words as descriptive of the linings of luggage offered for sale and sold by the said corporation, when in fact such linings are not composed of silk, the word "Silk" either alone or in connection with the word "Pure" or with any other word or words as descriptive of men's ties which are not composed of silk; provided that if said ties are composed in substantial part of silk and in part of a material or materials other than silk and the word "Silk" is used to describe such silk content, then in that case the word "Silk" shall be prominently accompanied by some other word or words printed in type equally as conspicuous as the word "Silk" is printed so as to indicate clearly that said ties are not composed wholly of silk; the words "Harris Tweeds" as descriptive of coats or products not made or fabricated from Harris Tweeds, cloth made from pure virgin wool produced on any of the Islands known as the Outer Hebrides; and from the use of the words "Harris Tweeds" in any way so as to import or imply that the products to which such words relate are made or fabricated from Harris Tweeds, when such is not the fact. (Feb. 15, 1937.)

1937. False and Misleading Prices and Advertising—Books.—American Surveys, Inc., a corporation, engaged in the sale and distribution, in interstate commerce of books entitled "Library of Knowledge Encyclopedia," in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition therein.

American Surveys, Inc., in offering for sale and selling its books in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from stating or representing, either directly or by advertisements or advertising matter, or through salesmen, or by any other means, that certain prospective purchasers or subscribers, as a selected or diversified group of business or professional men, are being offered a special price for said books for the purpose of establishing a foundation for future activities or for advertising purposes, when in fact the price asked is not a special price but is the regular price asked for said books in the usual course of business of any and all persons who could be induced to purchase; promoting, offering for sale, or selling its sets of books under the name "Library of Knowledge" without disclosing that said sets of books have previously been sold under the names "Bufton's Universal Encyclopedia" and "The Loose-Leaf Encyclopedia"; using the date "1936" in said sets of books or making statements or representations which import or imply or which may convey the belief to prospective subscribers or purchasers that said sets of books are modern or just out, or that they are up to date, when such is not the fact; representing that a so-called Year Book, "bound to match" the sets, will be furnished the subscriber or purchaser each year for the next ten years, in connection with the "Library of Knowledge Encyclopedia," and/or that the said Year Book may be continued after the ten-year period at a cost of $7.50 a year, when in fact no so-called Year Book, "bound to match" the sets or one having a cost of $7.50, has been published and/or furnished subscribers to date; and representing that the set of books, the so-called Quarterly Loose-Leaf Extension Material, and a Research Service can be obtained through the payment of a flat price by the subscriber or purchaser, when in fact the subscriber or purchaser is required or expected to make an extra payment or payments in order to secure said Loose-Leaf Extension Material. (Feb. 15, 1937.)

1938. False and Misleading Brands or Labels and Advertising—Dresses, etc.—Gimbel Brothers, Inc., a corporation, conducting a mail order department as part of its business and selling and distributing the products handled by its said department in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

A. B. Thomas, in connection with the advertising, offering for sale, and selling in interstate commerce of his course of instructions by correspondence, agreed to cease and desist from the use of statements or representations the effect of which is to import or imply, or which tend or may tend to convey the belief by students or prospective students having no more than a high-school education, that they, upon completion of the course of instructions given by the said A. B. Thomas, would be eligible to take and able to pass a United States Civil Service examination for a position in the Forest Service, either as a forest ranger, junior forester, junior range examiner, or assistant to technician (forestry), and/or that they would have the necessary education and experience to warrant the acceptance of their applications for such positions by the Civil Service Commission; from the use of statements or representations to the effect that the requirements for positions as forest ranger in the United States Forest Service were the same in 1925 as they were at later dates or in 1930, when the civil service examinations for forest ranger were discontinued, or that examinations for such positions are now being held or are contemplated by the Civil Service Commission, when such is not the fact; from the use of the statement, "For the last few years it has been almost impossible for anyone to get into the U. S. Forest Service because there have been no openings," or of any other statement or representation of similar meaning, when in fact such is not the case; from representing, either in person or through sales agents, or by means of advertising matter distributed in interstate commerce, that the said A. B. Thomas is conducting a so-called school with the knowledge and permission of the United States Forest Service while he is on sick leave, or that the said A. B. Thomas has practiced forestry for eleven years, or that he holds a rating from the Government of excellent as an instructor in forestry, or that he received high commendation from the Forest Service for his work at Chadron, Nebr., or that the course of instruction given by him is one for the training of students to hold a forestry position or to enable them to pass a civil service examination, or that sixty percent to eighty percent of his last class, consisting of one hundred students, who took his course for the position of assistant to technician (forestry), obtained appointment, when such are not the facts; from representing to prospective students that he, the said A. B. Thomas, would come to their towns or cities and take them out on field trips to enable them to get first-hand information about plants, trees, and surveys, unless such representation actually is fulfilled. (Mar. 5, 1937.)

A Royal Warrant is a grant given by the Crown or by a member of the British Royal Family to a merchant who sells or has sold his goods to the said Royal Family. The holders of Royal Warrants are permitted to use and do use the British Coat-of-Arms in their advertising and on their stationery. British Royal Warrants have been granted in the past to manufacturers of fabrics, woolen goods, rain-coats, overcoats, hosiery, shirts, and similar products. As a result the words "Royal Warrants" are generally understood to signify, not only to the British public but to a substantial portion of the purchasing public in the United States of America, dealers in fine merchandise who are or have been patronized by one or more members of the British Royal Family.

Levy Brothers & Adler-Rochester, Inc., in soliciting the sale of and selling its suits in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use or from furnishing others for their use, of labels or advertising matter bearing the words "Royal Warrant" either alone or in connection or conjunction with a typically English script or phraseology, pictorial representation of or which simulates the British Coat-of-Arms or the British Crown, or in any other way so as to import or imply that said suits or the fabrics from which said suits are made are manufactured in England or by the holder of a British or other Royal Warrant, when such is not the fact. The said Levy Brothers & Adler-Rochester, Inc., also agreed to cease and desist from the use in advertising matter, which it uses in interstate commerce and which it furnishes others for their use in offering for sale and selling products, of statements or representations to the effect that the owners of the mills, producing the worsted designated "Royal Warrant" in the United States of America are lineal descendants of British manufacturers, or that the particular type of worsted designated "Royal Warrant" originated in England or that the superiority of English fabrics is due to the fact that such fabrics have been treated by washing in English or West English streams of water allegedly possessing chemical qualities or properties particularly applicable to the treatment of woolen fabrics, and that the water used by the manufacturer in producing the worsted designated "Royal Warrant" in the United States of America possesses and was chosen because it has the same chemical properties that are found in streams of water in the West of England, when such are not the facts. (Mar. 11, 1937.)

1958. False and Misleading Trade or Corporate Name and Advertising—Knitted Boy's Caps.—Timm Cap Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged in the manufacture of knitted goods, including knitted caps for boys' wear, and in the sale and distribution thereof in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Tim's Cap Corp., was a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York. It was for several years engaged in the manufacture, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce of boys' caps of the knitted muffler type, and was the owner of a patent on the design thereof. Said product was advertised, sold, and distributed under the trade name of "Tim's Cap." It was advertised widely, both through the usual channels and also by means of the portrait of a smiling boy, wearing "Tim's Cap," in one of which pictures the cap was represented with the flaps raised and in another with the flaps down and buttoned under the chin. Said Tim's Cap Corp. also caused to be manufactured and distributed among its retailer customers papier-mache heads of the same boy on which to place the caps for advertising purposes, and on the base of which appeared the words "Tim's Cap." As the result of such advertising and of the excellence of its product, the same became generally known to the trade and the purchasing public under the name of "Tim's Cap," and said corporation acquired a valuable good will in the words "Tim's Cap" as applied to boys' caps. The patent on the product known as "Tims Cap" expired in the year 1930, and in February, 1933, Tim's Cap Corp. was formally dissolved under the laws of the State of New York. Timm Cap Co., Inc., was organized under the laws of the said state and began the business of manufacturing and selling boys' caps in the year 1934.

Timm Cap Co., Inc., in soliciting the sale of and selling its products in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Timm" as part of its corporate or trade name or in any way which may import or imply that it is the successor of Tim's Cap Corp., or that its caps are manufactured by said Tim's Cap Corp.; provided that if and whenever its corporate or trade name containing the word "Timm" is used by the said corporation in its printed or advertising matter, the said corporate or trade name containing the word "Timm" shall be prominently accompanied by the phrase "Established 1934" printed in type equally as conspicuous as that in which the said corporate or trade name is printed so as to indicate clearly that the said Timm Cap Co., Inc., is not the successor of Tim's Cap Corp. or that its caps are not manufactured by said Tim's Cap Corp.; the use of the statement, "The Knitted Muffler Cap Is Back," and of the statement, "Popular demand has brought this famous cap back," or of either of said statements, or of any other statement of similar meaning or import, in connection with "Manufactured by Timm Cap Company, Inc.," or in any other way which may have the capacity or tendency to confuse, mislead, or deceive purchasers into the belief that its products are manufactured by the original Tim's Cap Corp.; stating or representing, directly or through salesmen or other representatives, that its organization is the same as the old Tim's Cap Corp., or that it has bought out the Tim's Cap Corp., or any other similar statements or representations having the tendency or capacity to mislead or deceive purchasers into the belief that it is the successor of Tim's Cap Corp.; the use of advertisements or advertising matter simulating that used by Tim's Cap Corp. and including pictorial representations of the head of a boy wearing one of its caps, in two positions (one with the flaps turned up and the other with the flaps turned down), in connection with "Manufactured by Timm Cap Company, Inc.," or any other similar collocation of words and pictures simulating those used by said Tim's Cap Corp. and having the tendency or capacity to confuse, mislead, or deceive purchasers respecting the origin of said products. (Mar. 24, 1937.)

1959. False and Misleading Brands or Labels—Radio Sets.—Climax Radio & Television Corp., engaged in the business of manufacturing radio sets and in the sale and distribution of said products in commerce, as defined by the Act, in competition with other corporations, firms, individuals, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

For more than thirty years prior to his death on October 18, 1931, Thomas A. Edison had been known and recognized throughout the various States of the United States and in foreign countries as the inventor, patentee, owner and manufacturer of numerous electrical devices of various kinds and descriptions and of machines for the reproduction of the human voice, which have acquired a wide and favorable reputation, and are in great demand by the trade and purchasing public who desire Edison products. Among the machines for the reproduction of the human voice manufactured by companies which the said Thomas A. Edison organized and controlled are phonographs, dictaphone and transcribing machines, radios and many other articles of various kind and character such as storage batteries, spark plugs, and the like. Many of the machines and articles referred to bear the name "Edison" as part of their brand names, and such name "Edison" has acquired a valuable good will as identifying the manufacturer of said machines and articles. Among the companies organized and controlled by the said Thomas A. Edison before his death, is Thomas A. Edison, Inc., which said company is still engaged in the manufacture of many of the machines and articles invented and developed by Thomas A. Edison. Thomas A. Edison, Inc., during the years 1928 to 1930, inclusive, manufactured and sold radio sets valued at many millions of dollars and during the said period spent several millions of dollars in advertising said products. All of the radio sets manufactured and sold by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., featured the name "Edison" as part of their branded name.

Elgin National Watch Co. was incorporated in 1864 under the laws of the State of Illinois. Continuously since the said date, it has manufactured and is now manufacturing watches, watch movements, and other watch parts. It has at all times since its organization caused the word "Elgin" to distinctively appear as a part of the brand name displayed on or about the products of its manufacture and has caused said products so branded to be advertised and sold throughout the United States of America. As a result, said products, bearing the trade name "Elgin," have long been and are now widely and favorably known and recognized by the trade and purchasing public to be products manufactured and sold by the said Elgin National Watch Co.

Hamilton Watch Co. was incorporated under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania in 1892. It has manufactured continuously since said date and is now manufacturing watches to which it has at all times affixed a brand name featuring the word "Hamilton" and which products so branded have found great favor with purchasing public and especially employees of the various railroads.

Waltham Watch Co., a Massachusetts corporation, for many years last past has manufactured watches and watch movements, automobile clocks and other products. It has sold and now sells its said products bearing a brand name featuring the word "Waltham" in various States of the United States of America. And the said products so branded have long since become and are favorably known and recognized by the trade and purchasing public as and to be products manufactured by the said Waltham Watch Co.

Climax Radio & Television Corp., in soliciting the sale of and selling its products in commerce, as defined by the Act, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Edison" as a brand or label for its products which are not Edison products or products manufactured by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., and from the use of the word "Edison" either independently or in connection or conjunction with any other word or words or in any way so as to import or imply that said radio sets are manufactured by or are sold under a license from said Thomas A. Edison, Inc., or a concern or concerns associated therewith, when such is not the fact; of the use of the word "Elgin" or "Hamilton" or "Waltham" as a brand or label for its products or otherwise in connection with the sale of its products so as to import or imply that said products are, respectively, products manufactured by Elgin National Watch Co. or Hamilton Watch Co. or Waltham Watch Co. or that the said Climax Radio & Television Corp. is authorized by either the said Elgin National Watch Co. or Hamilton Watch Co. or Waltham Watch Co. to use its name as a brand name or otherwise in connection with the sale of radio sets, when such is not the fact. (Mar. 24, 1937.)

1960. False and Misleading Prices, Brands or Labels and Advertising—Soaps.—Manhattan Soap Co., Inc., a corporation, engaged both under its corporate name and also under the trade name "Bristol Soap Company," in the manufacture of soaps, which it sells and has sold in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Manhattan Soap Co., Inc., in soliciting the sale of and selling its products in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use on the cartons or boxes in which said products are packed and on the products themselves, or in any other way, of any false, fictitious, or exaggerated price in excess of the price at which said products are sold or intended to be sold in the usual course of trade. The said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from the use on its products or otherwise of the word "Doctor" or the abbreviation "Dr." either alone or in connection with a name or with any other word or words so as to import or imply that the said products are compounded or made in accordance with the prescription or under the direction of a doctor and/or that said products contain special or scientific features which are the result of medical advice or services. The said corporation further agreed, in connection with the sale of its soap products in interstate commerce, to cease and desist from the use of the word "Medicated" as descriptive of said products so as to import or imply that said products have been treated or impregnated with medicine or anything medicinal, when such is not the fact. The said corporation also agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Health" as descriptive of its soap products so as to import or imply that said products contain an ingredient or ingredients which confer on the user of said products a benefit or benefits beyond that obtained from the use of any toilet soap, when such is not the fact. The said corporation still further agreed to cease and desist from the use in its advertising matter or in any way of statements or representations to the effect that its product is of dollar quality, or contains no cocoanut oil, or has extra beneficial qualities to the skin, cleans blemishes from the skin, nourishes the skin, wards off lines and wrinkles, prevents chapping, penetrates the pores, or is recommended by obstetricians for bathing babies, when such statements and representations are not warranted by the facts. (Mar. 24, 1937.)

1961. False and Misleading Brands or Labels—Sweaters.—Union Knitting Mills, a corporation, engaged in the business of manufacturing sweaters and in the sale and distribution thereof under its said corporate name or under the trade name “Home Knitting Mills” in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Union Knitting Mills, in soliciting the sale of and selling its products in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words, “ALL WOOL” or “ALL WOOL 100%” as a mark, stamp, brand or label for its products which are not composed of wool, and from the use of the word “wool” either alone or in connection or conjunction with the word “all” or with “100%” or with any other word or words or in any way so as to import or imply that said products are composed of wool; provided, that if said products are composed in a substantial part of wool, and the word “wool” is used to describe such wool content, then in that case the word “wool” shall be prominently accompanied by some other word or words printed in type equally as conspicuous as that in which the word “wool” is printed so as to indicate clearly that said products are not composed wholly of wool and that will otherwise indicate clearly that said products are composed in part of a material or materials other than wool. (Mar. 25, 1937.)

1962. False and Misleading Advertising—Jewelry.—Lawson Jaffe, an individual trading as Capitol Jewelers, engaged as a wholesale jeweler in the business of selling and distributing birth stones and birth stone rings in interstate commerce, in competition with other individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Lawson Jaffe, in offering for sale and selling his products in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use in his advertisements and advertising matter featuring the language “Send 10¢ to cover handling—mailing” and the pictorial representation of a ring set with a stone, of the words “Free Offer” or “Absolutely Free” so as to import or imply that, by paying ten cents only, a customer or prospective customer will be given free or without further cost to the customer a ring set with the customers’ birth stone, when such is not the fact; the said Lawson Jaffe, also agreed to cease and desist from the use in the said advertising of the words “Special” and "Limited" or either of them as descriptive of his offer of products, when in fact such offer is not limited or special but the usual and customary offer made without limitation of any kind by the said Lawson Jaffe in the ordinary course of his business; the said Lawson Jaffe further agreed to cease and desist from the use in said advertising of the word "Cameo" or "Ruby" or "Onyx" as descriptive of the mountings of the rings offered for sale and sold by him in interstate commerce, when in fact said rings are not set, respectively, with cameo, ruby, or onyx; the said Lawson Jaffe also agreed to cease and desist from the use of the word "Platinum" either alone or in connection with the word "Rhodium" or with any other word or words as descriptive of the finish of rings when in fact, such finish has no platinum content. (Mar. 26, 1937.)

1963. False and Misleading Brands or Labels and Advertising—Cream Products.—Chicago Mail Order Co., a corporation, engaged as a mail order house, in the sale and distribution of a large variety of merchandise in interstate commerce, in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, and partnerships likewise engaged, entered into the following agreement to cease and desist from the alleged unfair methods of competition as set forth therein.

Chicago Mail Order Co., in soliciting the sale of and selling its cream products in interstate commerce, agreed to cease and desist from the use of the words "Turtle Oil" as descriptive of said product, the oil content of which is not composed of turtle oil; and from the use of the words "Turtle Oil" in any way so as to import or imply that the oil content of said product is composed wholly of turtle oil, when such is not the fact; provided that when the oil content of said product is composed in substantial part of turtle oil and the words "Turtle Oil" are used as descriptive of such turtle oil content, then in that case the said words "Turtle Oil" shall be immediately accompanied by some other word or words printed in type equally as conspicuous as that in which the words "Turtle Oil" are printed so as to indicate clearly that the oil content of said product is not composed wholly of turtle oil and that otherwise will indicate clearly that the oil content of said product is composed in part of an oil or oils other than turtle oil. (Apr. 6, 1937.)

- (a) That the tablets are "herb" tablets;
- (b) That the tablets will correct conditions that are responsible for lack of digestive secretion;
- (c) That the tablets are a competent treatment or an effective remedy for colds;
- (d) That the tablets will prevent colds;
- (e) That the tablets will "rid" one of a cold;
- (f) That the tablets are a competent treatment or an effective remedy for rheumatism;
- (g) That the tablets will "rid" one of rheumatism;
- (h) That any smarting which may result from an application of the Absorptive Plasma conclusively shows a presence of inflammation or ulceration;
- (i) That the Muco Cones or Absorptive Plasma or a combination treatment thereof will heal unless limited to the aid of nature in the process of healing;
- (j) That the Absorptive Plasma will "rid" one of pile suffering or "rid" one of or "banish" pain;
- (k) That application of the Absorptive Plasma creates a tissue building activity or that it creates circulation in the affected parts;
- (l) That the Muco Cones provide tissue nourishment or that they are "a highly beneficial treatment for the famished mucous membranes";
- (m) That any of the products or a combination thereof will remove or correct the cause of piles;
- (n) That the tablets will have a beneficial effect on the whole "system";
- (o) That any of the products or a combination thereof will enable an invalid to become "a healthful, vigorous, happy, light-hearted, rosy cheeked, bright eyed man or woman";
- (p) That respondent's treatment affords a "sure" relief of piles;
- (q) That respondent's treatment will reach the "root" or cause of piles;
- (r) That piles or any rectal "disease" never heals itself or is continually growing worse;
- (s) That respondent's treatment will completely relieve or free one of pile "trouble", or that by the use thereof one will have no return of suffering;
- (t) Inferentially or otherwise that one will receive any benefit from any product due to any ingredient contained therein unless the product contains a quantity of the ingredient sufficient to obtain the benefit claimed or to render it a competent treatment or an effective remedy for the condition represented;
- (u) That by use of the treatment one will be "fully relieved";
- (v) That the respondent manufactures any of its products unless and until such is a fact;
- (w) Inferentially or otherwise that respondent's treatment acts in the place of operations or that its use will prevent the necessity for or ward off an operation. (May 27, 1937.)

01775. Vendor-Advertiser—Medicinal Preparation.—Thornton & Minor Clinic, a corporation, Kansas City, Mo., vendor-advertiser, was engaged in selling a preparation recommended for the treatment of piles designated Private Formula Rectal Ointment, and agreed in soliciting the sale of and selling said product in interstate commerce to cease and desist from representing directly or otherwise:

(a) That, by the use of the Thornton & Minor Private Formula Pile Ointment, the sufferer will:

1. Get quick relief from the disease piles instead of relief from the pain, distress and itching of that ailment;
2. Be "free" from pile pain;
3. "End" pile suffering; or
4. "Escape" from the tortures of piles;

(b) That the use of Thornton & Minor Private Formula Pile Ointment will:

1. "Stop" pile pain;
2. "End" pile torture;
3. Relieve agony of piles "at once";
4. "Stop" hemorrhoid pain; or
5. Relieve piles "at once". (May 21, 1937.)

DECISIONS OF THE COURTS

IN CASES INSTITUTED AGAINST OR BY THE COMMISSION

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. STANDARD
EDUCATION SOC. ET AL.¹

No. 10

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit. Dec. 14, 1936)

ENFORCEMENT APPLICATIONS—CORRECTNESS OF ORDER—DETERMINATION OF ANTECEDENT TO COMPLIANCE ISSUE.

On petition for enforcement of order to cease and desist from certain unfair methods of competition, Circuit Court of Appeals may review correctness of order before considering issue of compliance (15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45).

ENFORCEMENT APPLICATIONS—ANSWER'S PRAYER TO VACATE—AS CROSS-PETITION TO REVIEW—PLEADING.

Where Federal Trade Commission filed petition for enforcement of order to cease and desist from certain unfair methods of competition, respondent was not required to file petition for review, and prayer of answer that order be vacated was proper and could not be treated as cross-petition to review and commission's answer thereto would be stricken (15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45).

PARTIES—CORPORATE OFFICERS OR EMPLOYEES—PRESIDENT AND SALES MANAGER.

President who acted as general manager and personally conducted correspondence and sales manager familiar with advertisements and with general sales policy of corporation could be held personally for any unfair advertisements or sales methods pursued by corporation and which were traceable to such officers (15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45).

PARTIES—CORPORATE OFFICERS OR EMPLOYEES—AUDITOR.

Auditor who had charge of corporation's finances but had little or nothing to do directly with trade practices could not be held personally for unfair trade practices of corporation.

PARTIES—CORPORATE OFFICERS OR EMPLOYEES—CRITERIA.

To hold one personally for unfair trade practices of corporation, it is not enough that he be a director or officer of corporation, but he must be shown to have had such connection with wrong as would have made him an accomplice were it a crime, or a joint tort-feasor, were the corporation an individual.

¹ Reported in 88 F. (2d) 692. The case before the Commission is reported in 18 F. T. C. 1.

ENFORCEMENT APPLICATIONS—JURISDICTIONAL PREREQUISITES—INTERSTATE COMMERCE AND COMPETITION—ANSWER AS PRECLUDING ISSUE OF.

In proceeding by Federal Trade Commission to enforce cease and desist order, answer which did not deny that respondent corporations were engaged in interstate commerce, or that there were others with whom corporations competed precluded respondents from claiming that forbidden practices were not shown to have affected interstate competition (15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45).

UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES—LONG STANDING OF—AS PRECLUDING COMMISSION.

Federal Trade Commission need not sanction unfair trade practices merely because they are of long standing (15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45).

UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES—ITEM OR COMPONENT AS GIVEN AWAY, WHEN SOLD REGULARLY AS PART OF WHOLE OFFERING.

Practice of publisher of encyclopedia in representing that ten books were given away and that only ten years' extension service was sold could not be forbidden by Federal Trade Commission as unfair trade practice (15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45).

UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES—PRODUCT OR OFFERING FALSELY AS GIVEN AWAY TO SELECTED CLASS INCLUDING PROSPECT.

Federal Trade Commission could forbid publisher from misrepresenting that [693] encyclopedic work was given away to selected persons among whom prospective buyer was one as an unfair trade practice (15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45).

UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES—DYNAMIC SCOPE OF SECTION 5.

Powers of Federal Trade Commission are not confined to such practices as would be unlawful before it acted, but it has duty to discover and make explicit those unexpressed standards of fair dealing which conscience of the community may progressively develop.

UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES—REVISED OFFERING AS NEW.

Publisher of a revise of an old publication with new supplements to bring it up to date could be directed to cease and desist from representing the work as new (15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45).

UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES—OFFERING SOLD UNDER TWO NAMES.

Clause of cease and desist order forbidding publisher of encyclopedic work from selling work under two names held reasonable.

UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES—PRICE FALSELY AS LESS THAN USUAL.

Cease and desist order forbidding publisher of encyclopedic work from falsely representing that price at which work was sold was less than usual price held proper (15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45).

UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES—SPONSORS OR IMPORTANT CONTRIBUTORS TO OFFERING.

Publisher of encyclopedic work held properly prohibited from representing as contributors or editors those who had not contributed to, or edited, the publication.

UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES SPONSORS, ETC., TO REVISED OFFERING WHERE SUCH IN FACT TO THE ORIGINAL.

Practice of publisher of encyclopedic work in announcing as contributors to the revised work those who had been contributors to the original held not unfair (15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45).

UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES—USING TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BUT GARBLED.

Provision of cease and desist order prohibiting publisher of encyclopedic work from using testimonials which, though really given, had been garbled so as to be substantially untrue held proper (15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45).

UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES—PRICE FALSELY AS REDUCED.

Provision of cease and desist order forbidding publisher from representing that course of instruction was offered at reduced price where no reduced price was given held proper (15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45).

UNFAIR TRADE PRACTICES—CORPORATE AGENTS' ACTS—OFFICERS' RESPONSIBILITY.

That practices condemned by cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission were traced only to agents of corporations did not relieve corporations of responsibility where agents did not act beyond scope of their authority, but executive officers of corporations were responsible only for that which could be traced to them personally (15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45).

ENFORCEMENT APPLICATIONS—ABANDONMENT PRECEDING—AS DEFENSE.

Abandonment of forbidden practices before filing of complaint for enforcement of cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission held no defense, especially where order was opposed on merits (15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45).

(The syllabus, with substituted captions, is taken from 86 F. (2d) 692)

On proceeding by Commission against Standard Education Society and others for order to enforce order of Commission to cease and desist from certain unfair methods of competition, order reversed entirely as to respondent Greener, and modified and affirmed in part, and reversed in part, and proceeding remitted to Commission, with directions.

Mr. W. T. Kelley, Mr. Martin A. Morrison, and Mr. James W. Nichol, all of Washington, D. C., for the Commission.

Mr. Henry Ward Beer, of New York City, for respondents.

Before L. HAND, SWAN, and CHASE, Circuit Judges.

L. HAND, Circuit Judge:

This case comes up upon a petition under § 45 of Title 15, U. S. Code, for an "enforcement order" upon an order to "cease and desist" of the Federal Trade Commission against the five respondents, two companies and three individuals. The Standard Education Society [694] is a company which published and sold an encyclopoedia called "Standard Reference Work"; the Standard Encyclopoedia Corporation is a subsidiary, or dummy, of that company. Stanford is the president and a director, and acted as general manager, of both companies, and is the owner of 250½ out of the Education Society's 536 shares of stock; Ward is the secretary, a director of both, has charge of sales and owns the same number of shares as Stanford; Greener owns the remaining thirty-five shares, and is in charge of financial matters as comptroller and auditor. On February 25, 1929, the Commission filed a complaint against the Education Society and Stanford, alleging certain unfair trade practices; they answered, and a supplemental complaint was filed on December fourth, 1929, in the same terms, but joining the Encyclopedia Company and Ward and Greener, all of whom answered. Meanwhile the taking of testimony had begun on May 8, 1929, and was continued until June 20, 1930; and on the twenty-fourth of December, 1931, the Commission filed its findings of fact and the order to cease and desist now before us. In the findings it appears that the Education Society was incorporated in 1909 under another name and published and sold a work called "Aiton's Encyclopoedia", whose title was changed in 1912 to "Standard Reference Work". This was in ten volumes, intended to be kept up to date by a series of loose leaf supplements—called an "extension service"—which were to be sent to subscribers quarterly for ten years, and embodied, or assumed to embody, the latest information. Stanford, Ward and Greener organized the Encyclopoedia Company in August, 1929, and changed the name of the old work to the "New Standard Encyclopoedia"; but the Education Society is still disposing of some remaining sets of "The Standard Reference Work", while the Encyclopoedia Company is selling the encyclopoedia. The ordinary price of each is $69.50, and includes the "extension service"; when works of fiction are thrown in, as they sometimes are, the price is $89. It was the uniform practice upon taking subscriptions, for agents to tell buyers that the set of books was given away, and that only the service was paid for; it was the common practice to say that the regular price of the books and service was considerably higher than the offers, at times $150. or $200.; it was not infrequently said that the work could take the place of such magazines as the Literary Digest and the Review of Reviews. The originals of some of the testimonials used in selling the books were redrafted, some had never been authorized, and some had originally been issued to cover "Aiton's Encyclopoedia"; the names of some persons were advertised as contributors who had never contributed. The respondents also offered a course of instruction which they called "Special Introductory Enrollment", and for which they charged at first $98, and finally $135. The agents represented to the purchaser that these were "special introductory prices," the usual price of the course being $250; and that the special price was given to ten students only; all of which was false.

The order to "cease and desist" included all the respondents, and forbade kinds of trade practices, as follows. The first clause forbade representing the ten books as given free and only the service as paid for; the second forbade representing that some of the sets were delivered to selected persons; the third was in substance the same as the first; the fourth forbade representing the work as "a recently completed, new, and up-to-date encyclopaedia"; the fifth, offering the same work for sale under two names; the sixth, representing its usual price as higher than that at which it was offered; the seventh, representing any person as a contributor who was not a contributor; the eighth, representing any person as giving a testimonial who had not done so; the ninth, publishing other testimonials than those actually given; the tenth, representing the course of instruction as a "Special Introductory Enrollment" at a special reduced price. Nothing was done to enforce this order until January 20, 1936, when the petition at bar was filed; the respondents answered on the first of October, repeating the allegations of their original answer, and praying that the application be dismissed, and that "the order to cease and desist herein be vacated and set aside". Treating this part of the answer as a cross petition of the respondents to vacate the order to cease and desist, the Commission styled its brief an answer. The preliminary question of procedure so raised we will dispose of at once. We held in Fed. Trade Com. v. Balme, 23 F. (2d) 615, that upon a petition for enforcement under § 45 of title 15, we would review the cor [695] rectness of the order before considering the issue of compliance; so that once a petition to enforce the order is filed, it is not necessary for the respondent to file a petition for review. The prayer of the respondents' answer here that the order to cease and desist be vacated, was therefore entirely proper in the answer because the Commission had already invoked the preliminary inquiry; and the answer should not have been regarded as a cross petition to review the order. The Commission need not have filed any answer to it, and so far as its brief is entitled an answer, it will be stricken.

The first question is as to the propriety of any order whatever against the individual respondents. Stanford and Ward were jointly in complete control of both companies; as we have said, Stanford was not only president, but acted as general manager, and he was shown to have personally conducted the correspondence. Ward was sales manager, and necessarily familiar with what advertisements went out, and with the general sales policy of the company. This was enough to hold each personally for any "unfair" advertisements or sales methods, with certain exceptions to be noted later. The same is not true of Greener who, being merely the auditor and in charge of the companies' finances, would have little or nothing to do directly with trade practices. The doctrine applicable to patent infringements controls; it is not enough that an individual be a director or an officer of the infringing corporation; he must be shown to have had such connection with the wrong as would have made him an accomplice were it a crime, or a joint tortfeasor, were the corporation an individual. However, when that is done, his office will not protect him. National Cash Register Co. v. Leland, 94 Fed. 502, 507-512 (C. C. A. 1); Hitchcock v. American Plate Glass Co., 259 Fed. 948, 952-954 (C. C. A. 3); Denominational E. Co. v. Duplex E. Co., 80 F. (2d) 186, 194 (C. C. A. 4). If the opinion in Dangler v. Imperial Machine Co., 11 F. (2d) 945 (C. C. A. 7), means more than this, we cannot go along. Our dictum in New Departure Mfg. Co. v. Rockwell Drake Co., 287 Fed. 328, 334, was not meant to declare that so long as an official acted within the scope of his authority he was immune; the contrary had just been decided in Guarantee Vet. Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 285 Fed. 853, 860 (C. C. A. 2).

The respondents insist that the forbidden practices were not shown to have affected interstate competition. It would take little evidence to satisfy us that a company publishing, and distributing generally throughout the country, an encyclopaedia or reference work, was in competition with other similar works; perhaps we might take judicial notice of that without any evidence at all. But Stanford in substance admitted that other works competed with his, and the pleadings had foreclosed the issue anyway. The first article of the complaint alleged that the respondents were "in competition with other corporations, individuals, firms, or partnerships likewise engaged in the sale and distribution in interstate commerce of books, encyclopaedias and reference works, and so-called extension service in connection therewith." The answer of the Education Society did indeed deny that it used unfair methods of competition in interstate commerce, and that any of the methods alleged were unfair; but it did not deny that it was engaged in interstate commerce, or that there were others with whom it competed. Stanford's answer was like that of the Education Society, except that he denied "that he individually or as president * * * is in competition with other corporations." We read this as meaning merely that his relations with the Society did not charge him personally with its doings; not that if it was engaged in competition and he was chargeable with its conduct, he was not engaged in the same competition. The answer of the Encyclopaedia Company was like that of the Education Society, and Ward's answer was like Stanford's.

Coming now to the practices forbidden, the first and third clauses of the order were in substance the same; they forbade representing that the ten books were given away and that only the "extension service" was sold. It is true that the Commission is not to sanction unfair trade practices merely because they are of long standing; its duty is to bring trade into harmony with fair dealing. Federal Trade Com.

v. Winsted Hosiery Co., 258 U. S. 483, 493, 494. To the discharge of that duty it should not, however, bring a pedantic scrupulosity; too solicitous a censorship is worse than any evils it may correct, and a community which sells for profit must not be ridden on so short a rein that it can only move at a walk. We cannot take seriously the [696] suggestion that a man who is buying a set of books and a ten years' "extension service," will be fatuous enough to be misled by the mere statement that the first are given away, and that he is paying only for the second. Nor can we conceive how he could be damaged were he to suppose that that was true. Such trivial niceties are too impalpable for practical affairs, they are will-o'-the-wisps, which divert attention from substantial evils. Winston Co. v. Fed. Trade Com., 3 F. (2d) 901 (C. C. A. 3). It is possible to read Consolidated Book Publishers v. Fed. Trade Com., 53 F. (2d) 942 (C. C. A. 7), as holding to the contrary, but the case was complicated by a number of graver practices which probably colored the whole. We are not satisfied that stripped of these, the bare practice would have been held bad; if so, we prefer to follow the Third Circuit.

The second clause of the order forbade representing the work as given away to selected persons among whom the prospective buyer was one. This is supported by evidence, and is the misrepresentation of a fact, though perhaps it would not support an action of fraud. The common-law was not over-solicitous to protect an unwary buyer; but there can be no doubt that such statements give a competitive advantage to the less scrupulous seller and that they not only add nothing to the buyer's opportunities to buy wisely, but hold out to him false inducements. The Commission has a wide latitude in such matters; its powers are not confined to such practices as would be unlawful before it acted; they are more than procedural; its duty in part at any rate, is to discover and make explicit those unexpressed standards of fair dealing which the conscience of the community may progressively develop. Federal Trade Com. v. Raladam Co., 283 U. S. 643, 647-649; Federal Trade Com. v. Keppel, 291 U. S. 304, 310-312.

The fourth clause forbade calling the work a "recently completed, new, and up-to-date encyclopoedia". The findings scarcely support so broad a prohibition; the fifteenth says that the respondents have represented the "New Standard Encyclopoedia" as "Something new under the sun", when it was only a revise of the old "Standard Reference Work" with new supplements to bring it up to date. Of course nobody in his senses supposes that an encyclopoedia had not used earlier works as sources; but it seems to us that he might assume that it has been rewritten, perhaps throughout. Had the encyclopoedia professed to be no more than a new edition of the "Reference Work", a buyer might not have been justified in assuming that it was rewritten, but it professed to be a new work, and it was issued under a new name and by a new company. It was not new in the sense people would understand the word, applied to a book which came in that guise; even a substantial revision does not make a new work.

The fifth clause forbade selling the same work under two names. The order does not cover the sale of the "Standard Encyclopaedia" and the "Standard Reference Work" under their several names. Some time ago the Education Society published some sets of the "Reference Work" under the title "National Encyclopaedia" and it was proved that one buyer at least bought both for a public school, not knowing them to be the same. There was no good reason for using two names in selling the same book and the clause is reasonable enough, except for the fact that all copies of the "National Encyclopaedia" have long since been disposed of. The only possible debate is whether such a practice justifies an order when it was so far in the past; a matter which we will deal with later. We will not disturb the clause.

The sixth clause forbade saying that the price, $69.50 or $89 was less than "the usual price". Little need be said about this; it was false and intended to deceive buyers upon a matter of fact. True, it is a very common device in selling, but it is to be discountenanced; morally it is not defensible and the Commission might hold it "unfair".

The seventh clause forbade representing as contributors or editors those who had not contributed to, or edited, the publications. Its propriety depends upon the evidence, and while there is not much of it, it definitely does appear that there was no warrant for claiming at least two, Ballou and Pace, as either contributors or editors. There were however a number who had been genuine contributors to "Aiton's Encyclopaedia", but who had done nothing later. How much of this earlier work went into the two later ones cannot be definitely ascertained, but it was the basis of them, and it seems to us not "unfair" to [697] announce as contributors to the derived work those who had been contributors to the original. This clause ought therefore to be modified or clarified by excepting from the prohibition contributors to "Aiton's Encyclopaedia".

The eighth and ninth clauses were related; they concerned testimonials used as advertisements. For the eighth, which forbade the use of such testimonials which had not been given by the person whose name was used, we have been able to find no support in the evidence; and we are referred to none except the conclusions of one, Nixon, which are outweighed by her identification of the handwriting of the person whose name was used. The ninth forbade the use of testimonials, which, though really given, had been garbled so as to be substantially untrue. There was evidence in support of this, and the clause was proper.

The tenth and last clause forbade representing the course of instruction as a "Special Introductory Enrollment," offered at a reduced price. There was no reduced price and so much of the clause was proper; but as to the rest it does not seem to us that the phrase indicated a selected class in the sense that particular qualifications were necessary to join it. The finding in support of this declared as well that agents had represented that the class was to be confined to ten students; and had this been included in the order, it would have been valid pro tanto; but it was not included, and it gives no support to what was.

The respondents argue as to this, and as to several other of the practices condemned, that they were traced only to agents of the companies. So far as the companies themselves are concerned this clearly made no difference; the agents did not act beyond the scope of their authority; the nineteenth finding contained no suggestion that they had been instructed not to make them. Some of them were indeed discharged because of what they said, but that does not prove that they had acted beyond the scope of their authority. The remedy is civil; responsibility may be imputed as in other civil cases. On the other hand the agents were not agents of Stanford and Ward, who are therefore responsible only for what can be traced to them personally. This consideration however affects at best only the second, sixth, seventh, ninth and tenth clauses of the order, for certainly both Stanford and Ward must have directed what was covered by the fourth and fifth. As to the second and sixth, the practice of the agents was so universal that it seems to us that the Commission was justified in assuming that they would not have acted as they did without some direction at least from Ward, the sales manager. We are disposed to say also that, considering the centering of control in two men only, it was permissible to associate Stanford with him. Stanford was amply connected with the practices in the seventh and ninth clauses, for they appear to have been his special concern; we cannot see however that Ward was involved. As to the tenth, the evidence of the practice is very meagre and in our judgment scarcely justified a finding that either of these men personally directed the statements about the cost of the course. Therefore Stanford should not be included in the tenth clause, nor Ward in the seventh, ninth, and tenth.

Finally, the respondents allege that as they had already abandoned some of the practices forbidden before the complaint was served, no order should go against them. We have already mentioned this factor in connection with the fifth clause. It has, however, often been decided—certainly when the respondent continued to oppose the order on its merits—that this is no defense to an order to cease and desist. Sears Roebuck & Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 258.

Fed. 307, 310 (C. C. A. 7); Guaranty Veterinary Co. v. Fed. Trade Com., supra, 859, 860 (285 Fed. 853); Fox Film Co. v. Fed. Trade Com., 296 Fed. 353, 357 (C. C. A. 2); Arkansas Wholesale Grocers Assoc. v. Fed. Trade Com., 18 F. (2d) 866 (C. C. A. 8); Fed Trade Com. v. Wallace, 75 F. (2d) 733, 738 (C. C. A. 8); Armand Co. v. Fed. Trade Com., 78 F. (2d) 707, 708 (C. C. A. 2). In Winston v. Fed. Trade Com., supra (3 F. (2d) 901), the respondent had not only abandoned the practices, but stipulated not to resume them.

The order will be modified as follows and otherwise affirmed. It will be reversed in toto as to all the respondents so far as it forbade the practices described in the first, third and eighth clauses; as to the tenth it will be reversed except as to the representations regarding price. The seventh will be modified so as to exclude from its terms contributors to "Aiton's Encyclo[698]poedia." The order will be also reversed so far as it included Stanford in the tenth clause, and Ward in the seventh, ninth and tenth; and it will be altogether reversed as to Greener. The answer of the Commission contained in its brief will be stricken. After the order has been amended in accordance with the foregoing, the proceeding will be remitted to the Commission as special master to hear and report whether the respondents have complied with the provisions which are affirmed. The cause will await in this court the return of that report for further proceedings.

Order to cease and desist modified in accordance with the foregoing; cause referred as aforesaid.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. EVANS FUR COMPANY
ET AL.¹

No. 6099

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Seventh Circuit. January 4, 1937)

Application of Commission to enforce its order in Evans Fur Company et al., Docket 2227, 20 F. T. C. 300, directing respondents to desist misrepresentation in connection with sale of fur garments, dismissed pursuant to joint motion of the parties, and without prejudice.

Before EVANS and SPARKS, Circuit Judges.

PER CURIAM.

Now comes the petitioner by its counsel and presents a joint motion of petitioner and respondent that this petition for enforcement of order of Federal Trade Commission be dismissed. On consideration whereof it is ordered and adjudged by this court that this petition for enforcement of order by Federal Trade Commission be, and the same is hereby dismissed without prejudice to the right of said Federal Trade Commission, at its option and in its discretion, at any time or times hereafter, to file in this Court or other Court, said petition or a like petition, or such petition or papers as said Commission may elect, or to do such other acts as said Commission shall deem to be in the public interest.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. ARMY AND NAVY
TRADING COMPANY¹

No. 6793

(United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.
January 4, 1937)

FINDINGS OF COMMISSION—WHERE SUPPORTED BY EVIDENCE.

Findings of Federal Trade Commission in hearing before it, if supported by evidence, are conclusive (Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 5, as amended, 15 U. S. C. A., sec. 45).

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—TRADE NAMES—"ARMY AND NAVY" FOR CONCERN, ONLY TEN PER CENT OF STOCK OF WHICH, SUCH.

Use by company of words "Army and Navy" in its name to impress public with fact that its stock consisted of goods purchased from Army and Navy departments held an unfair method of competition, where percentage of such goods in its stock had declined to about 10 per cent. of total inventory.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—IN GENERAL—MISREPRESENTING AS TO ORIGIN AND NATURE OR QUALITY.

False and misleading representations as to origin of a commodity and as to its nature or quality constitute an unfair method of competition.

[777] UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—TRADE NAMES—"ARMY AND NAVY" FOR CONCERN, ONLY TEN PER CENT OF STOCK OF WHICH, SUCH—QUALIFYING WORDS AS CURING.

Where the use of words "Army and Navy" in trade-name constituted an unfair method of competition because of diminishing quantity of Army and Navy goods handled by company, elimination of deception required that company cease using such words, and could not be effected by use of qualifying phrases which merely indicated that company was not connected with the Army and Navy, or with the government, and that it did not handle such goods exclusively.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—TRADE NAMES—"ARMY AND NAVY" FOR CONCERN, ONLY TEN PER CENT OF STOCK OF WHICH, SUCH—QUALIFYING WORDS AS CURING—"WE DO NOT DEAL IN," ETC.

Use of qualifying words, "we do not deal in Army and Navy goods," held not proper means of eliminating unfair competition resulting from use of words "Army and Navy" in trade-name of company with only small percentage of Army and Navy goods in its stock, since trade-name and qualifying clause would be contradictory.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—TRADE NAMES—"ARMY AND NAVY" FOR CONCERN, ONLY TEN PER CENT OF STOCK OF WHICH, SUCH—USE WORDS FOR MERCHANDISE IN FACT MADE FOR.

Trading company ordered to cease and desist from using words "Army and Navy" in its trade-name held entitled to use such words in connection with any particular lot of merchandise which it might handle which had been made for Army or Navy Departments, provided words specified origin of that particular lot.

On application for enforcement of order of Commission, order affirmed, as modified, and respondent ordered to comply therewith.

Mr. Martin A. Morrison and Mr. James W. Nichol, both of Washington, D. C., for petitioner.

Mr. Joseph B. Stein, of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

Before MARTIN, C. J., and ROBB, VAN ORSDEL, GRONER, and STEPHENS, JJ.

STEPHENS, Judge:

This is a proceeding brought under Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 38 Stat. 719, by the petitioner, the Federal Trade Commission, hereafter called the Commission, to enforce an order issued by it on November 26, 1935, requiring the respondent, the Army and Navy Trading Company, hereafter called the Trading Company, to cease and desist from using the words "Army and Navy," or either of them, in connection with its corporate name.

Following the usual procedure under the Act, the Commission issued a complaint against the Trading Company charging that the words "Army and Navy" in its name were misleading, and that their use was to the injury of competitors and the public. The Trading Company answered denying this. A hearing was had before an examiner of the Commission, and then before the Commission itself. Thereupon the Commission made findings of fact which, so far as here pertinent, were in substance and effect that: The Trading Company, a Maryland corporation, has, since its organization in 1922, maintained its principal place of business in Washington, D. C., and carried on business there. It was organized chiefly for the purpose of buying from the Army and Navy Departments of the United States Government certain surplus, reject and refuse goods and reselling the same. From 1922 until about 1927, between 85% and 90% of the merchandise offered for sale by the Trading Company was procured from the Army and Navy Departments, either directly or indirectly, there being during those years opportunity to secure large lots of various kinds of merchandise from the Departments. About 1927 the Departments began sharply to curtail the quantity of goods offered for sale, and since 1932 have offered virtually none. They were offering none at the time of the Commission's order. In 1932 the stock of merchandise of the Trading Company contained only about 15% to 18% of goods purchased from the Army and Navy Departments. The Trading Company causes its corporate name "Army and Navy Trading Company" to be displayed in large signs about its mercantile establishment, and in trade journals and circulars, and in advertisements and in daily newspapers and other periodicals, with the words "Army and Navy" as prominently featured therein as other portions of the name. Various members of the purchasing public, upon observing such use of the words "Army and Navy," have been led into the belief that [778] the goods to be purchased in the Trading Company's store were substantially all, if indeed not all, procured from the Army and Navy Departments, and into the belief that they were of the quality and nature used by those Departments and that a substantial bargain with reference to price and quality would be obtained at the Trading Company's store; and a substantial number of such members of the purchasing public have been induced by such beliefs to make purchases from the Trading Company. The use by the Trading Company of the words "Army and Navy" as above described causes a diversion of trade from competitors of the Trading Company who offer for sale merchandise which, like the bulk of the stock of the Trading Company, is procured from ordinary markets, but who do not use the words "Army and Navy" in connection with their trade names; and the use of the words "Army and Navy" by the Trading Company causes substantial injury to substantial competition within the District of Columbia.

From the facts thus found by the Commission it concluded that the use of the words "Army and Navy" in the Trading Company's name is to the prejudice and injury of competitors and the public and an unfair method of competition in commerce and a violation of Section 5 of the Act.

The Commission ordered the Trading Company to cease and desist from:

(1) Using in connection with its corporate name the words "Army and Navy" or either of them.

(2) Advertising or causing to be advertised in any circulars, trade journals, daily newspapers, or other periodicals the words "Army and Navy" or either of them, descriptive of or in connection with any merchandise to be sold or offered for sale to the public, unless in fact the words "Army and Navy" be used specifically in connection and conjunction with particular merchandise actually procured from the Army and Navy Department of the United States Government.

Provided, however, that for a period of two years from the date of the service of this order upon respondent, the respondent shall be permitted to use in connection with such corporate or trade name as it might assume the words:

"Formerly Army and Navy Trading Company."

The only issue raised by the Trading Company's answer to the Commission's complaint was that respecting the misleading character and effect of the use of the words "Army and Navy" in the Company's name, and the finding of fact adverse to the Trading Company on this issue is the only finding attacked by it.

The findings of the Commission if supported by evidence are conclusive. Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Hosiery Co., 258 U. S. 483; Federal Trade Commission v. Algoma Lumber Co., 291 U. S. 67. We have examined the record. There is evidence therein to support the finding attacked. We shall not assume to review the evidence in detail, but it is worthy of comment that it was made to appear through the testimony of the secretary and treasurer of the Trading Company itself that the name "Army and Navy Trading Company" was selected for the corporation in order to impress the public with the fact that the stock consisted principally of articles purchased from the Army and Navy Departments—that being so at the time of incorporation—and that there was a response, advantageous to the Trading Company, to this impression; and further that while the percentage of Army and Navy goods in the Trading Company's stock was as high as 90% up to about 1926, there was a rapid decline in the percentage thereafter, and at the time of the hearing before the Examiner, in 1935, only about 10% of the total inventory was of such goods; and further, that purchases of stock at that time were principally made in the open market from commercial manufacturers catering to department stores and various concerns. It is also worthy of comment that several members of the purchasing public testified that in purchasing from a so-called Army and Navy store they expected to find lower prices and better quality merchandise, and to get Army and Navy refuse or salvage goods or goods made up to Army and Navy specifications.

The first of the two issues of law in the case is whether the conclusion of the Commission that the use of the words "Army and Navy" in the Trading Company's name is an unfair method of competition is justified. It is. The Supreme Court has ruled that false and misleading representations as to the origin of a commodity constitute an unfair method of competition. Federal Trade Commission v. Royal Milling [779] Co., 288 U. S. 212. It has ruled similarly in respect of false and misleading representations as to the nature or quality of an article. Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Hosiery Co., supra; Federal Trade Commission v. Algoma Lumber Co., supra. Accord: Federal Trade Commission v. Civil Service Training Bureau, 79 F. (2d) 113.

The second issue of law is whether the cease and desist order of the Commission is too broad. The Trading Company contends that the Commission cannot lawfully order suppression of a trade name where the use of qualifying words will eliminate the deception and preserve the rights of competitors and the public, and it asserts that the Commission's order should be modified so as to permit the use of, and it offers to use, in connection with its full trade name "Army and Navy Trading Company," one or more of the following qualifying phrases: "Not Connected with the Army and Navy," "Not Connected with the Government," "Not a Government Store," "Not affiliated with the United States Government," "We Do Not Handle Exclusively Army and Navy Goods." The Trading Company urges Federal Trade Commission v. Royal Milling Co., supra; N. Fluegelman & Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 37 F. (2d) 59; Federal Trade Commission v. Good-Grape Co., 45 F. (2d) 70; and Federal Trade Commission v. Cassoff, 38 F. (2d) 790. These cases justify the proposition that the Commission's "orders should go no further than is reasonably necessary to correct the evil and preserve the rights of competitors and public." These were the words of the Supreme Court in the Royal Milling Co. case. There the word "Milling" imported the grinding of wheat into flour, when in truth the Royal Milling Company only mixed and blended flours purchased from others engaged in grinding. The continued use of the trade name if used together with such qualifying words as "Not Grinders of Wheat" was permitted. In N. Fluegelman & Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, the use of the words "Satinmaid" and "Satinized," which signified a fabric with a satin weave and a silk content, whereas the product in question was of a satin weave but of a cotton content, was permitted provided there was also used the phrase "a cotton fabric," "a cotton satin," "no silk," or equivalent modifying terms. In Federal Trade Commission v. Good-Grape Co., it was held that the name "Good-Grape" and the slogan "Fruit of the Vine," might be used if qualified by words making it appear that the product was an imitation, artificially colored and flavored. In Federal Trade Commission v. Cassoff, the word "shellac," in the trade name "White Shellac" and "Orange Shellac," deceptively imported a product composed solely of genuine shellac gum dissolved in alcohol. The court permitted use of the word "shellac" if there was also used in connection therewith the phrase "shellac substitute" or "imitation shellac," accompanied by the statement that the product was not 100% shellac.

But it will be noted that in these cases the selection of qualifying words effective to eliminate deception was feasible because the names involved made separate and distinct representations in respect of the origin and characteristics of single products, some of which representations were true and some of which were untrue.¹ Therefore, qualifying words could be chosen which would eliminate any deceptive representations and leave standing the truthful ones alone. Thus in Federal Trade Commission v. Royal Milling Co., the qualifying words "Not Grinders of Wheat" indicated definitely that the grain from which the flour is made did not originate with, i. e., was not ground by, the Royal Milling Company, but left standing the representation that the flour was mixed and blended by that Company; and in the other three cases, the qualifying words clearly eliminated the deceptive representations of what the charac[780]teristics of the products were not, but left standing the true representations as to what the characteristics were. The qualifying words suggested for use in the instant case would not have the effect of wholly eliminating the deception. Use with the trade name "Army and Navy Trading Company" of the phrase "Not Connected with the Army and Navy" would still leave an implication that the Trading Company's goods are purchased from the Army and Navy Departments or are of the character or quality of Army and Navy goods. The same is true of the phrase "Not Connected with the Government," and of the phrase "Not a Government Store," and of the phrase "Not Affiliated with the United States Government." The phrase "We Do Not Handle Exclusively Army and Navy Goods" would imply that a substantial portion of the goods are Army and Navy goods. We think it not feasible to select qualifying words for use with the name "Army and Navy Trading Company" which will be effective to eliminate deception. The stock of goods of the Trading Company is in only an insubstantial portion, if at all, in any sense Army and Navy goods. But the phrase "Army and Navy" in the name "Army and Navy Trading Company" makes the single representation that at least the major portion of the merchandise offered for sale is in some sense Army and Navy goods. This single representation being untrue, it cannot be qualified; it can only be contradicted. The cases urged by the Trading Company and above discussed justify qualification of a trade name where qualification is possible; they do not justify contradiction.

¹ Thus in Federal Trade Commission v. Royal Milling Co., the representation of the word "Milling" as to mixing and blending of the flour was true, but the representation as to the origin of the flour, i. e., as to by whom it was ground, was untrue. In N. Fluegelman & Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, the representation of the words "Satinmaid" and "Satinized" that the fabric had a satin weave was true, but the representation that it had a silk content was not. In Federal Trade Commission v. Good Grape Co., the representation of the phrases "Good-Grape" and "Fruit of the Vine" that the product was like grape juice in color and flavor was true, but the representation that it was made of natural grape juice was untrue. In Federal Trade Commission v. Cassoff, the representation of the phrases "White Shellac" and "Orange Shellac" that the product was composed solely of genuine shellac gum dissolved in alcohol was untrue, but the representation that it was like shellac, or that it could be used for the purpose of shellac, was true.

In a supplemental memorandum filed before the Commission the Trading Company offered to use with the name "Army and Navy Trading Company" the "qualifying" words "We do not deal in Army and Navy Goods." This phrase is not discussed in the Trading Company's brief filed in this court, and we take it, therefore, that the offer to use it has been abandoned. If not, however, it is clear that it cannot be used because it is contradictory.

In one particular we think the order of the Commission is too broad. It cannot be concluded that because at the time of the hearing there was little or no opportunity for the Trading Company to purchase goods in some sense Army and Navy goods, there will not be such opportunity in the future; and the Trading Company ought not be forbidden to tell the exact truth, whatever it may be, concerning the origin or character of any particular lot of goods. Paragraph (2) of the Commission's order forbids the use of the words "Army and Navy" "unless in fact the words 'Army and Navy' be used specifically in connection and conjunction with particular merchandise actually procured from the Army or Navy Department of the United States Government." The Trading Company may at some time procure a particular lot of goods not purchased by it actually from the Army or Navy Department, but from a jobber or broker who purchased therefrom; or it may procure from a manufacturer or jobber or broker a particular lot of goods made for the Army or Navy Department but rejected for lack of compliance with specifications in some respect although satisfying them in others. Paragraph (2) of the order should, therefore, be modified so as to permit the use of the words "Army and Navy," or either of them, in connection with a particular lot of merchandise, provided such words are used in a manner exactly specifying the origin or character of that particular lot.

Subject to such modification, the order of the Commission is affirmed and the respondent is ordered to comply therewith.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. F. A. MARTOCCIO COMPANY, TRADING AS HOLLYWOOD CANDY COMPANY¹

No. 401

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Eighth Circuit. January 23, 1937)

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—LOTTERY SCHEMES—PUNCH BOARDS OR PUSH CARDS—PLANS UNDER WHICH ALL RECEIVE.

The sale of candy by means of punch boards or push cards enabling some buyers to receive several times the amount paid for involves such an element of chance as authorizes the Federal Trade Commission to prohibit the manufacturer from supplying push cards with its candy, though each buyer receives candy worth the amount paid (Federal Trade Commission Act, Sec. 5, 15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45).

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—LOTTERY SCHEMES—PUNCH BOARDS OR PUSH CARDS—PUBLIC INTEREST, WHERE ASSERTED OR POSSIBLE ECONOMIC ADVANTAGES IN PLAN.

The sale of candy through push cards involves such public interest, as required by the statute, and such injury to the public as authorizes the Federal Trade Commission to prohibit manufacturer from supplying cards with its candy, notwithstanding alleged benefits in providing economical method of advertising, increased volume of sales, and opportunity to buyer to procure more than his money value.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—LOTTERY SCHEMES—PUNCH BOARDS OR PUSH CARDS—PUBLIC POLICY—OPTIONAL FEATURE—WHETHER INTERSTATE COMMERCE AFFECTED IN VIEW OF.

The Federal Trade Commission could prohibit manufacturer of candy from furnishing push cards therewith, for use in connection with the sale of the candy, as against contention that, as use of the card is optional, any violation of public policy is a purely local matter not affecting interstate commerce.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—LOTTERY SCHEMES—PUNCH BOARDS OR PUSH CARDS—CUSTOM AND PUBLIC UNDERSTANDING AS PRECLUDING COMMISSION ACTION.

That, as claimed, sale of candy through use of push cards is old and well-established method of sale and well understood and fully approved by the public does not preclude Federal Trade Commission from ordering manufacturer not to supply push cards with its candy.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—SUPREME COURT DECISION Re PUBLIC INTEREST AND UNFAIRNESS—SIMILAR SITUATIONS—SCOPE AND EFFECT.

The Supreme Court having determined that a certain situation is within the Federal Trade Commission Act as affecting public interest and constituting unfair method of competition, the basis and reason for such inclusion are binding as to all similar situations subject to such basis and reasoning.

¹Reported in 87 F. (2d) 561. The case before the Commission is reported in 22 F. T. C. 583. Petition for certiorari denied May 3, 1937, 301 U. S. 691.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPENSATION—LOTTERY SCHEMES—PUSH CARD PLANS—GIFTS FOR ADVERTISING, AS JUSTIFYING.

That there is no evil in giving away candy for advertising purposes does not prevent the Federal Trade Commission from ordering a manufacturer not to supply push cards with its candy, as the sales method is a game of chance.

UNFAIR METHODS OF COMPETITION—LOTTERY SCHEMES—COMPETITORS' VIEWS AND PUBLIC POLICY.

Action by the Federal Trade Commission in prohibiting unfair method of competition cannot rest solely upon the moral or ethical views of competitors, but it may rest on the public view and public policy against gambling and games of chance.

ENFORCEMENT APPLICATION—EVIDENCE—COURT'S DUTIES—WHERE INFERENCES AND LAW ONLY ISSUES.

On application by the Federal Trade Commission for enforcement of a cease and desist order, the court need not determine whether it may examine the evidence for itself and determine whether the evidence supports the findings of the Commission when there is no dispute as to the facts, but only as to the inferences from facts and as to the rules of law.

SECTION 5—VALIDITY—AS COMBINING FUNCTIONS OF COMPLAINANT, PROSECUTOR AND JUDGE.

Statute as to unfair methods of competition is not invalid as combining in the Federal Trade Commission the functions of complainant, prosecutor, and judge.

(Syllabus, with substituted captions, is reported in 87 F. (2d) 561.)

On application by Commission for enforcement of order against the F. A. Martoccio Candy Company, in its own name and right and trading as Hollywood Candy Company, enforcement ordered, and petition to set aside order denied.

Mr. Martin A. Morrison, Assistant Chief Counsel, Federal Trade Commission, of Washington, D. C. (Mr. W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel, Federal [562] Trade Commission, and Mr. Henry C. Lank and Mr. James W. Nichol, Special Attorneys, Federal Trade Commission, all of Washington, D. C., on the brief), for petitioner.

Mr. Arnold L. Guesmer, of Minneapolis, Minn., for respondent.

Before STONE, SANBORN, and WOODROUGH, Circuit Judges.

STONE, Circuit Judge:

This is a proceeding brought by the Federal Trade Commission for the enforcement of a "cease and desist" order entered by it against the respondent.

Respondent is a manufacturer of candy selling its product, in interstate commerce, to wholesalers and jobbers. The candy was packed in cartons, each containing a large number of uniform small candy bars, a smaller number of one-quarter pound bars, a yet smaller number of one-half pound bars and a "push card". The candy is of good quality. The smallest bars are of the size and kind usually retailing for five cents each. A push card is a stiff pasteboard card with covered holes in each of which is a concealed number. On the card is set forth certain numbers which entitle the purchaser (who uncovers one of them) to a quarter-pound bar and certain other numbers entitling to a half-pound bar. For five cents, any purchaser may uncover a number on the card. He may secure a number calling for one of the two larger size bars. If he does not, he gets a five-cent bar which is reasonably worth what he pays. The purchaser may buy a five-cent bar and pay no attention to the card. There is no requirement that the purchaser use the card in buying the small bars. These cartons of candy are sold by the wholesalers and jobbers to retailers who may use the card or not in selling the candy.

The essential portions of the "cease and desist" order are as follows:

(1) Selling and distributing to wholesale dealers and jobbers, for resale to retail dealers, candy so packed and assembled that sales of said candy to the general public are to be made, or may be made, by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise;

(2) Supplying to, or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers, packages or assortments of candy which are used, or may be used, without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of said packages or assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy or candy products, contained in said assortment, to the public;

(3) Supplying to, or placing in the hands of, wholesale dealers and jobbers assortments of candy together with a device, commonly called a "punch board" or "push card", for use, or which may be used, in distributing or selling said candy to the public at retail;

(4) Furnishing to wholesale dealers and jobbers a device, commonly called a "punch board" or "push card", either with packages or assortments of candy or candy products, or separately, bearing a legend, or legends, or statements, informing the purchasing public that the candy, or candy products, are being sold to the public by lot or chance, or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

Respondent has filed here its "petition to set aside Commission's order" wherein it presents thirty-four challenges to the findings, the conclusions or the order of the Commission.

For convenience, we treat the case by consideration of the grounds and reasons advanced by respondent in its brief why the order of the Commission should not be enforced but should be set aside. At the threshold of our inquiry we are faced with a decision of the Supreme Court upon a situation so near to this one before us that the heavy burden is upon respondent to distinguish that case from this one. In fact, this is the main task of respondent in this litigation and we find it convenient to treat most of respondent's arguments in connection therewith.

The case of Federal Trade Commission v. R. F. Keppel & Brother, Incorporated, 291 U. S. 304, involved against a candy manufacturer using a candy sales plan known as the "break and take", which is described in the opinion (p. 307), as follows:

The break and take assortments are so arranged and offered for sale to consumers as to avail of the element of chance as an inducement to the retail purchasers. One assortment, consisting of 120 pieces retailing at 1 cent each, includes four pieces, each having concealed within its wrapper a single cent, so that the purchasers of those particular pieces of candy receive back the amount of the purchase price and thus obtain the candy without cost. Another contains 60 pieces of candy, each having its retail price marked on a slip of paper concealed within its wrapper; 10 pieces retail at 1 cent each, 10 at 2 cents, and 40 at 3 cents. The price paid for each piece is that named on the price ticket, ascertained only after the purchaser has selected the candy and the wrapper has been removed. A third assortment consists of 200 pieces of candy, a few of which have concealed centers of different colors, the remainder having white centers. The purchasers of the candy found to have colored centers are given prizes, packed with the candy, consisting of other pieces of candy or a package containing lead pencils, penholder and ruler. Each assortment is accompanied by a display card, attractive to children, prepared by respondent for exhibition and use by the dealer in selling the candy, explaining the plan by which either the price or the amount of candy or other merchandise which the purchaser receives is affected by chance. The pieces of candy in the break and take packages are either smaller than those of the competing straight goods packages, which are sold at a comparable price without the aid of any chance feature, or they are of inferior quality.

After stating "that the practice complained of is a method of competition in interstate commerce and that it is successful in diverting trade from competitors who do not employ it" (p. 308) and that "a practice so widespread and so far reaching in its consequences is of public concern" (p. 308), that Court discussed and determined the unfairness of the method. After stating that the case of Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Hosiery Co., 258 U. S. 483, had decided that "A method of competition which casts upon one's competitors the burden of the loss of business unless they will descend to a practice which they are under a powerful moral compulsion not to adopt, even though it is not criminal, was thought to involve the kind of unfairness at which the statute was aimed" (p. 313), the Court continued (p. 313), as follows:

The practice in this case presents the same dilemma to competitors, and we can perceive no reason for distinguishing between the element of chance as employed here and the element of deception involved in labelling cotton goods "Natural Wool," as in the Winsted case. It is true that the statute does not authorize regulation which has no purpose other than that of relieving merchants from troublesome competition or of censoring the morals of businessmen. But here the competitive method is shown to exploit consumers, children, who are unable to protect themselves. It employs a device whereby the amount of the return they receive from the expenditure of money is made to depend upon chance. Such devices have met with condemnation throughout the community. Without inquiring whether, as respondent contends, the criminal statutes imposing penalties on gambling, lotteries and the like, fail to reach this particular practice in most or any of the states, it is clear that the practice is of the sort which the common law and criminal statutes have long deemed contrary to public policy. For these reasons a large share of the industry holds out against the device, despite ensuing loss in trade, or bows reluctantly to what it brands unscrupulous. It would seem a gross perversion of the normal meaning of the word, which is the first criterion of statutory construction, to hold that the method is not "unfair." See Federal Trade Comm'n v. Royal Milling Co., supra, at 217; Federal Trade Comm'n v. Algoma Lumber Co., supra, at 81.

From the above statements concerning the issues in and the above quotations from the Keppel case, appear two matters vital here. One of these is that the Court broadly asserted that "the element of chance as employed" there was an unfair method of competition within the Trade Commission Act. The other is that the "element of chance" there employed would seem to be not different in essentials from the method employed here. We now turn to consideration of the reasons advanced by respondent to distinguish this case.

(1) Respondent contends there is no element of "chance" in a true sense present in its method because there is no possibility of loss to the consumer, since he gets five cents' worth of good candy in any event and may get several times that amount for the same money. This distinction is not valid. Under the Keppel case, the vice of the method there condemned is that the element of chance is employed as a factor in competitive sales. While most gambling or chance games involve possible loss to the player as well as possible gain, it does not [564] change the character of the game as one of chance merely to remove the possibility of loss. In fact, to remove all possibility of loss would make more effective the incentive to play by removing the most forceful natural reason to refrain.

In connection with this same point, respondent argues this situation comes exactly within the statement in the Keppel case (p. 313) that "the statute does not authorize regulation which has no purpose other than that of relieving merchants from troublesome competition or of censoring the morals of businessmen." The answer to this argument is that the Keppel case determined that the use of elements of chance of this character in competitive merchandising comes within the statute.

(2) Two further contentions of respondent are related in thought and will be treated together. They are that even if the method were unethical it would not authorize proscription "regardless of consequences" to the consuming public but that the Commission can act only when there is "commercial or financial injury to the consuming public." Essentially, this presents the question of "public interest" (required by the Act). It is obvious that no financial loss to consumers can result from the method employed by respondent. But the Keppel case seems to declare, or at least necessarily infer, that there is an injury to the consuming public through violation of the public policy opposing games of chance and to competitors through compelling them to participate in such violation or to lose business. We understand the Keppel case as holding that it is in the public interest to prevent sales based upon games of chance and we hold that the method here used involves such a game of chance (Walter H. Johnson Candy Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 78 F. (2d) 717, 718, C. C. A. 7). In a closely related contention, respondent asserts that even if competitors would be benefited by the order, it should not be upheld if it would work a practical disadvantage to the public. By "public" respondent means small candy manufacturers, retailers and consumers. The argument is that this method of selling provides an economical and effective method of "advertising" which can be and is used by small manufacturing concerns which lack the financial resources to compete with large manufacturers in ordinary advertising methods, thus enabling the small concern to survive where it otherwise could not or only precariously. Further, that this method aids the retailer by increasing his volume of sales. Also, it benefits the consumer by always giving him full value (both in quality and quantity) for his expenditure and at the same time affording him an opportunity to secure more than his money value. This record abundantly establishes that the above advantages—financial and otherwise—are the natural results of this character of method of selling. However, we understand the main grounds for sustaining the order in the Keppel case to be the public interest and policy in suppressing games of chance and the harmful effect upon competitors flowing from the use of such in sales. If this view is sound, the above advantages are impotent to justify this method of selling which employs an element of chance (in the sense of a gambling chance).

(3) Under several headings, respondent argues that the element of chance involved here has no connection with interstate commerce and is, therefore, outside the jurisdiction of the Commission. It argues that the use or non-use of the push board is entirely within the control of the retailer after the carton has ceased to be an article of commerce and is a purely local transaction; that the board is entirely separate from the candy which can be and sometimes is sold without regard to the board; that interstate commerce insofar as respondent is concerned ceased with receipt of the carton by the wholesaler or jobber; that if there is violation of public policy, it is purely local and is the affair solely of local authorities and not of the Commission. These arguments contain really two propositions: Interstate commerce and choice of use of the push board. Both are met by the language in Federal Trade Commission v. Winsted Hosiery Co., 258 U. S. 483, 494: "That a person is a wrongdoer who so furnishes another with the means of consummating a fraud has long been a part of the law of unfair competition." Also see Reid, Murdoch & Co. v. H. P. Coffee Co., 48 F. (2d) 817, 819-820 (C. C. A. 8); Andrew Jergens Co. v. Bonded Products Corporation, 21 F. (2d) 419, 424 (C. C. A. 2); Coca-Cola Co. v. Gay-Ola Co., 20 Fed. 720, 722, (C. C. A. 6); Von Mumm v. Frash, 56 Fed. 830, 836 (C. C. N. Y.); New England Awl & Needle Co. v. Marlborough Awl & Needle Co., 168 Mass. 154, 155.

[565] (4) A further contention is that this method of selling "is so old and well established and so well understood and so fully approved by the public" that an order destroying it should not be sustained.

The supporting argument is as follows:

"There is no bar through lapse of time to a proceeding in the public interest to set an industry in order by removing the occasion for deception or mistake, unless submission has gone so far that the occasion for misunderstanding, or for any so widespread as to be worthy of correction, is wholly at an end. Competition may then be fair irrespective of its origin." (Italics inserted by respondent.) F. T. C. v. Algoma Lumber Co., 291 U. S. 67, 80.

In this instance, "the occasion for misunderstanding, or for any so widespread as to be worthy of action, is wholly at an end", even if there ever was any such occasion. The people have had over 25 years of experience with this simple selling and advertising method and thoroughly understand it, and approve it by patronage. It is with them an accepted thing.

In the retailing of goods various customs grow up, which the public does not want to have changed until it gets ready to make the change itself, which it then does without asking anybody's permission.

The customary use of this card-system of selling and advertising is similar to some other customs, new and old. It is like the New Orleans custom of giving lagnappe. There the retailer's customer expects him to give something extra with the purchase made. Here, instead of giving the something extra, the customer uses the board to determine whether he is going to get something extra by way of the larger piece.

We now hear, over the radio, announcements that every third person coming into a specified drugstore will get something free.

Merchants must do things to attract the public. They have to deal with the people as they are. They must give them what pleases them. The people have these matters in their own hands. It is not for someone else to tell them what they should want. They decide that. What they decide should not be vetoed or censored, unless it is substantially harmful, and then the public itself will act. The Supreme Court recognizes that practical factor.

"In such matters, the public is entitled to get what it chooses, though, the choice be dictated by caprice, or by fashion, or perhaps by ignorance." F. T. C. v. Algoma Lumber Co., 291 U. S. 67, 78.

Many persons have no taste for commerce. Hence they enter other vocations or the government service. Being without experience as to what appeals to the public in merchandising, most of the rough and tumble things common to business offend the concepts which unfit them for business, and which they would have to get rid of if they were to hold a job with a commercial concern or were to succeed in a business of their own. If people in business give the public what it wants, they succeed; if they try to bring the public up to genteel ideals, they will fail and go broke. Experience has demonstrated that. Commercial men have to study closely the reactions of the public to their methods. If those not experienced in commercial work were to enter it, they would discover their error. They would learn to give the public what it reacts favorably to and approves, not what they think it ought to have. That is bound to be the case where people have individual liberty to follow their own inclinations. Bureaucrats think they can regiment the public and make people conform to their ideas; the merchant knows he must cater to the public. He must design his packages to appeal to the rank and file, though his designs may offend the artistic. He must use slogans and advertising matter that appeal to the rank and file, though they offend the literary. When by the use of the card customers get the big bar, the bargain becomes more strikingly realistic to them. The card serves to attract their attention and interest. As said by an experienced newspaper editor, "While we should like to confine our homage to the god of things as they ought to be, we cannot deny homage to the god of things as they are, the public."

What constitutes "public interest" and "unfair methods of competition" within the Act is a matter of definition through judicial inclusion and exclusion declared in the various situations in cases presented to the courts. Where the Supreme Court has determined that a certain situation is within the Act (as in the Keppel case) the basis and reasons for such inclusion stated by that Court are binding as to all similar situations subject to such basis and reasoning. [566] The reasons advanced in support of the contention just above stated do not distinguish the Keppel case.

(5) A further contention is that "there is no evil in spending for advertising some of the candy in the big pieces." The supporting argument is as follows:

It is said that those who get one of the big bars for 5¢, get more than the others do. That is true in the case of any bargain purchase. The consumer who gets one of the big bars is benefited; but the one who gets one of the small bars is not hurt, because he gets his money's worth. That lack of hurt to anyone is the crucial thing. Consumers are not "exploited".

If the big pieces were eliminated, then the consumers would not get the advertising expenditure and the other advantages of this method, such as getting the candy fresher, reduction of price by obviating waste and by increasing volume.

Then none of the candy would be devoted to advertising. All consumers would have to pay in money, which would go for advertising to someone else.

Is it to the public interest to reduce the opportunities and advantages of consumers, so that some consumers will get less than they would under the system in question?

If it were possible to get along without advertising, we should have an entirely different situation; and it would not then be necessary to use the big bars.

If it were not necessary to have advertising, to pay rent, or to pay taxes, no doubt everyone could be given still larger bars for 5¢ each. However, we have to deal with the situation as it is.

The retailer's customers know that some get the large bar for 5¢. Thus they are informed how much candy is devoted to advertising, a thing they could not know if other advertising methods were used.

The method is in all respects beneficial to the consumers. Hence, they like it and approve it.

The "evil", if it be such, of this selling method is not that the larger pieces of candy are given away but that the entire sales method is a game of chance and such method has been declared within the Act by the Supreme Court in the Keppel case.

(6) Another contention is that the "moral objection to including push cards in their cartons" by some manufacturers furnishes no ground for action by the Commission. Obviously, action by the Commission cannot rest solely upon moral or ethical views of competitors. However, there is here something beyond the mere views of others in the trade. There is the public view and public policy against gambling and games of chance and that public policy is given full force in the Keppel case (Walter H. Johnson Candy Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 78 F. (2d) 717, 718, C. C. A. 7).

(7) Respondent urges that the Keppel (as well as other cases) is unlike this one in that it involved exploitation of consumers (particularly children) through under-size and under-quality candy. Undoubtedly, the exploitation of children by the underweight and inferior quality of candy was a consideration in the Keppel case opinion but we think the Supreme Court did not regard such consideration as essential to the result reached by it (Hofeller v. Federal Trade Commission, 82 F. (2d) 647, 648, C. C. A. 7).

REVIEW OF EVIDENCE

Respondent urges that it is the duty of this Court to examine the evidence before the Commission and to determine for itself whether such evidence "supports" (15 U. S. C. A., Section 45, p. 255) the findings of the Commission upon which its order is based. We find no necessity to determine this point of law. There is no dispute in the evidence as to the method of sales used by respondent nor as to any other fact necessary to full consideration of the various propositions and contentions advanced by respondent and treated hereinabove. The differences here are as to inferences from facts and as to rules of law.

VALIDITY OF ACT

Respondent challenges the validity of the Act. This it does under two headings. The first is really not a true challenge of the Act but rather a contention that the order is directed against actions which are no part of interstate commerce. Of course, if such actions were intrastate purely, as contended, they would be outside the Act itself. Hereinbefore, we have determined such actions to be within interstate commerce.

The other and accented challenge is that the Act is invalid because it combines in the Commission the functions of complainant, prosecutor and judge. This matter has been determined against the posi[567]tion of respondent in several cases (Federal Trade Commission v. Klesner, 280 U. S. 19, 27; Chamber of Commerce v. Federal Trade Commission, 280 Fed. 45, 48, C. C. A. 8; Federal Trade Commission v. McLean & Son, 84 F. (2d) 910, 912, C. C. A. 7; National Harness Mfrs. Ass'n v. Federal Trade Commission, 268 Fed. 705, 707, C. C. A. 6; Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 258 Fed. 307, 311, C. C. A. 7).

We conclude that this case is ruled by the Keppel case. We so conclude since we construe the Keppel case to determine that a method of sale which employs the element of chance as an essential feature is against public interest because it is in the nature of a gambling game and that such a method is unfair competition because it places competitors in the position where they must unwillingly adopt such method or run the risk of losing business if they refrain from so doing. Since we are unable to distinguish, in essentials, the situation in this case from the one presented in the Keppel case, the enforcement of the order of the Commission here involved will be ordered and the petition to set aside the order will be denied.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY¹

(District Court, S. D. New York. February 16, 1937)

INVESTIGATIONS OF COMMISSION—INQUISITORIAL POWERS—JOINT RESOLUTIONS—DEMANDS RELEVANT TO CONTEMPLATED LEGISLATION—WHERE INFORMATION DEMANDED, NOT RELATED TO BREACHES OF LAW.

Joint resolution authorizing Federal Trade Commission to investigate financial and economic conditions of agricultural producers engaged in interstate commerce, with a view to legislation to prevent evasion of income tax and burdening of interstate and foreign commerce, held to authorize Commission to compel disclosure of information relevant to subjects on which legislation was contemplated, though unrelated to breaches of law, in view of pre-existing power of Commission to demand information relating to breaches of law (Joint Res. Aug. 27, 1935, 49 Stat. 929, 930, 931; Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 6 (a, b), 15 U. S. C. A., sec. 46 (a, b), sec. 9, 15 U. S. C. A., sec. 49; Const. Amend. 4).

INVESTIGATIONS OF COMMISSION—INQUISITORIAL POWERS—JOINT RESOLUTIONS—DEMANDS RELEVANT TO CONTEMPLATED LEGISLATION—WHETHER IN VIOLATION OF SEARCH AND SEIZURE PROVISIONS OF FOURTH AMENDMENT.

Mandamus proceeding by Commission against National Biscuit Co., writ allowed.

Mr. Lamar Hardy, U. S. Attorney, of New York City, and Mr. Russell Hardy, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, for petitioner.

Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner & Reed, of New York City (Mr. John W. Davis, of New York City, of counsel), for respondent.

GODDARD, District Judge:

The Federal Trade Commission on September 2, 1936 filed a petition praying for an alternative writ of mandamus commanding the respondent, the National Biscuit Company, to furnish and file with the Federal Trade Commission, the petitioner, [668] certain information regarding its business. After notice to respondent and a hearing, the writ was issued on September 16, 1936. The writ commanded the National Biscuit Company to show cause why it should not furnish the Federal Trade Commission with the information called for in certain blank forms, schedules and questionnaires which were attached to and made a part of the writ. On the return of the writ, the respondent filed its answer and objections to the petition with its reasons for refusing to furnish the information and the Commission filed and served its objections to respondent's answer and objections in the form of a general demurrer.

It appears from the papers filed that the Federal Trade Commission bases its authority and demand for the information sought on a resolution passed by both Houses of Congress and approved by the President on August 27, 1935 (Public Resolution 61—74th Congress) "Authorizing the Federal Trade Commission to make an investigation with respect to agricultural income and the financial and economical conditions of agricultural producers generally," for the purpose of enabling Congress "to consider whether new legislation should be enacted or existing legislation amended on any of the subjects referred to." The resolution is somewhat lengthy and it is unnecessary to set it forth here in full. It required the Commission to make an investigation to ascertain the facts with regard to the causes of the unequal distribution between the farmer and others of the income from the principal farm products, particularly as to the existence of certain supposed causes of this condition which are described in the resolution as concentration of control, combinations and monopolies, price fixing and manipulation. Included in the preamble of the resolution is the following:

Whereas it is charged that through the payment of high and excessive salaries and other devices said middlemen, warehousemen, processors, manufacturers, packers, and others escape just taxation by the United States, that said salaries tend unduly to diminish the tax revenues of the United States and tend to burden and restrain interstate and foreign commerce in farm products, and to divert and conceal the earnings and profits of the concerns paying said salaries, and that by various devices those receiving said salaries escape their just share of Federal taxation * * *.

and the Commission was directed to investigate and report upon the salaries received by the officers of such companies and

The extent to which said corporations avoid income taxes, if at all, and the extent to which officers receiving such salaries paid income taxes thereon. (Section 1, 49 Stat. 930.)

On September 19, 1935 the Federal Trade Commission, purporting to act pursuant to the authority of this Resolution, resolved to "investigate and report at the next session of Congress" upon the matters referred to in the Resolution, and on February 4, 1936 the National Biscuit Company received from the Federal Trade Commission two questionnaires designated as Schedule A-7 and Schedule B. At the head of each of these schedules was the following:

This schedule is called for under the terms of Section 6 (a) of the Federal Trade Commission Act, copy of which is annexed, and of S. J. Resolution 9, 74th Congress, First Session, approved August 27, 1935, authorizing and directing the Federal Trade Commission to investigate and report at the next session of Congress the extent of the increases or decreases in recent years in the income of principal corporations engaged in the sale, manufacturing, warehousing, and/or processing of the principal farm products and of other principal sellers * * * compared with the decline in agricultural income including the amount and percentage of such changes, etc., copy of which is enclosed.

Your attention is directed to Section 10 of the Federal Trade Commission Act providing penalties for false reports and for failure to file reports.

No charge of any violation of law by the National Biscuit Company was made in either of the questionnaires which was the only notice respondent received as to the subject and purpose of the inquiry.

The petition alleges and the return admits "that National Biscuit Company directly and through numerous corporations owned and controlled by it, has been purchasing, producing, manufacturing, selling, distributing, transporting, and shipping, in, from, to and through the several States in and in connection with commerce among the States, substantial quantities of food products, farm products, and products made from farm products, that is to say, wheat, flour, sugar, molasses, milk, butter, cheese, [669] eggs, raisins, peanuts, bread, biscuits, cakes, crackers, and other bakery products and other commodities to petitioner unknown." But in the return respondent alleges "that in addition to the business therein described a large and substantial portion of respondent's business, such as, the manufacturing and processing of the commodities and products which it sells and the sales of products within the confines of a single State, is purely intrastate in character and has no direct effect upon intrastate commerce or the interstate business conducted by respondent."

In its answer and objections to the petition, respondent alleges:

13. That the compulsory disclosure of the confidential information which petitioner seeks to exact from the respondent, including the dissemination in the trade of said information relating to respondent's business with particular customers and to respondent's total volume of business, would place respondent at a distinct disadvantage in competing with its business rivals and in dealing with its customers and would otherwise impose a great hardship on respondent in excess of the legitimate public purpose, if any, to be served by the disclosure of said information.

It is also alleged that respondent has been at all times and is now ready and willing to answer the questionnaires involved in this proceeding on the condition that the information in such answers would not be disclosed to the public or to competitors or customers of the respondent, but that the Federal Trade Commission has as yet been unable or unwilling to assure respondent that said information would be confidential.

The schedules received by the National Biscuit Company in substance called for the following information:

SCHEDULE A-7

(Bread and Bakery Products)

Question (1) The number of barrels of wheat flour purchased in the year 1935 from each of various types of distributors such as brokers, mill agents, wholesale grocers, jobbers, including own flour mills.

Question (2) The names and addresses of the five principal companies in each group from whom you purchased wheat flour during the period reported in Question (1).

Question (3) The amount of your purchases of wheat flour in the year 1935 in quantities and dollars from each of a list of companies including General Mills, Inc., Pillsbury Flour Mills and others, and then your purchases from all other companies, the total being your total wheat flour purchases in quantities and dollars.

Question (4) The quantity of bread in pounds and the net dollar sales of all other bakery products sold in the year 1935 to each of various types of customers including chain stores, cooperative and voluntary chains, etc., and then sales to all other types of consumers, the total being your total sales of bread and all other bakery products in the year 1935.

Question (5) The names and addresses of the five principal companies in each of certain groups of distributors to whom you sold wheat flour bread in the year 1935 and the amount of net sales in quantities and dollars sold to each.

On April 1, 1936 respondent supplied the Federal Trade Commission with the information requested in this schedule with the exception of that called for in Questions (4) and (5).

SCHEDULE B

(Manufacturers and/or Processors of Farm Products)

Question (1) List of all subsidiary companies included in your report.

Question (2) The quantity and dollar value of all wheat flour, other flour, wheat and other materials purchased in the year 1935 and the quantity and dollar value of the portion thereof resold without further processing.

Question (3) Net sales of bread, flour and wheat in quantities and dollars and the net dollar sales of all other products for the year 1935 divided according to whether sold without further processing or whether manufactured or processed by you.

Question 3 (A) Cost of products bought and resold without further processing or manufacturing and then your net cost of materials entering into manufactured products sold.

Question (4) Names of predecessor companies whose data are included in following questions 5 to 9 inclusive.

Question (5) Consolidated balance sheets of your company and subsidiaries for the years 1914, 1917, 1920, 1923, and 1926, and net sales for the same periods.

Question (6) Amounts of capital stock and bonds at par value issued in each of [670] the years from 1914 to 1935 inclusive and the purpose for which the same were issued.

Question (7) The amounts of additions to and deductions from surplus and the causes thereof in detail in each of the years 1914 to 1935 inclusive.

Question (8) Consolidated Assets and Liabilities in detail including all subsidiary companies, controlled companies and predecessor companies for the years 1928 to 1935 inclusive.

Question (9) Consolidated Income and Expense Statements in detail including all subsidiary companies, controlled companies and predecessor companies for the years 1929 to 1935 inclusive.

Question (10) Name, position, annual cash salary and other compensation paid to each officer of the corporation for the years 1929 to 1935 inclusive.

On May 8, 1936 respondent returned to the Federal Trade Commission Schedule B, having answered all the questions in that schedule except Questions (3) (3A), (5), and so much of Question (9) as called for information with respect to the amount of total sales and total cost of goods sold, and Question (10).

The respondent contends that the compulsory disclosure of information now demanded would constitute an unreasonable search and seizure in violation of the Fourth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States; that the Congress has not authorized the Federal Trade Commission to demand, or this court to compel the disclosure of this information involved in this proceeding; also that the questions which respondent have not answered have no direct connection with interstate commerce or with any violation of law, and that the questions concern respondent's intrastate as well as its interstate activities.

The respondent also takes the position that from the Commission's refusal to assure respondent that any of this information now sought will be used confidentially, it is to be inferred that the Commission will, or at least is likely, to publish all of it and that respondent knows of no means of preventing the Commission from doing so, if it obtains the information.

Taking up first the question whether Congress has authorized the Commission to compel the disclosures to be made. Section 4 of the Joint Resolution provides:

For the purpose of carrying out this resolution the Federal Trade Commission, the Attorney General, and the courts of the United States shall have and may exercise all of the powers and jurisdiction severally conferred upon them by the Act entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved September 26, 1914.

Section 6 (a, b) of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U. S. C. A. § 46) provides that it shall have power—

Investigation of corporations.—(a) To gather and compile information concerning, and to investigate from time to time the organization, business, conduct, practices, and management of any corporation engaged in commerce, excepting banks and common carriers subject to the Act to regulate commerce, and its relation to other corporations and to individuals, associations and partnerships.

Reports by corporations.—(b) To require by general or special orders, corporations engaged in commerce, excepting banks, and common carriers subject to the Act to regulate commerce, or any class of them, or any of them, respectively, to file with the commission in such form as the commission may prescribe annual or special, or both annual and special reports or answers in writing to specific questions, furnishing to the commission such information as it may require as to the organization, business, conduct, practices, management, and relation to other corporations, partnerships, and individuals of the respective corporations filing such reports or answers in writing. Such reports and answers shall be made under oath, or otherwise, as the commission may prescribe, and shall be filed with the commission within such reasonable period as the commission may prescribe, unless additional time be granted in any case by the commission.

Section 9 of the Act (Title 15 U. S. C. A. § 49) in the fourth paragraph provides—

Upon the application of the Attorney General of the United States, at the request of the commission, the district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus commanding any person or corporation to comply with the provisions of this subdivision of this chapter or any order of the commission made in pursuance thereof.

Respondent takes the position that the power of the commission to compel information must therefore be limited to disclosures relating to breaches of the law which occur in or which directly affect interstate commerce. This, I think, is not so. On the contrary, it seems to me that the Joint Resolution reflects the intention of the Congress to authorize the Commission to exercise similar powers for the purpose of securing the desired information relevant to the various named subjects on which legislation is contemplated. Unless the Congress intended to give the Commission additional power for the purpose of securing the information, Section 4 of the Joint Resolution was unnecessary, for the Commission already had authority to demand the facts relating to a breach of the law.

It was alleged in the petition and admitted in the answer that respondent was engaged in interstate commerce in a substantial degree in the various commodities.

The Fourth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States is not violated by Congress conducting an inquiry and compelling the production of testimony concerning matters on which it is essential that Congress be informed in order to frame legislation. McGrain v. Daugherty, 273 U. S. 135.

The Joint Resolution stated "that the Congress should consider whether new legislation should be enacted or existing legislation amended on any of the subjects hereinbefore described and in aid thereof should be informed on all of said subjects."

Certainly burdens on interstate commerce, monopolies and taxation referred to in the Joint Resolution, are subjects under the control of the Congress and upon which it is entitled to information. It is true that the facts requested do include some information regarding respondent's activities that are not solely interstate, but the presumption is that the Congress intends to make use of all the facts obtained in aid of legislation affecting interstate commerce only. In the judgment of the Congress the information requested does directly relate to interstate commerce and lack of such relation is not so clearly non-existent as to justify the court in saying to the contrary. This is a matter for the Congress to decide, at least in the first instance. Stafford v. Wallace, 258 U. S. 521.

To support its position respondent relies largely upon Federal Trade Commission v. American Tobacco Co., 264 U. S. 298. But in that case the question was—has the Federal Trade Commission an unlimited right to obtain the books and records of a corporation with reference to a possible existence of unfair competition in violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act? Any question regarding the power of the Congress to obtain information for legislative purposes was eliminated, and the writs of mandamus seem to have been denied on the ground that the demands were too broad and not only included records and papers that were relevant, but those which clearly were not. In the case at bar the demand is for information deemed by the Congress to be relevant to future legislation on subjects within its jurisdiction.

Accordingly, I think the writ of mandamus must be allowed.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. GEORGE ZIEGLER
COMPANY¹

No. 6045

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Seventh Circuit. February 18, 1937)

Consent decree affirming Commission's order in 19 F. T. C. 394, requiring respondent to cease and desist use of lottery schemes in merchandising its candies, as in said order and decree below set forth

Mr. W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel, Federal Trade Commission, Mr. Martin A. Morrison, Ass't Chief Counsel, Mr. Henry C. Lank, and Mr. James W. Nichol, Special Attorneys, for petitioner.

Mr. Leo W. Slensby, of Milwaukee, Wisc., for respondent.

SPARKS, Circuit Judge:

The Federal Trade Commission, petitioner herein, having filed with this Court on, to wit, October 3, 1936, its application for the enforcement of an order to cease and desist issued by it against the respondent, under date of November 20, 1934, under the provisions of Section 5 of an Act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, entitled "An Act to create a Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes" (38 Stat. 719, 15 U. S. C. A. Sec. 45); and said petitioner, having also certified and filed herein, as required by law, a transcript of the entire record in the proceeding lately pending before it, in which said order to cease and desist was entered, including all the testimony taken and the report of said petitioner; and respondent having subsequently filed its answer to said application for enforcement, in which answer respondent stated it was not willing to contest said application for enforcement or the proceedings based thereon, and in which answer said respondent consented that this Court might, upon said application and respondent's answer thereto, and upon the pleadings, testimony, and proceedings set forth in the transcript aforesaid, make and enter its decree affirming said order to cease and desist and commanding respondent, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, to comply therewith—

¹ Reported in 60 F. (2d) 1007.

Now, therefore, it is hereby ordered, adjudged and decreed, That said order to cease and desist, issued by the Federal Trade Commission, petitioner herein, under date of November 20, 1934, be and the same hereby is affirmed.

And it is hereby further ordered, adjudged and decreed, That the respondent, George Ziegler Company, its officers, agents, representatives, and employees, in the manufacture, sale, and distribution in interstate commerce of candy and candy products, do cease and desist from:

(1) Selling and distributing to jobbers and wholesale dealers, for resale to retail dealers, or to retail dealers direct, candy so packed and assembled that sales of such candy to the general public are to be made or may be made by means of a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

(2) Supplying to or placing in the hands of wholesale dealers and jobbers, or retail dealers, packages or assortments of candy which are used, without alteration or rearrangement of the contents of such packages or assortments, to conduct a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise in the sale or distribution of the candy or candy products contained in said package or assortment to the public.

(3) Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy, for sale to the public at retail, pieces of candy of uniform size, shape, and quality, having centers of different colors, together with larger pieces of candy, which said larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring a piece of candy with a center of a particular color.

(4) Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy, for sale to the public at retail, bundles or packages of candy wafers of uniform size, shape, and quality, containing wafers of different colors, together with larger pieces of candy, which said larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to the purchaser procuring a bundle or package containing a wafer of a particular color.

(5) Packing or assembling in the same package or assortment of candy, for sale to the public at retail, pieces of candy of uniform size, shape, and quality, some of which contain within their wrappers printed slips bearing the word "winner", together with larger pieces of candy, which said larger pieces of candy are to be given as prizes to purchasers procuring a piece of candy containing said printed slip within the wrapper thereof.

(6) Furnishing to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers, display cards, either with packages or assortments of candy or candy products, or separately, bearing a legend or legends, or statements informing the purchaser that the candy or candy products are being sold to the public by lot or chance, or in accordance with a sales plan which constitutes a lottery, gaming device, or gift enterprise.

(7) Furnishing to wholesale dealers, jobbers, and retail dealers, display cards or other printed matter for use in connection with [1008] the sale of its candy or candy products, which said advertising literature informs the purchasers and purchasing public:

(a) That upon the obtaining by the ultimate purchaser of a piece of candy with a particular colored center, a larger piece of candy will be given free to said purchaser.

(b) That upon the obtaining by the ultimate purchaser of a particular colored candy wafer, a larger piece of candy will be given free.

(c) That upon the obtaining by the ultimate purchaser of a piece of candy containing within the wrapper thereof a printed ticket, a larger piece of candy will be given free to said purchaser.

And it is hereby further ordered, adjudged and decreed, That the Respondent, George Ziegler Company, within 60 days after the service upon it of a copy of this decree, shall file with the Federal Trade Commission a report in writing setting forth in detail the manner and form in which it has complied with this decree.

NATIONAL SILVER COMPANY v. FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ¹

No. 199

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit. March 1, 1937)

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—FINDINGS OF COMMISSION—PETITIONS TO REVIEW—COURT'S DUTY.

In proceeding to review and set aside a cease and desist order of the Federal Trade Commission, court must examine record to ascertain whether commission's findings are supported by evidence (Federal Trade Commission Act, sec. 5, 15 U. S. C. A. sec. 45).

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—PREREQUISITES TO VALIDITY—MERITS, COMMERCE AND PUBLIC INTEREST.

To sustain cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission, it is essential to find that methods used are unfair and that they are used in interstate commerce [426], and that the proceeding instituted for cessation thereof is in the interest of the public.

TERMINOLOGY—"SECTIONAL OVERLAY" FOR SILVERWARE.

Finding of Federal Trade Commission that term "sectional overlay" used in association with silverware means a quality mark denoting additional value in silverware held conclusive where supported by evidence.

¹ Reported in 88 F. (2d) 425. The case before the Commission is reported in 22 F. T. C. 730.

MISREPRESENTING—AS “UNFAIR METHOD OF COMPETITION.”

Misleading representation of product constitutes “unfair method of competition” within statute giving Federal Trade Commission power to prevent use of unfair methods of competition.

MISREPRESENTING “SECTIONAL OVERLAY” FOR SILVERWARE NOT OVERLAID—OF PURCHASER NOT PREJUDICED RE ACTUAL VALUE OR QUALITY.

Where term “sectional overlay” was stamped on silverware which was not overlaid, and purchasers were induced to purchase because product was represented as sectionally overlaid, statute regarding unfair method of competition was violated, even if purchaser did not lose actual value or quality by reason of the false representation.

MISREPRESENTING—“SECTIONAL OVERLAY” FOR SILVERWARE NOT OVERLAID—WHETHER CURED, IF PRESENCE OF ABSENCE EVIDENT TO EYE—PURCHASER’S DUTY OF CRITICAL INSPECTION.

Manufacturer’s stamping of term “sectional overlay” on pieces of silverware which were not overlaid, could not be condoned, even if sectional overlay is visible to naked eye, since purchaser is not by law charged with duty of making critical inspection of product to be guided by his own judgment.

MISREPRESENTING—“SECTIONAL OVERLAY” FOR SILVERWARE NOT OVERLAID—CUSTOM IN SETS, WHERE ONLY STAPLES OVERLAID, AS CURING.

Alleged recognized custom of stamping a set of silverware with word “overlay” where the staples only were in fact sectionally overlaid held insufficient excuse for manufacturer’s stamping of term “sectional overlay” on ornamental pieces which were not overlaid.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—“SECTIONAL OVERLAY” FOR SILVERWARE NOT OVERLAID—ABANDONMENT OF PRACTICE—WHERE VALIDITY DISPUTED AND NO ASSURANCE OF PERMANENT ABANDONMENT.

Where manufacturer asserted legal right to use misleading designation “sectional overlay” on pieces of silverware which were in fact not overlaid, and did not give assurance that there would be permanent discontinuance of such practice, cease and desist order of Federal Trade Commission would be enforced notwithstanding manufacturer had discontinued practice.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—ABANDONMENT OF PRACTICE—AS DEFENSE TO ENFORCEMENT.

A mere discontinuance of unfair competition method is not defense and is not sufficient to deny enforcement of cease and desist order, particularly where party ordered to cease and desist insists it has right to continue.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS—“SECTIONAL OVERLAY” FOR SILVERWARE NOT OVERLAID—PUBLIC INTEREST.

Proceeding by the Federal Trade Commission directing corporation engaged in the sale of silverware to cease and desist representing through the use of the term “sectional overlay” that silverware sold by the company had extra deposits of silver at points of wear, when such was not the case, held authorized under the act as in the public interest.

(The syllabus, with substituted captions, is taken from 88 F. (2d) 425).

On proceeding on petition of National Silver Co., to review cease and desist order of Commission, order sustained.

Brill, Bergenfeld & Brill, of New York City (Mr. Abraham Brill, Mr. Frank F. Bergenfeld, and Mr. Herbert Baer Brill, all of New York City, of counsel), for petitioner.

Mr. W. T. Kelley, Chief Counsel, Federal Trade Commission, Mr. Martin A. Morrison, Assistant Chief Counsel, Federal Trade Commission, and Mr. John Darsey and Mr. James W. Nichol, Special Attorneys, all of Washington, D. C., for respondent.

Before MANTON, AUGUSTUS N. HAND, and CHASE, Circuit Judges.

[427] MANTON, Circuit Judge:

This petition seeks a review of an order by the respondent directing the petitioner, who is engaged in the sale of silverware, to cease and desist "Representing through the use of the term 'sectional overlay' or any term, word or phrase of like import or meaning, in advertisements or printed matter or in stamping or branding of its said silverware, or in any other manner whatsoever, that said silverware has extra deposits of silver at the points of wear, where such is not the case."

In this proceeding, pursuant to § 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act (38 Stat. 719, 15 U. S. C. A. 45), the Commission found on sufficient evidence that "in promoting the sale of its 'Martha Washington' pattern of silverware, the respondent (petitioner) caused the quality mark or words 'sectional overlay' to be stamped on each and every piece of said pattern, when in truth and in fact the ornamental pieces of said sets of silverware did not have an extra deposit of silver at the points of wear so as to be properly represented, designed or referred to by the quality mark 'sectional overlay.'"

The Commission further found that through long usage, the term "sectional overlay" used in association with silverware had become known by the trade and purchasing public to mean an extra deposit of silver at the points of wear and that it indicated a quality mark denoting additional value in the silverware. It found that the practice of the petitioner in stamping the term "sectional overlay" upon its ornamental pieces of silverware was misleading, had the capacity and tendency to deceive purchasers into buying what they did not intend to buy. Moreover, that in so doing, the petitioner placed in the hands of wholesalers or retailers the means of deceiving ultimate purchasers; that the petitioner thus unfairly competed in trade in interstate commerce to the prejudice of the public in violation of § 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Pursuant to § 5, petitioner filed this petition seeking to set aside the order. Our duty therefore is to examine the record to ascertain whether the findings are supported by the evidence. F. T. C. v. Curtis Pub. Co., 260 U. S. 568; F. T. C. v. Paramount Famous-Lasky

Corp., 57 F. (2d) (C. C. A. 2). To sustain the order of the Commission, it is essential to find that the methods used are unfair and that they are used in interstate commerce and that the proceeding instituted for a cessation thereof is in the interest of the public.

Petitioner admits it is engaged in interstate commerce. We therefore inquire into the evidence of unfair competition and public interest. The Commission found "sectional overlay" to mean in the trade a quality mark denoting additional value in silverware. This finding, supported by evidence, is conclusive. F. T. C. Act, § 5; F. T. C. v. Winsted Hosiery Co., 258 U. S. 483; F. T. C. v. Algoma Lumber Co., 291 U. S. 67. Misleading representation of a product constitutes an unfair method of competition within the intent of § 5. F. T. C. v. Winsted Hosiery Co., supra; Indiana Quartered Oak Co. v. F. T. C., 26 F. (2d) 340 (C. C. A. 2), cert. den. 278 U. S. 623.

On this record, it is established that the petitioner who sells silverware in interstate commerce caused its silver known as the "Martha Washington" pattern to be manufactured with all pieces stamped "sectional overlay." Its sets are known as staples and ornamental pieces. Its staples were in fact overlaid but its ornamentals were not. Letters and words stamped on ornamental pieces which are not overlaid tend to mislead purchasers. Buyers testified to being so misled. If a purchaser is induced to purchase because petitioner's product is represented as sectionally overlaid, that violates § 5 even if the purchaser did not lose actual value or quality by reason of the false representation. F. T. C. v. Algoma Lumber Co., supra; F. T. C. v. Balme, 23 F. (2d) 620 (C. C. A. 2). Indeed, even where the purchaser benefits by the deception it is misleading. See Pillsbury v. Pillsbury-Washburn Flour Mills Co., 64 Fed. 841 (C. C. A. 7). But it is shown by the evidence that the term "sectional overlay" indicated to the public additional value and increased use and permanency of the article. Petitioner's contention that the sectional overlay is visible to the naked eye is disputed. At any rate, each purchaser is not by law charged with the duty of making a critical inspection of the petitioner's product to be guided by his own judgment. Indiana Quartered Oak [428] Co. v. F. T. C., supra. See Florence Mfg. Co. v. Dowd, 178 Fed. 73, 75 (C. C. A. 2).

An alleged recognized custom to stamp a set of silverware with the word "overlay" where the staples only were in fact sectionally overlaid is urged as an excuse. Witnesses, both dealers and purchasers, testified that, except in the instance of very few manufacturers, they did not stamp ornamental pieces "sectionally overlaid". The petitioner's conduct cannot be condoned. The petitioner argues that the custom was changed when the code authority under the N. I. R. A. established a new standard of industry and that since December 1933 it has not stamped staples or ornamental pieces "sectionally overlaid". Even if this were so, since the petitioner asserts the legal right to use its misleading designation, it is the continuing duty of the Commission to issue and of the court to affirm and enforce an order to cease and desist. Here, there is no assurance that there would be a permanent discontinuance. Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. F. T. C., 258 Fed. 307 (C. C. A. 7); Fox Film Corp. v. F. T. C., 296 Fed. 353 (C. C. A. 2). A mere discontinuance of the unfair competition method is no defense nor is it sufficient to deny the enforcement order particularly where the petitioner insists it has the right to continue. F. T. C. v. Wallace, 75 F. (2d) 733 (C. C. A. 8); Guarantee Veterinary Co. v. F. T. C., 285 Fed. 853 (C. C. A. 2).

Clearly this proceeding is in the public interest and well within the requirement of the Act. F. T. C. v. Balme, supra.

Order sustained.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION v. PACIFIC STATES
PAPER TRADE ASSOCIATION ET AL.¹

No. 8227

(Circuit Court of Appeals, Ninth Circuit. March 17, 1937)

Order, on petition of Commission, for rule requiring Pacific States Paper Trade Association et al., to show cause why they should not be adjudged guilty of contempt and punished for violation of court's decree of May 2, 1927, in proceeding in Pacific States Paper Trade Association et al. v. Federal Trade Commission, No. 4217, and on arguments of counsel and stipulation re submission, that proceedings be dismissed as to certain respondents, that petition be modified, and that other respondents be adjudged guilty of contempt and fined, as in said per curiam order below set forth.²
